ASSEMBLY TO RAISE SIX LAW POINTS AGAINST ANDERSON

Cuvillier Outlines Plan for Inquiry on Anti-Saloon League and Its Superintendent.

TO INVESTIGATE LOBBYING

Corrupt Practices and General Corporation Acts and State Constitution Figure.

ANDERSON RESENTS MUZZLE

Says He Would Prefer Prison to Silence Imposed by "Tammany-Barnes Coalition."

Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier, who introduced in the Assembly the resolution calling for the investigation of the Anti-Saloon League and its State Superintendent, William H. Anderson, gave out a statement at the Hotel Belmont yesterday afternoon in which he declared that the question of prohibition itself had no place in the investigation to be conducted by the Judiciary Committee, which will concern itself solely with whether or not there was a violation of the legislative and penal law and also of the Constitution of New York State. He announced six different questions to be determined by the committee, which will begin its investigations as soon as the trial of the five Socialists has been completed.

" The astounding statement of William H. Anderson, Superintendent in New York for the Anti-Saloon League," said Mr. Cuvillier, " in attacking the Catholic Church on the eve of the investigation of Anderson and the Anti-Saloon League by the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly of his and its unlawful exercise of authority contrary to the legislative and penal law and the Constitution of New York State, for a number of years in lobbying in behalf of prohibition, intimidating, threatening, supporting and defeating candidates for members of the Legislature who would not pledge themselves to support prohibition and all he stood for is the act of a hypocrite, bigot and fanatic."

Six Questions to Decide.

After asserting that the sole question under the resolution of investigation was the violation of the law and that the question of prohibition would have no place in the consideration of the committee in passing on " the question of Anderson and the Anti-Saloon League's guilt." Mr. Cuvillier announced the questions to be determined by the committee. They are:

First—Did Anderson and the league violate the legislative law as to lobbying?

Second—Did Anderson and the league violate the Corrupt Practices act?

Third—Did Anderson and the league violate the General Corporation law?

Fourth — Did Anderson and the league violate the Constitution of the State of New York in coercing, intimidating and having candidates for members of the Legislature to pledge themselves in writing to the Anti-Saloon League that if the league would give their support to the candidate they would pledge themselves to support and vote for prohibition, and if the league exacted promises in writing of candidates and those who pledged themselves to the league that the league supported said candidates with money for the election of said candidates to the Legislature, and those candidates who refused to sign or give such pledge to the league, the league expended money to oppose the candidate's election to the Legislature?

Fifth—Did Anderson and the Anti-Saloon League intimate and coerce members of the Legislature to vote for the confirmation or rejection of candidates for public office nominated by the Governor of the State or the Legislature if said candidate so nominated favored prohibition?

Sixth—The source and disposition of the money collected by the Anti-Saloon League, if it was used for secret political ends, and if the Anti-Saloon League is amenable under the law for its unlawful acts.

" I do not want to prejudice or embarrass the trial of the five Socialists," Mr. Cuvillier said in concluding his statement, " but I can assure Mr. Anderson and the Anti-Saloon League that when the Socialist trial is over he will have ample opportunity to defend himself and the Anti-Saloon League before the Judiciary Committee, but there will be such a revelation as to the unlawful acts and usurpation of authority in violation of the law and Constitution of this State that Mr. Anderson and the Anti-Saloon League will never again exercise such authority and control over elective representatives. The time had come when the legislative branch of this Government had to protect itself and its dignity from such sordid and unscrupulous men as Anderson and the Anti-Saloon League."

Mr. Cuvillier returned to Albany last night. He said that he thought the investigation by the Judiciary Committee would begin in about ten days.

Anderson Refuses to be " Muzzled."

William H. Anderson told a congregation at the Marcy Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, last night that while he did not expect to go to prison as a

League Council Called To Discuss Russian Mission

PARIS, March 6.—A formal call by the allied Supreme Council for an extraordinary meeting of the Executive Council of the League of Nations, to be held at Paris on March 12, for examining the question of sending an investigating committee to Russia, under the control of the League, has been issued.

LONDON, March 6.—The commission which it is expected the League of Nations Executive Council will decide to send to Russia will consist of ten members, it is understood.

France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan and Belgium will supply five of the members, each selecting its own representative. The Council will decide which of the smaller nations shall be represented on the commission.

MAJORITY FAVORS SIMS ON AWARDS

Says Navy Morale Has Been Hurt—Criticises Honors to Men Who Lost Ships.

MINORITY DEFENDS DANIELS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Reports of the Senate Naval Affairs sub-committee which investigated the controversy between Admiral Sims and Secretary Daniels over the award of naval honors, brought acutely to the public attention by the refusal of Admiral Sims and other officers to accept the awards given them, were made public tonight.

The majority report, signed by Senators Hale, Poindexter and McCormick, criticises the general policy of awarding honors to commanders who lost their ships, although it finds that where such commanders displayed heroic service they should not be made ineligible for honors.

This point formed one of the bitterest issues between Admiral Sims and Secretary Daniels, and centred upon the fact that Secretary Daniels ignored the recommendations of the board in the case of Commander D. W. Bagley, his brother-in-law. Commander Bagley lost his ship in peculiar circumstances, and was recommended by Admiral Sims and the Knight Board for a Navy Cross. Secretary Daniels awarded him a Distinguished Service medal.

That the controversy may end satisfactorily to officers and men in the navy, the majority recommends that the report of the reconvened Knight Board, now in session, be followed. The board was reconvened late in December, after Admiral Sims attacked the awards, and began its sessions on Jan. 5. Its report is expected in the next few weeks, and Secretary Daniels has indicated his intention to accept its recommendations as final.

Two minority reports, made by Senators Pittman and Trammell characterize the investigation as a " tempest in a teapot," and as unnecessary. The former held that the proper policy to pursue was to delay the final awards until the report of the reassembled Board of Awards.

The Republican members of the committee declare that the policy of awards of Mr. Daniels has injured temporarily the morale of the navy. If the policy of Secretary Daniels in making awards to those who lost their ships is followed, the majority report concludes, it will be detrimental to the navy.

Majority Report on Awards.

The majority report, signed by Senators Hale of Maine, Poindexter of Washington and McCormick of Illinois, says in part:

" The whole purpose of the sub-committee throughout the hearings and in its report has been not to decide the personal differences between officers of the navy or between officers of the navy and officials of the Navy Department, but to assist in arriving at a settlement of the question of awards in the navy which shall be for the best interests of the navy. Many officers and men of the navy have performed signal and heroic services during the world war. That these officers and men shall receive recognition proportionate to their service is the sincere desire of the sub-committee.

" The statute providing for awards in the navy, which it is stated in the foregoing circular of the Bureau of Navigation was the department's bill, leaves to the President the right to grant the awards, restricting them, however, to services of an especial kind. In view of the fact that these restrictions are not as definite as might have been the case, it is the opinion of the sub-committee that an interpretation by the Secretary of the Navy of his understanding of the statute and the course which he meant to pursue in granting the awards, or, in other words, an outline of his policy, would have been helpful to the various officers of the navy in making up their recommendations for awards. Especially would an outline of the policy of the Secretary of the Navy in regard to the importance of sea duty as compared with shore duty have been helpful, and it is the belief of the sub-committee

BOLSHEVIKI START BIG OFFENSIVE ON POLISH FRONT

Large Russian Forces Repulsed with Heavy Loss, Berlin Report Says.

PILSUDSKI SCORNS MENACE

FINNS SMASH RED LINE

LONDON, March 7.—Large forces of Bolsheviki have opened an offensive against the Poles on both sides of the Pripet region, says a dispatch to the Central News from Berlin.

The dispatch adds that the Poles report the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses.

HELSINGFORS, March 6.—The Finnish General Staff has received news that the White troops in the Murman region have penetrated the lines of the Bolshevist forces and are now approaching the town of Repola.

Advices from Helsingfors received Saturday reported that the Bolsheviki had begun a new attack on Finland, attacking the Finnish positions at Sutjervi after a heavy artillery bombardment on Wednesday.

General Pilsudski Defiant.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, March 7.—" Poland wants peace and is willing to discuss it, but we refuse to be forced to that discussion by threats of the Red army," was the statement of General Pilsudski, the Polish Chief of State, to the Petit Parisien correspondent at Warsaw. He continued:

" At first I thought the Bolsheviki would negotiate with us peacefully, without arrière pensée. I wished to enter the discussion with the same frankness and had no intention of taking advantage of our favorable position to support our arguments by force of arms. I did not want peace imposed by our guns and bayonets.

" Unfortunately, what I see of the Bolsheviki gives me the impression that they don't want a really pacific peace, but to force peace from us by the threat of their fists, as they did with the Esthonians. I am not a man to be treated like that. I, too, can talk strongly and can be enraged if there is an attempt to impose upon me by threats. I am convinced that Poland shares my feelings. We will not make peace under pressure of threats. We want either a pacific peace freely accepted or war.

" I am aware that the Bolsheviki are concentrating large forces on our front. But they are mistaken if they think to frighten us thus and offer us a sort of ultimatum. Our army is ready and I have full confidence in it. If it is threatened it can threaten in turn.

Says Propaganda Will Fail.

" Nor do I fear the famous Bolshevist propaganda which seems such a bugbear for so many people. It won't 'take' with Poland. There may be some local trouble but it is impossible to create a general revolutionary movement for the reason that we are too near Russia and can judge for ourselves just what the results of the Communists experiments have been. Even the most radical elements in Poland are horrified by the abysm into which the Bolsheviki plunged Russia.

" Bolshevist propaganda may try to profit from a certain internal uneasiness hard to avoid in the present economic situation, but it can never impose the Communist system. Countries more distant may believe in the beauty of Lenin's régime, but we are too near. Our minds are made up. We are terrified by the horrible situation caused by Bolshevism in Russia.

" We know that Russia will never be able to furnish Europe with the wheat that is expected. When one has wheat one doesn't die of hunger, and in many of the Soviet departments they are literally dying of hunger. Statistics show that in the last year the population of many provinces has diminished by 13 per cent. The infantile mortality is such that a whole generation is being sacrificed to the Communist theories of Lenin and Trotzky.

" If Russia wishes to continue her fatal experiment, it is her affair. For her part Poland will never agree to commit suicide by trying the taste of Communism. Now that we are free we hold life too dear to risk losing is in pursuit of vain chimeras."

Asked his opinion of the allied policy toward Russia, General Pilsudski's face darkened, and he replied:

" The worst of all policies is the policy of zigzag. Poland cannot adjust herself to that. In her geographical position she has need to see clearly and cannot follow a policy whose line is variable."

Border State Conference Today.

WARSAW, March 7 (Associated Press) —A formal conference to frame the answer of Poland and the border States to the Soviet peace proposals will open Monday, but preliminary meetings already have been held by the military chiefs to consider thoroughly the plans made previously for defensive warfare in the event the peace negotiations fail. May Soon Permit Trade With Firms in Soviet Russia

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Virtual decision has been reached by the American Government, it is said, to permit resumption of trade relations with Soviet Russia as soon as the allied Governments have outlined a definite policy.

Action by this Government, it is further said, will be limited merely to an official statement of approval of trade with individuals by American firms, and it will not involve either recognition of the Soviet Government or approval of trade directly with the Soviet Administration.

In some quarters it is explained that the Government doubts very seriously the successful consummation of schemes for the exploitation of Russia independently of the Soviet Government and that sanction of trade with individuals in Russia will be extended more as an experiment than through any confidence that such a privilege in practice may prove feasible.

ALLIES PREPARE TO OVERAWE TURKS

Military Demonstration at Constantinople Said to be Under Consideration.

BRITAIN MAY TAKE LEAD

American Participation Is Desired—Paris Hears Turks Will Give Up Marash.

LONDON, March 6.—The proposed allied military control of Constantinople is not to be an occupation in the sense which that term usually implies, according to the Peace Conference plans, which, however, have not as yet been fully matured. (A London dispatch which was filed later than this message, but passed it in transmission and was received last night, announced the dispatch of a note by the Allies to the Turkish Government the terms of which were understood to be drastic, and to be followed by drastic action, should that prove necessary.)

The idea of the conference, it is indicated, is to impress upon the Turks that the world will not tolerate massacres such as those of the Armenians in Cilicia last month. This has been unsuccessfully attempted through threats from the conference that unless the massacres ceased, the peace terms for Turkey would be much more severe than otherwise, and now the Allies plan to make some sort of military demonstration at Constantinople. Just what form this shall take is understood not to have been decided, but a speedy decision is expected, as Great Britain, France and Italy are agreed that quick action is necessary to save hundreds of lives.

The Allies have enough troops in Turkey to control Constantinople, if it should be necessary to resort to force, but the allied Premiers are believed to be convinced that this necessity will not arise. They are of the opinion, it appears, that when the Turkish Government finally comes to the conclusion that the Allies mean business the situation will be considerably clarified. This is the first point in the plan of the conference.

Some reinforcements for the allied troops in Turkey arrived on the scene this week, and more will follow. The weather conditions in Cilicia are unfavorable at present for the starting of new military operations, but the Allies are agreed that it is absolutely necessary for the French to retrieve quickly and at any cost their recent losses in Cilicia, as the view in conference circles is that the Turks undoubtedly think that the Allies are tired of fighting and that their notes and warnings have little backing.

As outlined, the plan is to show the Sultan that this is not the case, no matter how distasteful further military activities may be now to any of the Allies.

What the conferees really would like, according to the reports of statements at the meetings here, is for the United States to augment its naval forces in Turkish waters, but there seems to be little expectation that this can be brought about.

Although the Premiers are not attending the sessions just now, the Peace Conference, as it is now constituted, has full powers to rearrange the outline of the Turkish treaty within a fortnight, but the conferees are not planning to hurry with the document, now that the reports of the massacres have been confirmed. Their attitude is that the Turks must conform to the European interpretation of civilized government before any treaty is handed to them.

Chronicle Argues for Military Action.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, March 8.—The Daily Chronicle remarks that the military occupation of Constantinople would not in itself constitute a new policy, inasmuch as that city has been virtually dominated by allied troops and ships since the armistice came into force, in order to keep watch and ward against breaches of its terms, just as the armies of occupation are on guard on the Rhine.

" Surely," says The Chronicle, " there is no sane person in this country who imagines that if Turkey should break the armistice or should directly flout the Allies by committing atrocities upon our protégés we should not exert that pressure at Constantinople itself, which

PUT TREATY HOPE IN SLIGHT CHANGE IN BI-PARTY PLANK

Senators Still Working for Compromise Think Lodge Will Accept It.

BUT DOUBT WILSON'S STAND

Debate on Remaining Reservations Will Be Cut Short to Concentrate on Article X.

STRAUS URGES CONCESSIONS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The Peace Treaty situation has now assumed a phase where this week may see the final outcome.

The generality of opinion is inclined to regard the treaty as in its dying throes as far as the United States is concerned. But hope is still maintained by a limited number of observers that it may receive a new lease of life pending a compromise on Article X. that will enable the necessary two-thirds of the Senate to ratify it with its inclusive League of Nations covenant.

This hope arises from the fact that a few individuals, rather than any combination of individuals, stand in the way of ratification. Upon their disposition the fate of the treaty rests. If they are unyielding, the United States will be prevented from entering the world league with all the dangers that this isolation will bring to the nation.

On the one hand is President Wilson, ill, unable or unwilling to take counsel with those who have his interests as much as the interests of the country at heart. On the other hand is Senator Lodge, with his ability to control sufficient votes, in fact, a majority, in the Senate, to prevent or permit ratification of the covenant and the treaty. Another factor is Senator Hitchcock, leader of the Administration forces in the Senate, but his influence in the situation is more or less dependent upon the attitude of the President.

Uncertain as to Wilson's Ideas.

In the Senate yesterday it was indicated that Senators were very much in the dark as to what President Wilson's position was or would be toward the latest efforts to bring ratification of the covenant. Everything said on the floor went to show that no headway had been made in the endeavor to put the critical Senate situation before the President with the object of obtaining his views as to certain proposals designed to bring a compromise on the covenant, or if there were failure to reach that end, map out the course the Senate should follow to clarify the anomalous relations between the United States and Germany, which would remain technically at war if the treaty failed of ratification.

How to build something constructive out of this situation, that is, how to overcome the embarrassment that will be the lot of the United States if the present situation continues or ends in the failure of the treaty, is the problem to which those who see danger ahead for America are bending their most earnest efforts.

From all accounts received here the sentiment of the country is in favor of the ratification of the covenant with reservations. The main thing in the minds of the people seems to be that peace with Germany should be effected and the United States enter the League of Nations. It is understood that many members of the Administration share this view.

The responsibility for the existing unsatisfactory conditions is placed mainly between President Wilson and Senator Lodge. There is reason to believe, judged by what is said by well-informed Senators, that the reservations in Article X., the great obstacle to harmony, would be accepted by the Senate if a change of a few words were inserted in the bi-partisan reservation to that article presented to the Senate by Mr. Hitchcock.

Senator Lodge is said to be willing to accept the bi-partisan reservation on Article X. if these few words are inserted, or, at the least, it is believed by many Republican Senators that he would be induced to yield to their inclusion. It was being asserted by Democratic Senators yesterday that Senator Glass, close friend of the President and former member of his Cabinet, believed the President would accept this bi-partisan proposal.

Proposed Change on Article X.

The words that could be inserted in the reservation to make it acceptable to Senator Lodge, according to what is said by Senators, are " or any other means," so as to make the reservation read:

" The United States assumes no obligation to employ its military or naval forces, or any other means, to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country under the provisions of Article X., or to employ the military or naval forces of the United States under any other article of the treaty for any purpose, unless in any particular case the Congress, which, under the Constitution, has the sole power to declare war, shall, by act, or joint resolution, so provide. WILSON ISSUES NEW ADRIATIC WARNING; HINTS WE MAY NOT FOLLOW ALLIES IF THEY DISCARD DECEMBER TERMS

POLK MAKES REPLY PUBLIC

President Again Declares Opposition to the Treaty of London.

CONCILIATORY AS TO FIUME

BUT NOT AT ALBANIA'S COST

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—President Wilson's reply of March 4 to the note of Feb. 26, in which the British and French Premiers invited him to join them in a formal proposal to the Italian and Jugoslav Governments to negotiate a mutual Adriatic agreement on the basis of a withdrawal of all previous proposals, was made public tonight by Acting Secretary of State Polk.

While President Wilson notes with satisfaction the desire of Premiers Millerand and Lloyd George to reach an equitable solution in conformity with " the principles of the Peace Conference " and of the " legitimate though conflicting aspirations " of the Italian and Jugoslav peoples, he refuses to consent to the withdrawal of the joint memorandum of Dec. 9 in which England, France and the United States agreed on a plan for the settlement of the Adriatic problem. Surprise is expressed by the President that the British and French Premiers should have found in his willingness to leave the settlement of common frontiers in the Fiume region to mutual agreement between Italy and Jugoslavia any ground for suggesting the withdrawal of the Dec. 9 plan for settlement.

The President has replied that he " could not possibly join " in the withdrawal of the Dec. 9 plan. He feels that that project represents the deliberate and disinterested judgment of the British, French and American Governments, after months of earnest discussion, that it is much more than " a mere exchange of views," and must be regarded as " a statement of principles " and remain, " as it was intended to be, the basis of reference respecting the combined opinions of these Governments."

Demands Consideration for Albania.

The President reiterates his willingness to abandon the idea of a buffer State of Fiume if Italy and Jugoslavia can reach a mutual agreement to abandon that plan and on the marking of their common frontier in the Fiume region, provided they are also willing to limit the proposed free State to the " corpus separatum " of the City of Fiume. But this must be done, the President insists, without prejudice to the territorial and other interests of any third nation. The position is also taken by the President that Albanian questions should not be included in the proposed joint discussion between Italy and Jugoslavia, and he repeats with emphasis that " he cannot possibly approve any plan which assigns to Jugoslavia in the northern districts of Albania territorial compensation for what she is deprived of elsewhere."

The President deals vigorously with that part of the recent note of the British and French Premiers, in which they assert that if the suggestion for adjusting the Adriatic question should fail of mutual agreement between Italy and Jugoslavia, and if, after such failure, it should be found impossible to reach a speedy settlement, there would be no recourse left other than application of the Treaty of London. The President informs the Premiers that there was no reason why the Treaty of London should have been kept secret from the United States after it had entered the war. The Premiers had justified the secret character of the treaty on grounds of military exigency. The treaty was not disclosed to the United States Government after it had entered the war, and was not brought officially to the attention of President Wilson or Secretary Lansing until they went to the Peace Conference.

Not " Bound by Secret Treaties."

Dealing with this aspect of the Treaty of London, the President's newest note declares " that he is unable to find in the ' exigencies of military strategy ' sufficient warrant for exercising secrecy with a Government (the United States Government, which was intimately associated with the signatories of the Treaty of London in the gigantic task of defending human freedom and which was being called upon for unlimited assistance and for untold treasure. The definite and well-accepted policy of the American Government throughout its participation in the deliberations of the Peace Conference was that it did not consider itself bound by secret treaties of which it had previously not known the existence."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The text of President Wilson's reply, dated March 4, to the last memorandum by the Prime Ministers of France and Great Britain on the Adriatic question, reads:

> The President desires to express his sincere and cordial interest in the response of the French and British Prime Ministers received on Feb. 27. He notes with satisfaction their unaltered desire to reach " an equitable solution, in conformity alike with the principles of the Peace Conference and of the legitimate, though conflicting, aspirations of the Italian and Jugoslav peoples." He further welcomes their expressed intention, regarding certain essential points, " to urge upon the Governments interested that they should bring their desires into line with the American point of view."
> The President is surprised, however, that they should find in the statement of his own willingness to leave to the joint agreement of Italy and Jugoslavia the settlement of " their common frontiers in the Fiume region " any ground for suggesting the withdrawal of the joint memorandum of Dec. 9. In this he could not possibly join. The memorandum represents deliberate and disinterested judgment after months of earnest discussion. It constituted more than a mere exchange of views; it was a statement of principles and a recapitulation of the chief points upon which agreement had been reached. There was thus afforded a summary review of these points of agreement of the French, British and American Governments, and the memorandum should remain, as it was intended to be, the basis of reference representing the combined opinion of these Governments.
> In referring to the "common frontier in the Fiume region," the President had in mind the express desire of the two interested Governments to abandon the project of the free State of Fiume, as defined in the memorandum of Dec. 9. If, as he understands, the Government of Italy and the Government of the Serb-Croat-Slovene State prefer to abandon the so-called buffer State, containing an overwhelming majority of Jugoslavs, and desire to limit the proposed free State to the corpus separatum of Fiume, placing the sovereignty in the League of Nations, without either Italian or Jugoslav control, then the Government of the United States is prepared to accept this proposal and is willing, under such circumstances, to leave the determination of the common frontier to Italy and Jugoslavia.
> In this connection the President desires to reiterate that he would gladly approve a mutual agreement between the Italian and Jugoslav Governments reached without prejudice to the territorial or other interests of any third nation. But Albanian questions should not be included in the proposed joint discussion of Italy and Jugoslavia, and the President must reaffirm that he cannot possibly approve any plan which assigns to Jugoslavia in the northern districts of Albania territorial compensation for what she is deprived of elsewhere. Concerning the economic outlets for Jugoslavia in the region of Scutari suggested in the note under reply, the President desires to refer to the memorandum of Dec. 9 as making adequate provisions to meet the needs of Jugoslavia.
> Regarding the character and applicability of the Treaty of London the President is led to speak with less reserve on account of the frank observations of the French and British Prime Ministers. He is unable to find in the " exigencies of military strategy " sufficient warrant for exercising secrecy with a Government which was intimately associated with the signatories of the Treaty of London in the gigantic task of defending human freedom and which was being called upon for unlimited assistance and for untold treasure. The definite and well-accepted policy of the American Government throughout its participation in the deliberations of the Peace Conference was that it did not consider itself bound by secret treaties of which it had previously not known the existence. Where the provisions of such treaties were just and reasonable, the United States was willing to respect them. But the French and British Prime Ministers will of course not expect the Government of the United States to approve the execution of the terms of the Treaty of London, except in so far as that Government may be convinced that those terms are intrinsically just and are consistent with the maintenance of peace and settled order in Southeastern Europe.
> The absence of an American representative with plenary power is to be regretted, and may have been a source of inconvenience, but the President can recall several instances where decisions in the Supreme Council were delayed while the British and French representatives sought the views of their Governments, and he is convinced that time would have been saved and many misunderstandings avoided if, before actual decisions had been reached and communicated to the Italian and Jugoslav delegations, this Government had been given sufficient indication of the fact that the British and French Governments intended radically to depart from the memorandum of Dec. 9.
> In conclusion the President desires to express his concurrence in the view of the British and French Prime Ministers that a speedy settlement of the Adriatic question is of urgent importance. But he cannot accept as just the implied suggestion of his responsibility for the failure to reach a solution. He has merely adhered to the provisions of a settlement which the French and British Governments recognized as equitable in the joint memorandum of Dec. 9, and has declined to approve a new settlement negotiated without the knowledge or approval of the American Government, which was unacceptable to one of the interested Governments and which, in his opinion, was in direct contradiction of the principles for the defense of which America entered the war.
> These views he has fully explained in his note of Feb. 10, and he ventures to express the earnest hope that the allied Governments will not find it necessary to decide on a course which the American Government in accordance with its reiterated statement will be unable to follow.

CARSON ASKS ULSTER TO TAKE HOME RULE

Urges Unionists Council to Withdraw Its Opposition to Bill Before the Commons.

LONDON, March 8.—In addressing the Ulster Unionist Council last Friday, Sir Edward Carson recommended that Ulster abandon its opposition to the Irish Home Rule bill and accept the bill now before Parliament, says The Daily Mail today.

The newspaper describes this as the most important development in the Irish situation in many years and says it is bound to have a profound and far-reaching effect.

After the meeting Sir Edward and the other delegates returned to their respective districts to consult the local associations on the decision which is to be taken at another meeting of the council to be held in Belfast on Wednesday.

" In view of the leader's advice," The Daily Mail continues, " it is hoped the new bill will be accepted substantially by Ulster, but it is possible the council will recommend the inclusion of the whole of the province in the area of the northern parliament, instead of six counties.

" Sir Edward Carson said it must be remembered that the Home Rule act of 1914 was on the statute books and that unless an amending measure was passed it would automatically come into force the day peace was officially declared, and then Ulster would be placed under the control of the Dublin Parliament."

CHAMBERLIN HOTEL DESTROYED BY FIRE

OLD POINT COMFORT, Va., March 7.—The Chamberlin Hotel, a famous tourist resort, erected by permission of Congress on the Government reservation at Fort Monroe, was destroyed late today by fire which started in a room on the ground floor. So rapid was the spread of the flames that in two hours nothing was left but scanty ruins.

It was impossible tonight for the police to ascertain definitely whether there had been loss of life. A fireman reported that in the early struggle with the flames, while he was directing a stream of water into an upper window, he heard screams from within.

Another fireman said he saw an elderly man and woman appear at a window which was almost instantly obscured by smoke and that he did not see them again.

In the confusion and sudden alarm the hotel register either was forgotten and burned or was locked in the hotel safe.

Army officers at the fort and the hotel management declared that so far as they had been able to ascertain there was no loss of life. There were about 200 guests at the Chamberlin, which had in all 170 employes, not all of whom, however, were at work when the fire started.

Mrs. M. L. Schimert of New York City, a guest, is said to have lost nearly $100,000 worth of jewels and clothing.

he said he might be forced to consider seriously the withdrawal of the treaties from the Senate, and expresses "the earnest hope that the allied Governments will not find it necessary to decide on a course which the American Government, in accordance with its reiterated statement, will be unable to follow."

If such a course is pursued by the British and French Governments it is believed that the President will not hesitate to withdraw the treaties pending before the Senate.

LAGUARDIA ASSAILS WILSON.

Accuses Him of Unforgivable 'Meddling and Muddling' in Adriatic.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 7.—A bitter attack on President Wilson for his attitude on the Adriatic problem characterized an address made here today before a State meeting of the Sons of Italy by F. H. LaGuardia, President of the New York Board of Aldermen.

"The last spiteful note of the President on the Adriatic question shows that he represents not the justice-loving American people, but rather the selfish arrogance of himself," he declared. "Meddling and muddling in the affairs of other nations is not the will of the American people, and President Wilson's action in so doing is unforgivable."

SAYS D'ANNUNZIO MUST GO.

No Adriatic Solution Possible with Him in Fiume, Protitch Avers.

BELGRADE, March 6.—The Adriatic problem will remain unsolved so long as Gabriele d'Annunzio remains in Fiume according to Stoyan Protitch, the new Jugoslav Premier, who read the declaration of the Cabinet to the Provisional National Assembly here today.

"The military insurrection of d'Annunzio and his bands at Fiume," said the Premier, "has created an illegal and abnormal situation both for Italy and ourselves. It will be impossible to reach a solution of the Adriatic question as long as this illegal and abnormal situation obtains at Fiume."

ITALIAN SOCIALIST PLANS.

Section of Party at Present Seeks Power Through Legislative Action.

ROME, March 7.—"Our program includes general demolition, but it does not stop there, because we also intend to reconstruct," said a Socialist Deputy today outlining the attitude his party intends to take at the next session of the Chamber.

"We do not consider this the most favorable moment to realize some of our radical changes," he continued. "It is for this reason we did not adhere to the movement of the anarchist element which has nothing to lose, and perhaps something to gain in case of a thoughtless uprising.

"The antagonism between the anarchists and Socialists has daily grown more acute, having as the effect to strengthen that section of our party which is ready to follow the lead of Deputy Turati, who maintains that in the present stage of social evolution we should conquer all possible advantages for the proletariat through legislative action, working together with those political men who, although being outside the Socialist Party, can accept and carry out a part of the Socialist program."

The presence of Signor Giolitti in Rome while Parliament is not sitting, which is so contrary to his habits, is causing a good deal of talk. His friends deny that he wishes to resume power, but they admit he "might be forced to do so by circumstances." Should this come about he would undoubtedly be supported by the Socialists, his supporters going so far as to hope that Turati, Treves and Modigliani might be ready to enter his Cabinet.

This event, however, is most unlikely, as the majority of the Socialist Party is against participation in the Government, and even if one of their members could be induced to enter the Ministry he would be expelled from his group. Isolated, he could count on no votes. In fact, they argue that he would no longer be a Socialist. It would, they say, be a repetition of what happened to Bissolati, who had to form another group, which is not in itself strong enough to accomplish anything.

Deputy Turati, interviewed on the situation, said he did not think it was in the interest of the Socialist Party or its duty or right to assume the Government of Italy, much less permit its members to collaborate with a bourgeois Cabinet, unless events forced it to do so and this he would consider a great misfortune.

"Once the Socialists have risen to power," he said, "masses would either repudiate them or demand the moon. No one, much less the Socialists, should they assume power, could work the miracle of immediately inverting the terms of exportation and importation, instantly restore the currency to its true value, augment production and decrease superfluous consumption.

"On the other hand, I believe the Socialist party can with clear ideas and united, determined will, exercise a decided propulsion primarily in the interest of the proletariat, but fundamentally of the vital common interests of society. The chief outlines of Socialism are: War on war, general disarmament, the open door, free trade, easy international exchange of raw materials, and co-operative humane administration of colonies.

"Whatever leads to the destruction of the national barriers of antagonism is looked upon with favor by the Socialist party."

PUT TREATY HOPE IN BI-PARTY PLANK

Many of those intimately concerned in the treaty situation regard the words "or any other means" as constituting a very slight change which could be accepted without any surrender of principle.

One comment on this opinion is in the form of a question: "Then why doesn't Senator Hitchcock propose the change to Senator Lodge and end the ugly tangle over the covenant?" But this would still leave President Wilson to be reckoned with. Another view is advanced on the consideration that Mr. Lodge, as the leader of the largest group in the Senate, has a greater responsibility for the defeat or salvation of the treaty than the President or Mr. Hitchcock and could better afford to make the concession. It is claimed in certain quarters that the failure of Mr. Lodge to take this action will place upon him and his following the responsibility for the defeat of the treaty.

The President's weakened physical condition due to his long illness enters into every aspect of the treaty situation. That some consideration should be shown to him on account of his lowered vitality has been suggested occasionally in the course of the five months of his confinement. He has made concessions to the sentiment for reservations, and in fact his letter to Senator Hitchcock of Jan. 26, in which he gave his views on compromise proposals, is viewed in some circles as amounting to a surrender to the Senate opposition. To make a further concession to the President involving no great principle, even if it were based upon consideration for the tenacity of a sick man, would bring to Senator Lodge, it is held, the credit of saving the treaty and contributing in great measure to the only practical method suggested of preventing future wars.

Such is the view of Oscar S. Straus, former Ambassador to Turkey and a member of President Roosevelt's Cabinet. Mr. Straus has been foremost in the effort to bring about the formation of a League of Nations. He was one of the delegates of the League to Enforce Peace sent to Paris during the formation of the League covenant and was instrumental through his advice and personal influence in bringing about the acceptance of that document by the varied interests concerned. He was also the presiding officer of the two meetings held in Washington, the first in January and the second last month, at which representatives of twenty-seven national organizations claiming to represent fifty million American citizens adopted resolutions addressed to President Wilson and the Senate urging the ratification of the League covenant with any reservations that did not require the resubmission of the Peace Treaty to the signatory powers.

Holds Differences Are Unimportant.

Mr. Straus, who is in Washington as a member of the President's Industrial Commission, said today that he, in common with many others who were deeply interested in the League of Nations, was unable to understand the fine points of difference on proposed Senate reservations that were responsible for the failure to bring about ratification. The discussion of them, he said, seemed to him to be about as important and as valuable as discussion of the question of how many angels could dance on the point of a needle. He was unable to say, therefore, why the present differences could not be adjusted.

The view that Senator Lodge holds the key to the situation in the Senate and has it in his power to kill or save the League of Nations was espoused by Mr. Straus. For that reason he contended that the greatest measure of responsibility for the outcome of the treaty controversy was Mr. Lodge's. It was evident from what he said that he felt that Mr. Lodge could well afford to accept the bipartisan reservation to Article X., even if in so doing he seemed to be making a material concession to President Wilson's ideas.

"To make the treaty and the League a campaign issue would be deplorable," said Mr. Straus. "The animosities of the campaign would be certain to bring into the discussion the attitude of European nations, with the result that wounds would be made that would remain open for a long time and would injure our relationship with other countries. Furthermore, it would be two years before the Senate or the Congress elected in the campaign with the treaty as an issue could carry out what would seem to be the mandate of the people on that issue. It has been stated frequently that the delay would be only one year, but as a matter of fact it would be two years before anything definite could be accomplished. This delay, I think, would be deplorable.

"If there should be any referendum on the treaty it should be after and not before ratification. For the whole body of the American people to attempt to pass upon the treaty and the covenant before ratification would confuse the whole question."

In Mr. Straus's view danger to the Monroe Doctrine is another thing that must be taken into consideration if the United States should fail to enter the League. His idea is that with the A B C powers of South America and other Latin-American countries associated with the great powers of the world in a combination to which the United States was not a party, this country would lose the benefit of the strength given to the doctrine as a national policy of the United States through the interest which they have in upholding that policy. Their interest in their own preservation would be none the less, but they would be dependent upon the powers with which they are associated in the League of Nations more than upon the United States. The League covenant recognizes the Monroe Doctrine as a domestic policy of the United States, but this was, of course, conditioned upon the apparent certainty that this Government would become a member of the League. The main thought in Mr. Straus's mind in this connection was that with the United States out of the League and the Latin-American countries in it their political association with the United States would be severed.

Mr. Straus also made the point that the statement of the Secretary of the Navy before the House Navy Affairs Committee yesterday to the effect that it would be necessary for the United States to construct and maintain a tremendous fleet if it did not become a member of the League of Nations showed the urgent necessity for our entrance into the League. He thought the whole situation surrounding the likelihood of treaty rejection was full of danger to the United States and that those who had the power to make ratification possible or impossible would be held to a strict accountability and would be obliged to take their share of responsibility for wars that could be prevented through the instrumentality of the League.

Final Vote Expected This Week.

WASHINGTON, March 7 (Associated Press).—Various methods of hastening action on the Peace Treaty were discussed at conferences among Republican and Democratic Senators today as a result of the apparently universal sentiment of the leaders that nothing in the direction of compromise would be gained by further delaying the decisive vote.

It was said that no final conclusions were reached, though it was predicted in some quarters that tomorrow's session would see a formal agreement to limit debate on the six reservations which remain to be disposed of under the present program before the Senate gives its attention to Article X. It generally is conceded that by the decision on this article the treaty will stand or fall, and all of the leaders have said they were anxious to get through with details and start the fight on the main issue.

The plan of the irreconcilable opponents of ratification to move to sweep all the other reservations aside and take up Article X. tomorrow may be abandoned if some other method of hastening the final vote is agreed upon. The Republican leaders have taken the position that to break up the order of business and consider Article X. before its time would require a two-thirds vote, and the irreconcilables concede that even with Democratic co-operation they would not muster such a majority. Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the Republican leader, favors going ahead with the other reservations first, but is understood to be ready to make an agreement to hurry the debate.

It was the general feeling tonight that in any eventuality the debate probably would be brought to an end and a ratification vote taken some time during the present week.

FEAR WILSON'S VETO ON TURKISH TREATY

French Officials Disturbed by Reports That He Will Oppose Settlement.

RISK OF LONG-RANGE ACTION

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

PARIS, March 6.—French official circles have been much stirred today by reports that President Wilson intended to record his disapproval of the tentative decision of the allied Premiers to leave the Sultan in Constantinople. They predict a difficult diplomatic situation if he sends a note asking the Allies to reverse themselves.

While it is true that no formal announcement of decisions regarding Turkey has been made, the French Foreign Office is quite positive that the three Premiers are in accord on the maintenance of Ottoman authority at the Sublime Porte under allied supervision. Such a settlement would meet the wishes of the French, and naturally they are disturbed at the prospect of its being overturned.

When Mr. Wilson sent his sharp note of Feb. 10 pointing to the possible withdrawal of the United States from European settlements, carrying with it the killing of the Treaty of Versailles, the allied Premiers modified their attitude, but not before they had drafted and almost dispatched a note different in tone from the conciliatory document they finally sent.

In the Adriatic case Mr. Wilson's argument was based largely on the existence of the Dec. 9 agreement, by which England, France and America decided against doing what Premier Lloyd George ultimately proposed to do. But in regard to Turkey there is no such agreement. The whole Turkish settlement is in the making. It is true that the Allied Premiers know that when Mr. Wilson seriously considered America's taking a mandate for Constantinople he favored evicting the Sultan from his capital; but since America is apparently not going to accept a mandate, the Allies argue that the whole aspect of the situation is changed. They hold that Constantinople with America as its guardian and Constantinople without such guardianship are not the same.

The point to be made is this: The policy of Washington toward European affairs produced friction in the Adriatic affair. If Washington acts similarly, there will be friction in the Turkish settlement, and there will be friction every time President Wilson seeks to correct an allied decision which he does not take part in making. That friction is inevitable so long as negotiations are conducted as at present.

If there were no allied councils; if all pending matters were adjusted by long-distance exchange of diplomatic notes, it would be different. But, with close-range contact of the Allies in reaching decisions, the absence of an American representative and the assumption by Washington of the power of review, friction between the United States and Europe seems bound to continue.

Premier Nitti has gone to Rome. Reports from London say that he carried an agreement which he had reached with M. Trumbitch, the Foreign Minister of Jugoslavia. But at Jugoslav hadquarters here it is stated that no agreement has been reached.

Washington is also probably interested in the report that the Allies have awarded Bessarabia to Rumania. The American peace delegation always opposed this step. Will Washington now agree to it, or will it oppose the decision of the Premiers?

that had such a policy been announced, fewer changes would have been necessitated in making up the list of awards.

"The sub-committee finds that in making the awards no attempt was made to ascertain from the officers making the recommendations the relative merit of the cases recommended, and that the question of relative merit was not considered as it should have been. This the sub-committee regards as most unfortunate. It is of the opinion that the commanding officer of a ship is best qualified to pronounce upon the relative merits of the officers and men on his ship, that the Admiral of a fleet is best qualified to judge of the relative merits of the ship commanders under him and also the members of his staff; that the Admiral in command of a station is best qualified to judge of the relative merits of the officers and men under his command; and that the same principle applies from commanders to subordinates throughout the navy. Had such a policy prevailed in the granting of awards under the statute, the sub-committee is of the opinion that the men most entitled to awards would have received them, and that if it had been found necessary to cut down the number to receive awards the least deserving men would have been the ones to be left out.

"The sub-committee is of the opinion that the failure to employ some such system in making awards has been hurtful to the morale of the navy and has to a certain extent depreciated the value of the awards made. That the injury to the morale of the navy will be permanent, the sub-committee does not believe. The sub-committee believes that the spirit of the navy is such that it will rise above any temporary blow to its morale.

Loss of Ship an Obstacle.

"The sub-committee cannot too strongly condemn the practice of giving awards to the navy officers who have lost their ships, unless in such cases they shall have shown such marked heroism or such signally distinguished service as shall have made them eligible for awards in spite of the loss of their ships. The sub-committee does not believe that because of the loss of their ships the commanding officers are necessarily ineligible for reward, but it does believe that in each such case these officers are on the defensive, and instead of the loss of their ships being taken as an opportunity where an award may be given it is an obstacle, though not necessarily an insurmountable obstacle, in the way of an award. In all such cases of the loss of a ship, before an award should be given, the commanding officer should have rendered at least as high, if not a higher degree of distinguished service, or of heroism, as in the cases of other officers who had not lost their ships.

"The sub-committe does not believe that the Secretary of the Navy intended to award medals to commanding officers of ships which were lost in the war merely because their ships were lost, but it does believe that the Secretary did not require of these men a sufficient degree of distinguished service or of heroism to warrant the awards given them in some of the cases contained in his report for the year 1919, and it further believes that the Secretary has been more zealous in furthering the interests of commanders who have lost their ships than of other commanders who instead of losing their ships have destroyed or damaged the ships of the enemy. The sub-committee is therefore firmly of the opinion that the policy laid down by the Secretary of the Navy in regard to awards to commanders who have lost their ships, in his letters of Dec. 19 and Jan. 13, will be detrimental to the United States Navy.

"It (the sub-committee), hopes that the Board of Awards will be given full discretion to change or to continue any of its former recommendations according to the latest evidence which shall be in its hands, and that the board will not be bound by the findings published in the Report of the Secretary of the Navy for the year 1919.

"It further hopes that the board will give especial attention to deserving cases among the enlisted men of the navy and of the Merchant Marine who may be eligible under the statute. In many instances owing to the lack of explicitness in the statute as to its application to the enlisted men of the navy and also to the length of time that had elapsed between the armistice and the making of the recommendations by the commanding officers and the consequent inaccessibility of the records, the services of the enlisted men of the navy have not received the recognition which they undoubtedly deserve."

Minority Reports Defend Daniels.

Two minority reports carefully review the testimony and discuss the half dozen cases to which Admiral Sims registered objections.

After discussing the merits of Admiral Sims's recommendations and the action of the Knight Board, Senator Pittman takes up the award of a Distinguished Service Medal to Commander D. W. Bagley, Secretary Daniels's brother-in-law, who lost his ship. Senator Pittman says:

"Admiral Sims did recommend a special reward to Commander D. W. Bagley. He recommended the award of a Navy Cross. This is but a slightly lesser honor than a Distinguished Service Medal. Is it possible that Admiral Sims does believe that the granting of a Distinguished Service medal to Bagley, under the circumstances, instead of the Navy Cross that he recommended, can destroy the morale of the navy?"

Senator Pittman reached these conclusions:

"That the investigation by the sub-committee was entirely unnecessary, because at the time of the appointment of the committee the entire matter, by direction of the Secretary of the Navy, was being reinvestigated by the Knight Board of Awards.

"That the investigation, like most Congressional investigations of this character, has served no beneficial purpose, but, on the contrary, in my opinion, through the airing of the personal grievances of an admiral and in giving publicity to critical and deprecatory statements made by the admiral with regard to the accomplishment of the American Navy during the great war, has tended to besmirch a glory that was never before questioned.

"That Admiral Sims is sincerely convinced that no naval board is competent to review and act upon any recommendation made by him; that the changing in the slightest degree of any award to any officer made by him is so grave an error that it would be better that no medals be awarded at all; that he believes that the awarding of the Distinguished Service Medal should be limited to a few of the highest officers in the navy, and that it has been cheapened by being awarded to so many junior officers and enlisted men.

"That the whole dispute has developed into a tempest in a teapot and is too ridiculous to be mentioned in connection with the morale of a fighting navy.

"That the expressed determination of the Secretary of the Navy to hold open the matter of permanent awards until reports concerning enlisted men and fuller reports concerning officers can be obtained, considered and acted upon by the Naval Board is the proper policy to be pursued."

Senator Trammell approached the hearing in about the same way as his Democratic colleague and concluded that the law was not mandatory and specific and allowed freedom of choice to the Secretary of the Navy. He criticised the officers for not recommending some enlisted men, as, in his opinion, some of them performed service entitling them to distinguished recognition.

As to the point of dispute whether an officer who lost his ship should be honored, Mr. Trammell said that the testimony showed that the Board of Awards and Secretary Daniels both held that some award should be made to those who lost their boats, the only difference being the degree of distinction.

"As to the effect upon the morale of the navy," says Mr. Trammell's report, "as a result of the manner in which the awarding of medals has been conducted, it is my opinion, as far as the testimony discloses, that the morale has not been seriously impaired. Doubtless some individuals have been displeased on account of having their hopes shattered and their pride of opinion wounded, but these are individual cases, and the testimony did not disclose that there is any general dissatisfaction prevailing throughout the navy."

FOUR HOUR DAY AS CURE-ALL

Pamphlet Gives Every One Job, by Doubling Needed Workers.

The four-hour day as a panacea for all economic and industrial ills, and as the one step that will solve the alleged unemployment problem, destroy the middle class and precipitate the final conflict between the wage earner and the capitalist which is sure to result in that millennium, the "Co-operative Commonwealth," is offered in a pamphlet just out, entitled "The Four-hour Day." A publisher's note says that it is to be published quarterly. The address given is "Franklin Titus, General Delivery, New York City."

Among the arguments for the short day is that "the four-hour day will give everybody a job because it will take twice as many to do the work."

SAY VILLA HELD UP TRAIN, KILLING 33

ONE AMERICAN A PRISONER

Attackers Set Fire to Train and Number of Passengers Are Said to Have Perished.

EL PASO, March 7.—Francisco Villa commanded the bandits who held up and robbed the northbound Mexico City passenger train near Corralitos last Thursday, when thirty-three persons were killed and several held for ransom, including one American, according to passengers who reached Chihuahua City today.

According to passengers the train was stopped by an explosive placed on the track, which derailed the locomotive. A pitched battle ensued between fifty Yaqui soldiers of the train guard and Villa followers to the number of 300, commanded by Francisco Villa in person. Nineteen soldiers, four civilians and ten bandits were killed when the fighting ended with the retirement of a sub-lieutenant and six Yaquis, all of the train guard who remained unwounded.

Villa then herded the passengers to a nearby hill, threatening them with death. Apolinar Rivalcaba, train conductor, and Jesus Garvia, Pullman conductor, were killed, the latter by a shot from Villa's pistol.

An American, Joseph Williams, an employe of the American Smelting and Refining Company, and M. Nassar, an Arabian passenger, were held for ransom, while another American, R. W. Black, was not detained.

After vainly attempting to open the express car safe the bandits set fire to the train.

Before leaving Villa harangued the passengers, telling them he was not a bandit, but that he was fighting for civil liberty and to avenge the death of General Felipe Angeles. In the course of his talk he said trains would not be permitted to run.

It is reported that a number of passengers hidden in the cars were burned to death when the train was destroyed, but this is not confirmed.

At the El Paso office of the American Smelting and Refining Company it was said that no report of the capture of Williams had been received.

Military officials in Jauarez said they had no official report of the train hold-up. They explained the interruption of train service for the last two days as being due to shortage of equipment caused by northbound trains being caught behind bridges burned by rebels south of Chihuahua City.

BUDAPEST, March 6.—The train over the Simplon route, connecting Paris and Bucharest through Agram and Szegdin, has not put in an appearance at Szegdin for five days, according to advices from the last named place.

It is reported there that the operation of the train had been stopped because of grave disorders at Agram, where Croatian soldiers were said to have mutinied, objecting to alleged Serbian domination.

CAN CUT TWINS APART.

Simple Operation Would Separate Philippine Boys, Doctors Say.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 7.—Dr. J. H. Sebby and Dr. H. W. Ploggmeyer, two surgeons formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, have found that a simple operation could be performed to separate Lucio and Simplico Godino, "the Philippine twins," who are in Washington under the guardianship of Theodore R. Yangco, the Philippine Commissioner.

An X-ray photograph taken by the surgeons indicated that the two boys are entirely normal, except that their tissues are joined at the base of the spinal column. No bony "bridge" was found, it is said. With nothing but a muscular wall joining the two bodies the separation is regarded as comparatively simple.

The boys were brought to Johns Hopkins Hospital last June for observation and the prospect of cutting them apart furnished an absorbing study for almost every surgeon at the institution.

It was felt, since the twins now are 11 years old, that a decision should be reached one way or the other before they developed into manhood. Plans of the surgeons, however, were upset by the unwillingness of the guardians of the twins to consent to an operation. In their present condition the twins have an earning capacity in sideshows, and attempts from various quarters to obtain permission to separate them have met invariably with refusal.

RED FLAGS BEDECK WAR-WORN PSKOV

HOUSES WRECKED FOR FUEL

Cross Streams of Pedestrians Seem Listless and Impassive, but Country Scenes Are Cheerful.

By ARTHUR E. COPPING.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, March 7 (Dispatch to the London Daily Chronicle). — Entering Pskov one had the impression of humdrum streets from which arose many churches—clusters of cupolas conspicuous and Eastern, pleasing to the eye. Passing a sort of picturesque gallows from which icicles were hanging we descended a slope to a broad, smooth highway, which although paved now with over six feet of solidity, was in warmer months a river of ripples and boats and little leaping fishes.

Towering overhead on the right was an imposing metal bridge which, when we had passed underneath and left it behind us, was seen to have sustained grievous injury. That elevated thoroughfare in fact stopped short of reaching the opposite embankment and below the gap one saw upper portions of the missing steel span protruding through the ice. When, last year, the Reds took Pskov the evacuating force blew up a section of the bridge to safeguard their westward withdrawal.

An unseasonable thaw had ended. The ice and snow covering was hard and crisp, and sunny touches of blue in the heavens imparted certain buoyance to one's spirits which, however, circumstances were not destined to sustain.

Presently we had mounted the further bank and, having skirted picturesque stretches of a Fifteenth Century wall, we entered the town proper.

This was anything but a cheerful place with its streets of neglected, dirty-looking houses, its lack of shops or anything in the way of animation, whether of commerce or industry, and its sluggish rivulets of pedestrians seeming individually so listless and impassive. A bandstand and some of the wooden houses were seen to be in process of disintegration for fuel, most of the light boarding within easy reach having been torn away.

Many Red Flags in Evidence.

Peering among passers-by I saw some pinched, white faces, while nearly everybody's clothing appeared to be coarse and dilapidated. But let me confess that what pleased me least and fascinated me most were red flags which protruded from many upper windows. Bunting is usually bright and sprightly, but these flags were dingy and ragged looking, being manifestly home-made, even to the dye, which in a few cases had been washed out, leaving the fabric grayish.

But in thus looking with critical, unfavorable eyes upon these ruddy emblems, I was conscious of mental bias, military and social. In my Archangel and Murmansk experiences the red flags were symbolical of the bloody-minded rascality we believed we were fighting. In captured towns and villages the red flag was something we were in the habit of triumphantly taking down. But here, in Pskov, it hung secure, and a curious sense of being powerless in the enemy's hands competed with remembrance. But I had crossed the frontier voluntarily and was being treated with the utmost kindness by the authorities whom the red flag represented.

My eyes looked coldly on the red drapery. I was much better pleased with a red inscription boldly displayed upon a house front. It proclaimed that illiteracy was the worst inheritance of Czardom, and it was impossible to shut one's eyes to the fact that if Russia's new Government intends, as I am assured is the case, to redress the lamentable omission thus referred to, it is assured at any rate in one respect of the world's approval.

On further studying the traffic as we glided on through other streets I noted some new facts. Young children were plump, complacent and warmly clad, and some of the older children, particularly two groups of girls about 15 or upward, wore dresses that looked smart, serviceable, and brand new.

The general aspect of Pskov was depressing. I knew better than to hold the revolution responsible. A town does not endure five and a half years of war without having the sparkle and animation knocked out of it. Reaching the railway we found a train awaiting us alongside the platform.

A Bolshevist View of Things.

Not yet had I settled comfortably into my compartment when there arrived to make my acquaintance a young Russian Jew, who spoke English perfectly, thanks to long exile in America, and who proved to be full of good spirits and revolutionary enthusiasm. Nor had many minutes elapsed before he was expressing his jaunty hope that the whole world would soon follow Russia's example. He pointed out that because the iniquitous social, commercial and political inequality in Russia had warranted a drastic remedy, that was no reason for trying to apply the same harsh measures of reform in, say, England.

In England, I remarked to the young Jew, for many generations the people gradually had been building up their liberties and there the way was open by peaceful constitutional means to enlarge their liberties to the fullest possible extent. I further asked him if it were not a fact that in America he and others had enjoyed—as in England and other countries thousands of his comrades have enjoyed—not merely full opportunity of earning a livelihood, but freedom to express political views—freedom denied in their land of origin. Furthermore I reminded him that if he had good reason to resent the hateful way his race had been persecuted in Russia he must recognize that religious freedom prevailed in England where the Lord Chief Justice was a Jew and where Jews held important positions in the Government.

A more sober note was now entering into the young man's discourse. He frankly admitted and expressed gratitude for the facts of which I had reminded him.

"Still," he expostulated, "England is a capitalistic state, and capitalism is an unfair system that must be abolished."

Here let me explain that I am reporting my conversation with this young man, who had held a responsible position in the Government system, because his opinions and arguments proved typical of those I have heard since in many talks with pillars of the new Russia.

"Thoughtful minds in England," I admitted, continuing the talk with the young Russian Jew, "are increasingly conscious of unjust elements in the existing system, for instance profiteering in food, that was so gross a public offense during the war, but I said the same minds think they see their way, by imposing legislative restrictions on opportunist merchants, to remedy such injustice. In any case, Englishmen will not scrap the present system until they know of a better one. If the present Russian system should endure," I assured him, "and if the new form proves better than the old it is certain sooner or later to be adopted in other countries."

"But," exclaimed the young man, "we want the rest of the world to follow suit now, so that the revolution can be consolidated internationally."

"If revolutions elsewhere," I remarked, "are necessary to the stability of the Russian revolution, then the Russian revolution is doomed."

To which the young man said:

"Socialism can continue here even if capitalism lingers in other countries. Our main reason for desiring to see revolutions in other countries is because we feel fraternally toward the workers of those countries." I suggested that in order to convert the rest of the world it was incumbent on them to make the new Russia a model of democracy, which would excite in other nations the desire to be like it, and that, therefore, instead of bothering about revolutions elsewhere they surely ought rather to get on with their own revolution here.

Thought Revolution Finished.

The young man amazed me by remarking "but we have finished our revolution," which opinion, however, was so far from being typical that the young man was promptly confuted by one of his comrades, who pointed out that of the Russian revolution only a part, the part which might be called destruction, had been finished, and that they were still in the early stage of Part Two, called reconstruction. But soon we had bidden good-bye to that ardent apostle of revolution, the train had started on its journey and I was busily cleaning the grimy window of my compartment the better to scrutinize such portions of the Socialist republic we were travelling.

Picturesque were the peasantry as singly or in groups they trudged along trodden paths in the snow or assembled on railway platforms. I had expected to see them looking pinched and unhealthy from lack of nourishment, and narrowly did I scrutinize their faces to test that supposition, but not a bit of it. I saw many a torn and frayed garment but not a single pair of lean cheeks or hungry eyes.

These studies, interrupted by the night's rest, were continued the next day. At stopping places where the engine took in wood I walked about the platform and thus had an opportunity to study the people at close quarters. My most memorable experience was in entering a large waiting room that proved to be full of soldiers and civilians.

Here, then, was a mixed sample of the population that had passed through the wonderful experiences of the revolution. They had emerged from that state in which a great gulf divided the poor majority from the rich minority, that state in which the submerged and struggling many had touched their caps to the exalted and favored few. They had entered a state in which all men, women and children are accounted equals.

My readers will want to know whether revolution was in any wise reflected in the demeanor of that assembly. Yes, it most certainly was, but only in subtle ways not easy to define. The poorest clothed folk had their heads up and looked one full in the face. Indeed several knots of young soldiers, being honestly amused at the sight of the curious looking foreigner, could not forbear smiling as they gazed at me. But there was nothing aggressive or illnatured or rude in their manner. If reference to class distinctions had disappeared, nothing in the way of presumption had taken its place.

Out of the corner of my eye I attentively watched several little groups of girls or ladies, whose refined faces and tasteful simplicity of clothing revealed them as having belonged to the dispossessed propertied class. They looked a little pale and subdued, but on the whole I judged them to be at their ease and more or less reconciled.

From a bridge where we joined the main Petrograd-Moscow line our train maintained an average speed of over forty miles an hour. The improvement was due to the fact that dry wood was available for the engine. A good deal of traffic passed up, and as late at night we near the old capital, which is the new capital, the track proved to be lighted by great electric standards, a certain amount of freight being handled at sidings and suburban stations.

We reached our destination, Moscow, at 12:30, and fifteen minutes later motor cars arrived to take us to our various places of sojourn.

I shall never forget that first drive through the heart of Moscow, that city of enchantment. Fine snow was falling, and a pale moon, filtering through the clouds, revealed old archways and towers and the Kremlin walls and a numerous cluster of domes as gray, mysterious shapes amid the universal whiteness.

At that late hour only a few persons remained in the streets. For the most part, they were walking briskly, with the air of citizens returning home after spending the evening with friends.

My quarters proved to be a princely mansion confronting the late Czar's palace.

TELL OF SIBERIAN HORRORS.

British Officers Say Czechs Left Trainloads of Sick Refugees to Die.

LONDON, March 8.—A party of British officers arriving at Harbin from Omsk and Chita declare that their experiences west of Irkutsk excelled all other previous horrors, says The London Times's Harbin, Manchuria, correspondent in a communication dated Feb. 19.

"Piles of naked, frozen and gnawed bodies of men, women and children were stacked at every station," the correspondent quotes the officers as saying. "The Czechs took the engines from the hospital trains, leaving the sick to perish from cold and hunger."

BOLSHEVIKI START BIG OFFENSIVE

delegates are here and the Ukrainians are expected soon. There is a possibility that Lithuania and eventually Esthonia will participate in the consultation, which it is generally believed will determine Poland's next move in her stand against Bolshevism.

Diplomats here say that the opening of negotiations between Poland and the Soviet Government hinges on the Polish demands for restitution and damages since the partition of the territory in 1772. An unofficial dispatch from Moscow says the Bolsheviki already have taken an attitude intimating that they have no desire even to open negotiations if Poland demands the frontier of 148 years ago, as outlined by the Polish Diet's Foreign Commission.

Should Poland insist on the demand and the Bolsheviki refuse to acquiesce, diplomats here say it would mean a continuance of the present situation. The Poles are said to be determined to take some definite action within a few weeks.

Allies to Pass on Program.

It is understood that the peace program which is to be presented to the conference Monday will be submitted to the Allied Powers for approval. The border States are said to be eager to reach a decision, particularly because of the approach of Spring, when the long-advertised Bolshevist offensive against them is due to commence.

Several of the representatives of the border States have shown restlessness. The Lettish Foreign Minister, M. Meirmitch, in Riga, has announced that unless the Warsaw conference reaches a decision the Letts and the Finns and possibly the Lithuanians will consider a separate peace with Russia.

The allegation of a Germano-Bolshevist intrigue for an invasion of Lithuania, primarily in the German interest, published by Slovo-Russian language newspapers here, include the charge that 36,000 Germans have been concentrated in East Prussia prepared to invade Lithuania. It is intended to claim necessity for this action because of the recent revolt of Lithuanian soldiers in the Kovno region, it is declared in one of the dispatches printed by these newspapers.

Other messages have declared that the Lithuanian Government had a secret connection with Germany, and that it was believed by Dutch merchants in Kovno and other Lithuanian towns, who were closing their businesses and leaving the country, that there was a possibility that a Bolshevist force which was under the command of a German General intended invading Lithuania from the east.

BOLSHEVIKI IN IRKUTSK.

Send Kolchak Ministers to Omsk to be Tried There.

LONDON, March 6.—Irkutsk, the recent seat of the Kolchak Government, which was seized last month by insurrectionary troops who later executed Admiral Kolchak, is now in the hands of Bolshevist regulars, troops of the Red army having entered the town, it is announced in a wireless message from Moscow today.

Several members of the former Kolchak Ministry and many active counter-revolutionists who were imprisoned in Irkutsk are being transferred to Omsk, where they will be delivered to the judgment of a revolutionary tribunal, the dispatch adds.

JUNKERS LAUNCH HINDENBURG BOOM

BELIEVE HE WILL ACCEPT

Clear Division Between Monarchists and Republicans Might be Shown by His Candidacy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 7.—All the anti-Republican papers reprint the following:

"In fatherlandish circles a desire to make Marshal Hindenburg a candidate for election as President grows daily clearer. If any man will fulfill the hopes placed by the nation in the new President that man is Hindenburg, who stands above all partisan strife and all political contrasts, who enjoys the confidence of the whole people and embodies in his person that earnest desire for unity and order which fills all true friends of the fatherland. There are good reasons for the belief that Hindenburg will not refuse, despite the sacrifices imposed by such a candidacy, if the nomination is offered to him from the heart of the people.

"To this end, leading men and women from all parts of Germany, of all callings, all classes, all walks of life, will address their comrades within a very short time and ask them to vote for Hindenburg as the next President."

Though the elections for President and the Reichstag have not yet been fixed and the modus of the Presidential election has not even finally been decided upon, the astute Junkers are the first to open the campaign with a candidate whose strength can not be over-estimated. Despite his age and despite the fact that Hindenburg never meddled in home politics, he will certainly draw all the votes of the two reactionary parties and those millions who do not belong to any party but are disgusted with the present misery, for which they do not hold the old régime and the war responsible, but the present republican system, which has undertaken the thankless and impossible task, of administering the bankrupt State.

On the other hand, Hindenburg's candidacy might also have the effect of uniting all Republicans against the monarchists, for no matter how they will disguise this candidacy the German masses could not be persuaded that the old General figured as anything else but a place holder, if not for Wilhelm II., for some other Hohenzollern.

Such an election with Hindenburg as the reactionary candidate would certainly serve to clear the division between those who desire the despotism restored and those valuing liberty and Germany's peaceable reconstruction.

It is not certain yet if the next President will be elected by popular vote on the American plan or by the combined chambers of the Legislature on the French plan. Realizing that by the latter method Hindenburg will not have any chance, "the Federal Citizens' Council, under which the reaction is promoting Hindenburg's candidacy, already protests against any change in the Constitution in favor of the French plan.

TWO GIRLS AND MAN SHOT.

One Dead and Two Wounded by Assassin in Mulberry Street.

One girl was killed and another girl and a man were seriously wounded between 6 and 7 o'clock last night in Mulberry Street, near Kenmare, in an Italian section, where more murders and shootings have occurred in the last year than in any other part of the city.

Lena Spinelli, 19 years old, and Josephine Gentile, 17 years old, of 78 Mott Street, were walking together in Mulberry Street, on their way home after visiting the Grand Theatre. They were joined by Giuseppe de Cesare, 36 years old, of 167 Mulberry Street, and Salvatore Guerriero of 218 Elizabeth Street. When the four passed a café at 185 Mulberry Street a man stepped out with a revolver in his hand. He fired three shots and then fled. Each shot found its mark. Lena Spinelli died a few moments later from a bullet wound in the abdomen. Josephine Gentile was taken to Volunteer Hospital in a critical condition from a bullet wound in the head. De Cesare was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital with a bullet wound near the heart, which will probably cause his death.

There were crowds in the street at the time, and many saw the shooting. The mob soon grew to thousands, and the reserves from the Elizabeth Street Station were called out to handle them. Because of the long list of unexplained crimes near the same spot, the neighborhood was seething with excitement.

Captain Arthur Carey and members of the Homicide Squad questioned Guerriero, the only unharmed member of the group, and Margaret Montana, a friend of the two girls, who was near them when the shooting occurred, and came to the conclusion that jealousy was the cause of the shooting. The dying man, according to the police, did not know or would not tell who had shot him.

URGE DUTCH REPORT TO ALLIES ON KAISER

Paper Says It Would Placate Them—Press Generally Supports Government on Reply.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, March 7.—The Nieuwe Courant, commenting on the Netherlands' latest note regarding the ex-Kaiser, points out that the answer can only meet the approval of the people and that, like the previous answer, it gives no opportunity for a long discussion.

The paper protests against the impression given by the Allied note, that Holland does not take its responsibility toward the world seriously enough, as entirely false. From the very beginning, it says the Netherlands Government has taken every precaution in the matter of the ex-Kaiser and the new note shows that the Government intends to continue along the same line.

The paper suggests that a report in a somewhat less official form might remove the distrust which still appears to remain with the Supreme Council. It hints at some sort of agreement reached with Wilhelm over guarantees, and also suggests that in view of the artificial feeling raised against Holland on the question it might be well to make a report.

The Allegemeine Handelsblad believes the ex-Kaiser question ceases to exist since the answer published yesterday, adding that "the sovereign State has said the last word." Twice, says the paper, the Government has seriously investigated and considered the allied arguments, and both times has come unanimously to the same conclusion.

The paper points out that although Holland can never forget the outrages committed against her hundreds of unfortunate sailors and fishermen, victims of the submarines, that this must not influence the decision toward the fugitive once he was admitted. Moreover, it adds, the decision must not be a concession to the ex-Kaiser's enemies.

"There is no question of agreement," it says, "with the Allies on the ex-Kaiser's lot * * * and so far as protective measures are concerned, the Allies have been told all that they need to know. They have no right to the ex-Kaiser. * * * The ex-Kaiser is not a free man within within our frontiers. [This contradicts the former official statement.] On the principle of the Alien act the Government will decide to what extent his freedom is limited. He is considered as an alien dangerous to the public peace, and thus we can oblige him to reside in a given place. A definite decision in this regard can be expected in order to end all misunderstanding about the ex-Kaiser's position."

The Catholic Maasbode adopts much the same tone, pointing out that the Allies wanted to insist on extradition according to the principles of the new order of justice, whereas the events leading to the demand for his extradition place took the old order of things, and that William Hohenzollern is firstly a refugee and not a criminal. The paper hopes Holland's refusal will be a lesson to the Allies and will help to open their eyes to the necessities of the new world order.

COUNCIL HAS ALTERED ITS ECONOMIC PROGRAM

Paris Temps Asserts That Reparation Commission Will Retain Full Powers.

PARIS, March 7.—A summary of the proposed memorandum regarding the economic situation in Europe as outlined by the Supreme Council has been given to the Temps. It confirms the summary of the proposal as made public last week and also the French reservations to it, especially regarding the virtual revision of the Treaty of Versailles by withdrawing from the Reparations Commission part of its prerogatives under the treaty.

The Supreme Council, the Temps adds, has admitted the justice of the French observations and maintained the responsibilities of the Reparations Commission.

A dispatch from Paris last Friday said that France had neither signed nor approved the proposed declaration of the allied Supreme Council regarding the economic situation of Europe. The original text of the declaration, it was said, set forth that the small nations bordering on Russia should be obliged to make peace with the Soviet Government in order that an economic revival might begin; that Germany must receive the means for resuming industrial activity, and that a loan to Germany be made, guaranteed by German assets, in priority to reparation payments.

was a safeguard obviously contemplated before hostilities were stopped."

The Chronicle goes on to say of the proposal to make Izzet Pasha Grand Vizier that, if the Turkish Government should identify itself with a policy of atrocity and make allied action necessary, it sincerely hopes that this may lead to some change in the Allies' plans.

"Notwithstanding the Supreme Council's warning to the Porte that the terms of the treaty would be modified to its disadvantage unless the massacres of Armenians ceased, the massacres have not ceased, but have been repeated."

"We hope," the editorial concludes, "that it may prove a lesson to the Peace Conference to show what we have always urged, that larger Armenia must be freed, that Cicilia must be removed from the Turks, and that it is desirable that Constantinople also should be denied to them."

Turks Agree to Give Up Marash.

PARIS, March 7.—The Turkish Government has agreed with the French authorities that Marash shall be reoccupied by French troops, according to a Constantinople dispatch to the Temps.

The Temps adds that information has been received in Paris to the effect that calm seems to have been re-established in Cilicia.

SHEIK HERE SEEKS $100,000,000 GIRL

WORLDWIDE SEARCH BEGUN

Father, the 'Rockefeller of Turkey,' Dies of Grief After the Disappearance from Constantinople.

Ben Mahomet, a Sheik of Arabia and brother of the Amir of Hedjaz, arrived at the Hotel Majestic yesterday, with a tale fit to be added to the Arabian Nights. In brief his story is that he and his party have come to America to search for Sari, fiancée to his brother, the Amir, and daughter of Hadahismo, one of the richest men in Turkey, who died from grief over her disappearance just after the armistice and left her about $100,000,000.

Somewhere in America, Ben Mahomet said last night he expects to find the girl. She was last seen talking to an American soldier or sailor, soon after an American warship had docked at Constantinople. Money will be no object in the quest, Ben Mahomet declared.

Surrounded by his retinue of servants and six of his fellow-countrymen who have accompanied him on his mission, the Sheik received a NEW YORK TIMES reporter last night at the Hotel Majestic and told him the story of the girl's disappearance and the worldwide search for her that followed. He spoke at first in fluent French, but later broke into English, which, he said, he learned while he was a student in Cambridge, England, but which, he added apologetically, he had forgotten these many years.

Father "Like Rockefeller."

Sari is 17 years old. She was known throughout Turkey for her beauty and her charity, aside from the fact that her father was, as Ben Mahomet explained, "like Rockefeller is in America." Hadahismo's name the Sheik spoke almost reverently, describing him as "the biggest man in Turkey." She lived with her father in a palace in Stamboul.

Since her mother died, the Shiek said, the girl had been accustomed to go about the city unveiled. She visited all the quarters of the city in her charitable work, and there was no one who believed that she would not be safe anywhere, so great was the people's love for her. They knew, too, that she was betrothed to the Amir of Hedjaz, who, though a young man of 25, has a name to conjure with in Stamboul.

It was soon after the armistice—Ben Mahomet could not fix the date according to our calendar—when Sari disappeared. She had been about Stamboul that day, where many persons later said they saw her, but suddenly she dropped out of sight. When she did not return home her father became frantic, and put every means at his disposal to work on the search. The city was combed, but no trace was found of her.

There were conflicting stories about the place where Sari was last seen. Stamboul, at the time, was filled with the soldiers and sailors of many strange lands. An American warship, the Sheik said, had arrived there, and Sari's nurse had spoken about seeing her talk to an American. He did not know whether the American was a soldier or sailor.

Searched France and Italy.

When it was felt certain that Sari had left Stamboul, either voluntarily or with an abductor, the Amir asked his brother to go in search of her. He took with him six friends, all prominent in Stamboul, and sailed for France. They went all over France and into Italy and, when they found no trace of the girl, they went to Gibraltar and Tangiers, and from there sailed for America. Landing at Halifax, they hurried on to New York, where a suite had been reserved for them at the Majestic.

Ben Mahomet said that he would not take up officially the matter of the girl's disappearance, for the present at least. He has been in communication with the Burns and O'Farrell detective agencies and a private search will be started. He said that he would offer a large reward.

Should the detectives fail in their search, Ben Mahomet said, he will go to the Government at Washington and ask them to help him in the search. It was said that he might try to trace the American soldier or sailor with whom the girl talked, through the War and Navy Departments, by learning what ships or detachments of the army were in Stamboul about the time Sari was missed.

"We will offer a big reward," he said. "Sari has a big fortune and unless she is found it will all go to the State. We shall probably stay in New York until the search is well started."

Owing to the trend of events in Turkey since the armistice, it is hardly to be expected that Sari will find all of her $100,000,000 awaiting her, should she return to her native land.

SAYS HE HAS CRAFT TO FLY VERTICALLY

Henry A. Berliner Asserts He Has Solved Old Problem with Lifting Propellers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7. — After years of experimenting, Henry A. Berliner, an aeronautical engineer, announces that he believes he has solved the old aeronautical problem of vertical flight by lifting propellers, known as the helicopter. Aeronautical engineers who have wrestled with the same problem are interested in his announcement and assert such an invention would completely revolutionize the aircraft industry. Early attempts to master the air were generally along the lines of the helicopter, which was first suggested in 1768 by A. J. P. Paucton.

In 1910 Emile Berliner, father of the inventor, constructed a large double propeller apparatus, called a gyrocopter, which is the basis of his son's invention. Before this two propellers rotating in opposite directions had been thought to be necessary, because with one the rest of the apparatus rotated around the shaft of the propeller. Mr. Berliner sought to overcome this by mounting a small auxiliary vertical fan about ten feet from the shaft of the lifting horizontal propeller. This fan opposed the turning impetus, or torque, of the lifting propeller.

In June, 1909, the elder Mr. Berliner had succeeded several times in lifting a man with the machine, but the lifting was not steady. He kept up his experiments until 1914, when he was forced to abandon them because of a nervous breakdown. His son Henry then took up the problem. The younger Berliner, describing his experiments, said:

"I spent several months in constructing a scientific testing apparatus and with which I tried various types of small lifting propellers, singly or in group, and I finally calculated and designed the first helicopter apparatus that proved successful. This machine weighed 570 pounds, and the revolving cylinder motor was an 80-horse power Le Rhone. The two propellers were thirteen feet in diameter and ten inches wide and the total perfectly steady lift was nearly 900 pounds, or sixty pounds a square foot of effective lifting surface. An airplane has an average lift of about eight pounds a square foot.

"The head resistance of a gyrocopter is small, and great speed forward may be expected from it. My father always intended that the gyrocopter should be provided with floats and that at first it should be a water craft, flying low near the surface of the rivers, lakes and ocean, so that it could descend quickly to safety in case of accident. Future development may result in some means for coming down on land from great heights as safely as an airplane can."

HARA DISSOLVED DIET TO AVOID IMPASSE

Japanese Suffrage Demonstrations Include Attacks on Official Residences.

LONDON, March 7.—Delayed Tokio dispatches to the London Times give an outline of the agitation for universal suffrage which led to the dissolution of the Diet on Feb. 26. In a dispatch dated Feb. 15 the correspondent says:

"The longest sustained agitation in Japan's constitutional history is being fought out in the Diet. For a fortnight past widely organized demonstrations in favor of manhood suffrage have been carried out in Tokio, accompanied by many dramatic incidents, including attacks on official residences and personal attacks such as usually do not distinguish popular demonstrations.

"The agitation is preliminary to the debate in the Diet on the Suffrage Extension bills, three separate measures extending the present limits being presented by the Kensei-Kai and other opposition parties. The state of popular unrest, of which the agitation is a symptom, combined with a serious strike in the Government steel works, involving the closing down of extensive foundries and heavy national loss, with 20,000 men idle, plus a renewed outbreak of disaffection among the Tokio tramway workers, indicate social unrest, more common in the west than in the east, against which the Government seems helpless."

A dispatch under date of Feb. 26 says:

"The dissolution of the Diet came in the midst of a debate on the suffrage, Premier Hara, who had declared that he questioned whether the demand for universal suffrage was the voice of the people at large, but must be submitted for judgment, suddenly producing the rescript. It was a real bolt from the blue, a truly Haraesque example of adroit avoidance of an impasse.

"Outside the Diet this evening there is an extraordinary scene of police activity, showing how well prepared the Government was for all eventualities."

SECESSION THREAT BY STATEN ISLAND

Movement Started to Set Up the Borough as a Separate Municipality.

CITY OFFICIALS SUMMONED

Grand Jury May Call Hylan in Inquiry on Transit and Lighting.

Three members of the Board of Estimate have been summoned to appear this morning before the Grand Jury in Richmond County, where a group of business men have started a movement for the secession of Staten Island from New York City, on the ground that the lighting and transit systems there are suffering because of the policy of city officials.

The investigation of the Grand Jury is intended to discover why the Midland railways stopped their lines last January. The secession movement got a stimulus because of the fact that Staten Island has been left in darkness for the second time in a week by the failure of the Richmond Light and Power Company, which is controlled by the same group of men who operate the Midland lines. The secessionists lay the breakdown of public utilities on the island in part to the refusal of the Board of Estimate to grant the petition of 15,000 residents of the island to allow the trolley lines to operate on an increased fare basis.

The members of the Board of Estimate who have been summoned to appear before the Grand Jury, are Controller Craig, Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield and Borough President Calvin D. Van Name.

The leaders of the secession movement are Adolph Schuster, Charles Harreus, William Wolfson and James Horn. They and others made an appeal yesterday to the Staten Island Civic League, which includes 4,500 citizens of the island, to take up the question of setting up Staten Island as an independent municipality.

The leaders of the movement assert that the public utility situation in Staten Island has been produced by the failure of the Board of Estimate to take intelligent action in January to solve the problems of traction and lighting. It is asserted that members of the board were controlled, in dealing with these problems, not with the needs of Staten Island, but with the effect of their action on the political situation throughout the city. Another charge is that Staten Island at present is compelled to pay taxes which are excessive in comparison to the service rendered by the city, and that a local government could produce better results with less money.

It was reported yesterday that Mayor Hylan might be summoned before the Grand Jury.

"OHIO, BY THUNDER!"

General Garfield once wagered that he could tell a man's native State by the food he ordered. It was 2 o'clock in the morning.

"Ham and eggs!" ordered one man. "Ohio, by thunder!" exclaimed the General. "Only an Ohioan would order ham and eggs at 2 o'clock in the morning."

But that was before the advent of the CHILDS restaurants—

UNION SEEKS AID FOR ITS RENT BILL

GANNON TELLS OF FIGHT

Jersey City Official Says Assessments of Fair-Dealing Landlords are Reduced.

Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the Central Federation Union, announced last night that all the Central Labor bodies in the State are being urged to indorse the bill dealing with rent profiteering which has been prepared by the local organization for introduction at Albany. Letters urging support were sent to all the labor organizations yesterday, said Mr. Bohm.

The State's central labor bodies are also asked to select representatives to speak for the measure at the hearing soon to be held in Albany.

The bill calls for an amendment of the Code of Civil Procedure as regards summary proceedings. In court actions, the burden of proof would rest on the landlord, who would have to prove that the increased rent he demanded was reasonable. The bill would also limit the landlord to increasing rentals once a year.

The Central Federated Union at its meeting last Friday night, it now comes out, did not actually vote on the proposal to instruct its members not to pay any rent they considered exorbitant, although many speeches urged this course. The members, according to Mr. Bohm, feel that a general strike or "direct action" should not be used except as a last resort.

"This is not a fight of organized labor alone," said Mr. Bohm. "It is a fight of practically the entire people."

James F. Gannon, Director of the Department of Finance of Jersey City, said yesterday he had heard, but not officially, that Mayor Hylan desired to see him in regard to Jersey City's attack on rent profiteering. Due to the crusade carried on in his city, he said, the rent has fallen out of the speculative market in real estate.

In February, according to Mr. Gannon, there were 5,000 complaints regarding rental increases after the municipality promised to pay the expenses of all those whose cases after investigation seemed to be worthy of court hearings. Only sixteen cases actually came to court, he said. Of these nine were settled before trial, six of them in favor of the rent payer. The city withdrew from one case.

A significant effect of the rent strike in Jersey City which was backed up by the authorities is that landlords are now asking for subpoenas for Jersey City dwellers in the courts of Bayonne and North Hudson rather than in the community where they reside, it was reported.

Mr. Gannon said that landlords who were eminently fair in their dealings with tenants had their assessments reduced as a token of the city's appreciation of their treatment of tenants. In spite of the fact that wholesale rent strikes have taken place in Jersey City there has not been a single eviction or a single case of violence, he asserted. If landlords are recalcitrant and fail to act reasonably they are required to live up to the full technicalities of the laws. This action is generally followed by promises of fair dealings, the director pointed out.

URGES INSULT TO ALLIES.

Reventlow Encourages Germans to Show Hostility to Mission.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

By Wireless and Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 7.—In the Deutsche Tageszeitung, Reventlow, the Hetman of the Pan-German scribes, has an insulting article on the Allies' Military Mission, which is here in accordance with the terms of the Peace Treaty. He accuses the members of this Mission "of making use of corruption to discover various things." He goes on to say:

"It is understandable that German shopkeepers find it goes against their German blood to have business relations with these representatives of vampire-like activities of the English, French and Belgian, and to suffer them in their shops. Numbers of shopkeepers have stated they were not prepared to sell anything to these gentlemen. It is the right of every business man to refuse to sell his wares to members of these commissions."

The fire-eating Count, who, by the way, is not averse to foreign company himself, also suggests that when members of Allied commissions appear in places of amusement Germans should go "and leave these gentlemen alone."

FAIL TO KIDNAP BELA KUN.

Hungarian Band Betrayed by Watchman They Had Bribed.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, March 7.—In the late hours of the night an attempt was made to kidnap Bela Kun from his place of internment in a hospital near Vienna. It is well known, of course, that the Hungarians are very anxious to bring Bela Kun and others interned in Austria to trial and there have already been frequent attempts at kidnapping.

The attempt last night was made by ten armed men who suddenly appeared at the hospital and bribed the watcher. He, however, gave warning to the police and these hurried to meet them. The armed party quickly took alarm, and managed to escape before the police arrived. Presumably they got away in a large automobile, which was traced through several villages.

The Neue Freie Presse takes it for granted that these ten armed men were Hungarian officers belonging to an irresponsible military gang who have been terrorizing Hungary and have been guilty of a series of outrages on the Austro-Hungarian frontier. This journal gives another warning that such proceedings must necessarily damage the relations between the two countries, and calls upon Admiral Horthy, Hungary's new Protector, to make an end of this military camarilla.

ELLITHORPE LOSES RUDDER.

Shipping Board Vessel Narrowly Escapes Wreck on Sable Island.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 7.—Her propeller broken and her hull swept by a seventy-mile gale, the United States Shipping Board steamer Lake Ellithorpe threatened tonight to pile up on the shoals of Sable Island.

A later radio message, however, stated that she had been able to clear the island and now was out of danger.

The steamer, a craft of 4,000 tons, sent out an S O S call this afternoon, in which her Captain said she was drifting helplessly toward the island. The steamer Maplemore, 120 miles away, answered her message and started toward the endangered vessel. The Coast Guard cutter Seneca also put out to her assistance from New York.

WE WANT THE PUBLIC TO KNOW

THAT the women workers in the petticoat trade of New York City are the lowest paid workers of any of the garment trades in the country.

THAT a thousand of these girls have been out on strike for the last five weeks for an increase in wages to meet the present cost of living. They have offered to submit their grievances to any impartial body of men for arbitration.

The Petticoat Manufacturers Have Refused Every Offer to Arbitrate the Grievances of Their Workers

This is a statement made by Acting Mayor La Guardia, who had been asked by the girl strikers to try to adjust this dispute by arbitration:

"I have been unable to settle the strike owing to the flat refusal of the employers, speaking through the president of the Petticoat Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Aaron Granet, to accept my offer of good offices to bring about a conference or even to arbitrate.

"The last offer which I was authorized to make to the employers seemed to me very reasonable. The terms were as follows:

"1—Waiving of the so-called bonus system, which has proved unsatisfactory, and an increase of ten to fifteen per cent. To this the employers replied, through their president, that if the employees returned to the shops they would see what they could do after they were back at work.

"2—Permission for each shop to form its own committee among the employees actually employed in the shop to take up with the employers all grievances. This the employers flatly refused to consider.

"3—The selection of an impartial person satisfactory to both sides to consider all matters concerning the trade as a whole in order to avoid strikes. This the employers flatly refused.

"I regret exceedingly that the employers have taken this attitude, because I found the strikers willing to accept any settlement and insisted only that the settlement should be made in a manner that they would be certain would be carried out. Their good faith was shown in their desire to adjust strike matters through a shop committee and trade matters through an impartial person.

"If the employers even now show an attitude of fairness the strike can be adjusted in a few hours. I fear the employers are laboring under a misapprehension brought about by sudden prosperity and have forgotten the viewpoint of the workers, although they themselves were workers but a few years ago."

The Petticoat Makers' Union will continue this fight on behalf of the strikers until the petticoat manufacturers will recede from their position.

ROBBERS RAID POKER GAME, KILL PLAYER

VICTIM BEING SEARCHED

Stakes Had Been Seized and Players Were Lined Up Against Wall.

Three masked bandits held up a poker game in a furnished room at 40 Second Place, Brooklyn, early yesterday morning and shot and killed Walter Berger, a Norwegian carpenter, 40 years old, of 172 Carroll Street, who resisted when one of the robbers attempted to search him for money. Detectives late in the afternoon arrested Thoralf Christiansen, also a Norwegian, 26 years old, of 45 Third Place, on suspicion that he was one of those concerned in the shooting, and held six other men as material witnesses.

Christiansen denied all knowledge of the shooting, and told the police that he had arrived afterward, expecting to take part in the poker game, which he knew was played every Saturday night.

The poker game was in progress in a room occupied by Arni-Foss, when the door was thrown open and three men, with the lower part of their faces covered with handkerchiefs, ordered the players to throw up their hands. While two of the intruders covered the players with revolvers, the third swept the stakes, approximately $30 in currency, from the table. One of the bandits then ordered the five players to line up against the wall, and the third man started to go through their pockets.

According to the information received by the police, Berger apparently recognized the man searching him, and asked him if it was a joke. Receiving no reply, Berger attempted to break the latter's hold, and struck at him. One of the other robbers fired, and the bullet pierced Berger's heart, killing him immediately. The three robbers then ran from the room.

At the request of District Attorney Harry E. Lewis, the police detained as witnesses Foss, Louis Carter of 2,656 Eighth Avenue, Manhattan, Jorgan Gilstad of 45 First Place and Christopher lestad of 45 First Place and Christopher other men in the game at the time, and Albert Johansen of 232 Degraw Street, and Alf Poulsen of 1,419 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn, who had left earlier in the evening.

The shooting occurred in the Scandinavian section of Brooklyn, and most of the men concerned are Norwegians.

The police are working on the theory that those in the hold-up were either men who had played in the poker game or who had knowledge that one was played every Saturday. They are investigating a report that one man had been a heavy loser earlier in the evening and stated that they expected to make further arrests today.

LEGION TELLS STATE THE LAWS IT WANTS

Indorse Measure Not to Deduct Service Pay from Exemptions—Report for Assembly.

The American Legion announced yesterday its attitude on legislation of various sorts now pending before the State Legislature. Through the legislative committee of which Henry L. Stimson is chairman, the report will be presented at Albany by Samuel Aronowitz, a member of the committee.

The Gillett-Towner bill, amending the State income tax law, so that the pay of ex-service men received while in the service is not deducted from personal exemption, is indorsed. Efforts will be made to get the bill through the Legislature this week, so that refunds to service men will not be necessary.

A bill providing for additional compensation from the State for all men totally disabled in the service is being drafted. The compensation is to continue as long as the Federal compensation of $80 a month is in force. The sum recommended is $20 additional a month, with larger compensation for married men and those with dependents. Bills introduced by Assemblymen Carroll and Trahan, the one providing for the appropriation by municipalities of funds to aid veterans who are in distress and the other establishing a State fund for the same purpose, are indorsed.

The Dodge-Fox bill, making it a misdemeanor to wear the American Legion button unless entitled to wear it, was approved.

Bills of Assemblyman Cuvillier approved were: Those giving exemption from poll tax to veterans severely injured in service; exempting property bought with bonus, compensation or insurance from execution, and allowing children of veterans to be admitted to the State institutions for the blind.

The matter of the bonus or adjusted compensation was referred to the subcommittee of the State Executive Committee, which is handling this matter at Albany. The question of local posts of the legion holding property was referred to the Legal Committee. Matters relating to the payment of the difference between Federal and State rate of pay to men on border service were not acted upon, as not coming under the scope of the legion's business.

The arrest yesterday of Harry Bernstein, 19 years old, a salesman, of [illegible] Henry Street, on a charge of burglary, revealed that the store of P. Rosner & Brother, linen importers, at 331 Broadway, had been robbed on Friday night of Irish linen and woolens valued at $15,000. Bernstein denied all knowledge of the crime.

The store was entered with skeleton keys, according to the police. When the clerks arrived Saturday morning there was no outward evidence of the robbery, but when the stock was examined the theft was discovered.

On Saturday night at the Plymouth, before an alert, critical, honest, expectant audience, that stood at the end to cheer incontinently while the curtain rose and fell, John Barrymore appeared as Richard the Third. It was his first performance in a Shakespearean rôle, and marked a measurable advance in the gradual process of bringing his technical fluency abreast with his winged imagination and his real genius for the theatre. Surely it was the highest point yet reached in that rapid, unexpected ascent which began four years ago with the production of Galsworthy's "Justice," and which has been unparalleled in the theatre of our time.

Fortified by backgrounds and trappings of great beauty, aided (if you care to use the word) by a company that is somewhat short of so-so, Mr. Barrymore held his first audience riveted until a few minutes before 1—an extraordinary feat in itself. There must needs be a deal of pruning, for, of course, the production will have to be lopped off here and there to make it fit the habit of our less leisurely audiences. The vexing questions of what to cut and what to spare will have to be determined, not by the intrinsic worth of the various materials, but by their effectiveness, when refracted through the wildly assorted media that chance to be assembled in Mr. Barrymore's support—if you care to use the word.

The text is one especially prepared and selected by an unnamed hand—a choice of sixteen abreviated scenes from the third part of "Henry the Sixth," and from "The Tragedy of Richard the Third." The adaptor followed the latter day fashion of nobly flouting the once favored concoction by Colley Cibber, yet accepted readily enough the Cibber theory that something rather radical was needed to build a suitable piece about the bent figure of Shakespeare's Gloster. Not that he utterly spurned old Cibber's handiwork, for one of Cibber's lines was evidently too great a temptation and was accordingly retrieved from the scrapheap of a version that served, in its time, for more than a century of limping Richards.

Beginning, as the Plymouth version does, with the stirring, groping boyhood of Richard, when the lad, embittered by his wanton deformity, stands hesitant at the crossroads where part the paths to good and evil—this grouping of the material permits that visible growth and change to a poisonous, dank, sin-rotted soul, spinning his plans from the throne of England, like some black and incredibly malignant spider. It is the progressive change which Mansfield so reveled in and which makes a living thing of Barrymore's Richard.

If Richard is worth playing at all, he is worth playing for all the greatness there is in him. After all, he has a titanic quality, a suggestion of a Lucifer defying creation, a Heaven-challenging giant standing outside and above the pygmy mortals with whose destinies he toys so lightly. He is more than inhuman: there must be a touch of the superhuman, and it is a Richard of such stature that Barrymore, in his new-found and still developing power, creates for us. Such a Richard can give a special accent and meaning to the diablerie and inner amusement of the midway scene, to the "Now is the Winter of our discontent" speech and to all its sardonic sequence, as far as the climax of that extraordinary wooing of the Lady Anne, even as far as the acceptance of the crown. When the dissolution comes, it takes the form of no ordinary man's repentence and misgivings, but rather is it the tottering of a mind that has overreached itself. Long before the tent scene, which is none too impressively managed at the Plymouth, before even the cursing of Richard by his mother, the king is streaked with madness—a mental disintegration that is revealed at first as by flashes of fitful and distant lightning.

All in all, a magnificent achievement. It ranks with Ada Rehan's Katherine and Forbes Robertson's Hamlet in this playgoer's Shakespearean experience. He would be tempted to call it great acting were it not for the obviously contradictory fact that John Barrymore is alive, very much alive and disgracefully young, and were it not also for the danger that twelve older and better playgoers would then rise and say in freezing tones: "Ho, ho, I guess you never saw So-and-So play Richard in Upper Tooting in 1869." But there, a fig for them. It is a great performance.

Of the investiture one may speak as heartily. Some of the scenes are of incomparable loveliness. All of them are rich and right—the work of an unerring artist of the theatre, Robert Edmund Jones. We are all always absurdly haunted by the fear that Mr. Jones is about to overstep himself, to import, for instance, a fantastic quality and an enervating prettiness into a Plantagenet play. But Mr. Jones's precision as an artist is as sure as his imagination is boundless. He is always right.

In the work of both Mr. Barrymore and Mr. Jones, it is difficult and quite unnecessary to say where they left off and where Arthur Hopkins began. Mr. Hopkins will probably have to shoulder alone the burden of responsibility for a rag-tag-and-bobtail company, of which half the players are intolerable and the other half are—well, tolerable. The most creditable work is done by E. J. Ballantine as Clarence, with further assistance that is passable by Mrs. Thomas Wise as the Duchess of York, Burford Hampden as the son of Henry, Mary Hughes as the princeling slaughtered in the Tower, Leslie Palmer as Buckingham, Stanley Warmington doubling as Clifford and Catesby, Evelyn Walsh Hall as Elizabeth, Cecil Closelly as the second murderer, and William J. Keighley as Brakenbury. The company is scarcely comparable with the one supporting Sothern and Marlowe. Perhaps we haven't enough players for two Shakespearan companies.

No account of the première of "Richard III." would be complete that did not speak of the electric atmosphere with which the house was charged—the sense of a great occasion. The combination of Arthur Hopkins, John Barrymore, and the Plymouth Theatre, with such precedents as "Redemption" and "The Jest" put into the mind of the playgoers, has recaptured for the New York stage a certain festive glamour that has been missing since Augustin Daly died. The feeling found expression when, just before the curtain rose on the third act, the other members of the famous clan, their work around town cleaned up, entered the royal box. There was thunderous applause, a great craning of necks, nudging of ribs and beaming of faces. Not far from the stage sat the blessed Tom Wise, there, no doubt, to applaud Mrs. Wise and to remember, possibly a time when he and the star of the evening appeared together in a piece called "Uncle Sam"—an obscenely worthless enterprise in which, as we recall, Mr. Barrymore sat in an arbor and embroidered. That was something less than nine years ago, and it may have run through Mr. Wise's head that a good deal had befallen his erstwhile partner in that time. Speaking of growth and change.

TO GREET ORCHESTRA.

Allied Governments to Aid Tour of Symphony Men Abroad.

Following a trip overseas by George Engles, its manager, the Symphony Society has made public the plans for its orchestra's European tour, financed by H. H. Flagler and said to be the first by a symphonic organization from this side. There have been in the past such visits abroad, however, by the Metropolitan Opera and the Kneisel Quartet and several by Sousa's Band. As now arranged, the Symphony's ninety-three players and assisting staff will sail by the Rochambeau April 22. Two American soloists are John Powell and Albert Spalding.

The French Government has put the Paris Opéra at the disposal of Dr. Damrosch for May 4, 6 and 9, and there will be a reception at the Sorbonne. The Belgian Government has offered its Théâtre de la Monnaie. In Italy the tour is patronized by the Minister of Instruction and the Academy of St. Cecilia at Rome, while in London a luncheon will be given by the Lord Mayor, who also is on the committee for concerts there on June 14, 15, 16 and 19 at Queen's Hall and June 20 at Albert Hall.

"While the tour has been undertaken primarily for artistic reasons and as a cordial greeting from the musicians of America to their European brothers," the official announcement goes on to say, "it will be not without a social and political effect in testifying to the peoples of our Allies of the sympathy and brotherhood which exist and will continue to exist between them and ourselves, despite any temporary political or economic entanglements."

Among those on the British Committee are Sir Ernest Palmer, Chairman, with Sir Ernest Cooper, the Lord Mayor, as President, and many well-known musicians, including Elgar, Cowen, German, Bridge, Mackenzie, Parrott, Stanford, Wood and Ronald. Others are Earl Howe, Sir Homewood Crawford, Dr. H. P. Allen, Charles Sleath, and Augustus Littleton, Honorary Secretary. One of the American members is Ambassador Davis. Famous French musicians, Saint-Saëns, d'Indy and Dubois, will assist the Ministry of Fine Arts in receiving the Americans in Paris.

The orchestra began its last fortnight of the home season yesterday in Aeolian Hall, with a matinée program in which Lucy Gates repeated airs of Mozart and Délibes. There remain two concerts with Rose Ponselle, and two more with Heifetz. Mr. Damrosch's men will also, before sailing, take part in his April festival here with the Oratorio Society.

LEGION FOR LAW AND ORDER

Americanization Report Favors Education to Combat Unrest.

The recommendations of the American Legion's Americanization Commission to the National Executive Committee were made public yesterday by Arthur Woods, the Chairman. The report urges cooperation of the local posts of the legion with patriotic associations and with all persons in their neighborhood who are interested in the Americanization program. Education, it says, is one of the best means of dealing with the present unrest.

Members of the legion are urged in the conclusion of the report to stand for law and order by keeping the law and by influencing others to do so.

MUSIC

Reinald Werrenrath's Recital

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, gave a song recital yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall that was heard by a large audience full of appreciation for the admirable qualities of his singing. He sang everything in English, and with a purity, clearness and polish of diction that might have been a lesson to many singers of English words. It might have been a lesson also to many who maintain that English is a language unfit for song. It would have shown them how a perfect utterance of English text is wholly compatible with a fine legato, finished phrasing, a beautiful production and placing of the tone, a varied use of registers and effects of color.

All these things were in evidence in Mr. Werrenrath's singing. The voice itself has not all the warmth and power of some, and in a song recital such as this would have a more satisfactory effect and would count for more in a smaller hall. The program began with a recitative and air from Bach's cantata, "Watch Ye, Pray Ye," "Blessed Resurrection Day," whose difficulties he surmounted with tranquillity, without the appearance of effort.

Four songs by Grieg he sang in excellent translations, made by himself and his mother. A charming Irish song, "The Ould Lad," written or arranged by Hamilton Harty, was followed by the deeply impressive "The Cost," by John Ireland, a product of the war, which Mr. Werrenrath sang with much feeling, and Vaughn Williams's poetical setting of Stevenson's "Bright in the Ring of Words." A group of four, by Deems Taylor, followed, and another by five Americans brought the recital to a close with Walter Damrosch's setting of "Danny Deever."

15,000 AT HIPPODROME.

Two Audiences Hear Bonci by Day and McCormack at Night.

Three great tenors and 15,000 other persons were at the Hippodrome's pair of concerts yesterday afternoon and night, the two events coming near to a record there. Caruso and his wife applauded from a box at the matinée of Alessandro Bonci, who, with Margaret Matzenauer and Toscha Seidel, was heard by a crowd that overflowed galleries, floor and stage. More listeners, if possible, attended last night, when John McCormack gave his eighth program this season.

Mr. McCormack sang airs of Bach and Handel, Rachmaninoff and Moussorgsky, Maude White, Tours, Kramer and Schneider. There were the old Irish melodies and a new assisting artist, Lauri Kennedy, a 'cellist from Australia, to which country Mr. McCormack himself is going soon on a round-the-world tour, though he sings at least once more here, on Easter Day.

The audience broke up one song introduced by McCormack last night. If the tenor wasn't "rattled," some thousands of programs were, as the big house turned the leaves to where a newly published ditty, with text printed in full, was sponsored as "another 'Silver Threads Among the Gold.'" As the crowd began checking up, John McCormack himself lost the words and laughed outright, then went on, and everybody was satisfied.

Hear Harrold and Rachmaninoff.

Last night's well-attended Metropolitan concert was of unusual distinction, with Mr. Rachmaninoff as guest on the opera stage, playing Liszt's A-major concerto with the orchestra, and later solo pieces, one a Liszt rhapsody in the Russian artist's own arrangement. Orville Harrold was warmly welcomed by the house in the narrative of Rodolfo from "La Boheme," and Vera Curtis sang with great charm the air from "Madame Butterfly." Even the orchestra men remained through the concert, to accompany some final songs for Mr. Harrold, two of these being composed by Conductor Hageman.

Music Notes.

A forty-seven-minute "Pagliacci" was sung at the Capitol Theatre yesterday in English text except for the tenor, Cesar Neri. Americans in the cast were Irene Williams, Raymond Hunter, William Robyn and Bertram Bailey. The last two, in minor roles, did well with their words, Mr. Robyn's little serenade from behind the scenes being applauded. Nat Finston directed the large orchestra and chorus.

The Metropolitan Opera Company opens today its sale of tickets in Atlanta, Ga., for the annual Spring festival of opera in the South. The series of seven performances will end the New York stars' activities for the season on May 1, after which many will sail for Europe. Atlanta's guarantee is $125,000 this year.

Rose Ponselle of the Metropolitan will sing at the Young Women's Hebrew Association, 31 West 110th Street, on Tuesday afternoon, for the benefit of the Federation for Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York.

The Russian Isba, recently at the Belmont and Manhattan, will move to a third theatre when it resumes its popular representation of a Slavic village festival on Thursday next at the Lexington.

GOVERNOR FOR HEALTH WORK

Urges Anti-Disease Campaign at Mrs. Vincent Astor's Home.

Governor Smith told the Maternity Centre Association at a meeting last night at the home of Mrs. Vincent Astor, 840 Fifth Avenue, that the big State question was the prevention of disease. The growth of the public health work in this State had been slow, he said, but at last there was beginning to be an awakening. He told how the appropriations had grown from $144,000 in 1910 to a request for $1,300,000 for this year.

Other speakers included Miss Anne E. Goodrich, Assistant Professor of Nursing and Health at Columbia University and Director of Nursing Service at Henry Street Settlement, and Dr. Haven Emerson. Miss Frances Perkins of the State Industrial Commission presided.

Urges Aid for Daylight Saving.

Marcus M. Marks, President of the National Daylight Saving Association, yesterday issued an appeal to all citizens in favor of the daylight saving law to write to their representatives at Albany requesting them to oppose vigorously the proposed measure to repeal the law, which is scheduled to come up for hearing before the Senate this week.

BERLIN, March 7.—The extraordinary sight of a man throwing banknotes to a large crowd following him was presented yesterday in the streets of Berlin. While the people were fighting with each other for twenty and fifty mark notes, this rare philanthropist would continue running, followed by a few men who never heeded his bounty, thrown at their heads in large bundles.

STATE INCOME TAX AMENDMENTS.

Rapid progress is being made with the amendment to the New York income tax law to make it conform to the decision of the Federal Supreme Court requiring the removal of discrimination against non-residents. That must be done, and there are other amendments worthy of consideration. In Section 366 there is an apparent discrimination against non-residents in that they are subject to a flat 2 per cent. tax instead of a graduated tax. Nevertheless, under a ruling of the Attorney General the withholding has been according to the graduated tax collected from residents. There would seem to be reason to make the statute and the practice under it conform.

Furthermore, since the theory of the law is to follow the Federal income tax law, there are other inequalities which might be corrected at the same time. There have been five radically different Federal individual income tax laws within a few years, and each of the five is still under construction by both the courts and the Treasury. Departures from the Federal practice are necessary to conform the State law to State conditions, as respects both New York conditions specifically and the general relations between State and nation. There are no court decisions whether or not it is unconstitutional for the Federal Government to tax the salaries of State officials, and vice versa. The Federal act does tax State salaries, but the Treasury, on a ruling of the Attorney General, has decided that the United States has no authority to collect such a tax. The New York law assumes to allow to those receiving income from the United States only "so much of the personal "exemption * * * as is in excess of "the aggregate amount of such salaries, wages or other compensation." That provision is altogether objectionable, since its effect is to deprive men who served in the war of a large part of their personal exemption. A bill correcting this wrong has been introduced.

Another point arises under the regulations rather than under the law. The Controller has ruled that exemption may be claimed for dues paid under a Chamber of Commerce membership, but not for dues to a trade union. There is less option about the payment of union dues than about paying Chamber of Commerce and similar dues. The Controller classes the latter with items of cost, and with selling and management expenses. Assuming that he is correct in that, the reasoning is applicable to union dues, to which exemption is denied as falling within the non-exempt class of "personal, living or family expenses." It would seem unnecessary to argue regarding the necessity of union membership for those who wish to be unionists, and indeed for many who do not so wish. There is a further anomaly in the New York law in that it exempts income-producing personalty from taxation under the personal property tax, but does not exempt personalty yielding no income. The tax under the property tax for property yielding no income may be larger than the income tax on similar productive property.

Since the New York forms ask the taxpayer to conform his statement to the Federal statement, or to explain any difference, it would seem that the State might make his task easier by itself establishing conformity in the two procedures. There are two conspicuous differences—the calculation of interest deductions and the taxation of dividends. Schoolboys might be able to do the sum set about the interest deductions under the New York law, but it is safe to say that there are many women and some men who find difficulty either in understanding the law or in making the calculation under the law. Without raising the point whether the State should tax dividends already once taxed, which the United States exempts from the normal tax, at least it may be suggested that the dividend item might be placed in the same place in the two forms. In short, since the State follows the Federal precedent in principle, and so largely in detail, why might it not go further and take the Federal income as the taxable base and spare the taxpayer a double task?

SPRIGHTLY MR. EDWARDS.

It appears certain that Governor EDWARDS of New Jersey intends to prevent the Democratic National Convention from becoming listless. His latest feat, performed in Indiana, was of a character to startle every other Democratic Presidential aspirant. Vice President MARSHALL and ex-Secretary McADOO intended to enter the lists there, but as the Vice President desired an uninstructed delegation he and Mr. McADOO entered into a gentlemen's agreement not to present their preference primary petitions. Suddenly EDWARDS, of whom neither of them had been dreaming, sprang into the lists with a petition. MARSHALL's friends rushed into the primary with theirs and McADOO's friends tried to do the same thing, but they were too late; the time for filing petitions was past.

What will Governor EDWARDS do next? The worst of it is that he must know very well he cannot be nominated and is probably merely seeking a post from which he can worry Mr. BRYAN when the convention meets. It is all very well to say that Mr. BRYAN will have the whole South behind him on the prohibition issue, but it is strange, if that is the case, that the Democratic caucus of the Virginia Legislature last Thursday turned down the Anti-Saloon League's candidate for Prohibition Commissioner, who was also the candidate of the Democratic machine, and nominated instead a candidate of whom it was said by the father of the Virginia dry law that his election would mean the defeat of prohibition in Virginia. For a long time we have been hearing about what Mr. BRYAN is going to do as a trouble-maker at San Francisco, how he is going to tear the convention loose from its moorings and seize the ship and cargo. Governor EDWARDS has evidently determined to become an active participant in the fine row that will result from the attempt to execute that design.

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT.

In his address before the League of Industrial Rights Governor ALLEN of Kansas said that the "fair-minded leaders of labor" would admit that "the rights of women and children "and the general public to an adequate supply of the bare necessaries "of life are superior to the right of "labor or capital to stop production "in the interests of a selfish quarrel." Unfortunately, leaders of labor have not put themselves on record to admit anything of the kind. Did the officers of the United Mine Workers allow humane considerations to embarrass them at the time of the great coal strike? Was it not with them the union first, last and all the time, no matter who suffered? The leaders of the strike were individually restrained by the injunction which the Government asked for in the interests of the general public, but the miners refused to return to work.

In Kansas the strike failed as soon as the State called for volunteers to dig coal, and their production saved consumers from freezing. At that point "the striking miners," according to Governor ALLEN, "appeared "and asked the volunteers to let them "have their jobs back." And yet their leaders had boasted that "not a "pound of coal would ever be mined "in that district except by union "miners." Thus they yielded only to the State which they had sought to supplant. Duress had failed. The right of the people to the means of existence had not been recognized. No "fair-minded leader of labor" had intervened, or even raised his voice in behalf of the principle proclaimed by Governor ALLEN.

Although the coal miners of Kansas had seen their work done by volunteers and knew they were beaten, there would be other disputes with the operators. With the design of assuring industrial peace, the Governor of Kansas sent to the Legislature his bill to establish a court which was to settle such disputes. The bill quickly became a law because it reflected the desire of the people, who plainly were not in sympathy with the new policy of the unions to make the power to strike stronger than any process of representative government. It was much thinking about the right of the people at all times to "an adequate "supply of those products which are "absolutely necessary to the sustaining of the life of civilized people" that prompted Governor ALLEN to apply to the Legislature, but he hoped that the adoption of his proposals would "make strikes, lockouts, boycotts and blacklists unnecessary and "impossible."

The industrial court is now working smoothly. Governor ALLEN reports that the maintenance-of-way unions of the railroad men have decided to recognize the tribunal, and that other classes of railroad men in Kansas are following their example. In that State labor is beginning to see that the law establishing the Court of Industrial Relations is as fair to the unions as to the employers, and that disputes can be settled without loss of wages and without detriment to the foundation principle of organization. But outside the State labor leaders are hostile. There are threats to boycott Kansas and operatives are urged to go elsewhere for work. There is, however, a conservative element in the unions that has been restive under the arbitrary rule of the radicals. Governor ALLEN expects that, if the radicals quit Kansas, men who want peace and steady employment will come in. The success of the Court of Industrial Relations has not yet been demonstrated, but it is full of promise. It will be attacked, of course, on every conceivable legal ground. In the end the principles upon which it is founded will prevail. As a pioneer HENRY J. ALLEN has earned the gratitude of his countrymen.

CO-MANAGER HITCHCOCK.

General WOOD's campaign has suffered at times, prosperous as its general course has been, from natural, and perhaps unavoidable, jealousies or dissensions among some of its leaders. In Connecticut and Oklahoma there were clashes of chieftains. In a sense there has been apparently a zone of cold separating amateurs from the skilled political laborers. It may be assumed that Mr. FRANK H. HITCHCOCK's consent to be the co-manager with Colonel PROCTER of the Wood canvass means that many causes of trouble have been or will be removed, and that there may be a reconciliation to it of the experienced "organization" machine Republicans, the veteran professionals who have seemed inclined to regard General WOOD as an outsider, an intruder, a person whom professional politicians regard with suspicion as a being of another kind, difficult for old hands to trust or to do business with.

At any rate, the General is fortunate in having on his side one of the cleverest, most persuasive and most successful of delegate-charmers and delegate-collectors. Mr. HITCHCOCK is an engaging and a popular man. He has an unabatable love and genius for politics. Though he has held one high Federal office and several minor ones, it is not office that he seeks. He has a disinterested passion for the game, for the strategy and tactics of a political campaign. In 1908 he showed his consummate abilities, and in the unluckier years 1912 and 1916 he did the best that could be done.

Quiet, reticent, thoughtful, wise to plan, swift in surprises, he has mastered the art or science of campaign management. The combat deepens. The bannermen of other Republican "booms" may well expect nervous hours.

RESALE PRICE DECISIONS.

There have been almost as many decisions about the fixing of resale prices as there have been about the right of trusts to live, and for the same reason. The power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce in the public interest has been prostituted into a usurpation of a right to regulate contracts between individuals respecting interstate commerce. So long as such contracts affect the individuals alone and are not prejudicial to public interest, the right of regulation does not extend to them any more than it does to manufacture. The highest court decided in a very early case that manufacture was distinct from interstate commerce. In the Colgate case the Supreme Court decided that producers have a right to decide with whom they will do business and are not under obligation to serve all comers. Private producers are not public utilities and they have a right to settle for themselves with whom they will deal and on what terms. In that case there was a refusal to supply goods to dealers who refused to charge the resale prices the COLGATES fixed, and that was decided within the rights of the COLGATES. But now the Supreme Court apparently reverses that decision by sustaining an indictment resembling that quashed in the Colgate case, the distinction being that in the Schrader case decided last week sales were made only to those who submitted to the requirement of a contract that they would respect the fixed resale rules. The Government thought that this unduly restricted competition and the court took that view.

So far as is reported, the Government was the only complainant. The case was on a demurrer, involving only a construction of the law and not on the facts. There is no testimony that the case concerned any interest except that of those whose competition was restrained by the contract between them. There is no proof of any conduct contrary to good morals, of any public necessity that this particular article should be supplied to the public at any price; in short, there is no proof of any public grievance except the Attorney General's duty to enforce the Sherman law. No doubt it seemed to the Supreme Court, although it may seem otherwise to traders and producers, that the case came within the court's declaration that > public welfare is first considered, and if it be not involved and the restraint upon one party is not greater than the protection to the other party requires, the contract may be sustained.

The Attorney General is specifically charged with the enforcement of the Sherman law and has reason for his activities which the Federal Trade Commission lacks, except so far as it interprets its duties under the law creating it. But the Trade Commission disturbs trade even more vexatiously, going further than the courts sustain it in its assumption of duties without request, however well meant are its efforts.

NO WAY TO MAKE FRIENDS.

An incidental reference in the Italian note to the allied Premiers of Jan. 6 throws some light on the question of the possible good relations in future between Italians and Jugoslavs. That such good relations are necessary for both peoples is recognized by the wiser men in both Governments, and most notably by Mr. NITTI. The Jugoslavs, indeed, have incurred some criticism by their apparent failure to see that they must be either the friends or the enemies of a nation three times their size, and that it is to their interest to reach a settlement which will not be too greatly resented by either party to the dispute.

But in discussing the question of Fiume the Italian note observes, quite accurately, that the Treaty of London was drawn up at a time when the collapse of Austria-Hungary was not foreseen, and when it was supposed that the independent part of the Jugoslav race would be divided between three States—Serbia, Croatia and Montenegro. Some men in Italy were of great help to the Jugoslavs in the struggle which eventually led to the independence and unity of the entire race, but others steadfastly opposed it. Now, says the Italian note, there has arisen "a great Jugoslav State which "even threatens to absorb Monte"negro."

Aside from ex-King NICHOLAS and his court, a certain section of Italian opinion is the only part of the world which does not recognize that the union of the Montenegrin Serbs with their kinsmen, by the will of the Montenegrins themselves, is an accomplished fact, as much as the reunion of the Italians of the Trentino with Italy. The Queen of Italy, to be sure, was a Montenegrin Princess, but one hardly supposes that dynastic influence on Italian foreign politics can account for this stubborn refusal to recognize a fact of history. The Italians have ignored the expression of self-determination in Montenegro; one abortive arising after another has been instigated in Italy and suppressed by the Montenegrins. That is not the way to make friends.

Nor is this the only manifestation of what the Jugoslavs may be excused for regarding as irreconcilable hostility. The quite unjustifiable harshness that has in many places marked the Italian occupation of territory which, unless the Treaty of London is enforced in full, is to go to the Jugoslavs, would of itself create hostility that would be long in dying out. But that affects the whole nation; more devious and more dangerous have been the Italian efforts to divide the Jugoslavs. The Montenegrin intrigues are one side of the matter; there has also been some effort to set Serbs, Croats and Slovenes against one another. For geographical reasons the Slovenes will have to make most of the concessions to Italy in any compromise settlement; the Italians approved Jugoslav annexations in Northern Albania, in the January plan, because those accessions would benefit the Serbian part of the people and might be badly received by Croats and Slovenes who were losing Istria and Fiume.

Now comes the proposal to readjust the frontiers of Hungary. Observers by no means hostile to Italy see in this an effort to cripple Jugoslavia, even if the friendly Czechoslovaks and the still more friendly Rumanians have to suffer in the process. Mr. NITTI ought to see that these acts of his subordinates are the chief obstacle to that era of good feeling which he himself is doing most to make possible.

THE TRUTH FROM TURKEY.

The Turks have complained that they were slandered in the stories of the massacres at Marash, and their Chamber of Deputies has asked that an American commission make an investigation. Perhaps their touching reliance on us is due to our unaccountable unwillingness to declare war on them; at any rate, we do not have to wait for the commission. In the diary of an American relief worker who was at Marash during the massacres we now have the facts from an impartial source.

The Rev. C. T. S. CRATHERN of Boston, whose story was published on Saturday, is presumably one of those Americans whom the Turkish Nationalists represented, during the massacres, as "drinking their chocolate "and enjoying themselves—all safe, "even their poultry." It now appears that if the poultry were secure it was due to the French troops and such Armenians as could find arms, who fought gallantly against heavy odds. The American hospital was bombarded and assaulted; the American flag was fired on; an American orphanage was burned and the eighty-five Armenian girls whom it sheltered after their release from Turkish harems were massacred. The Americans were not enjoying themselves; they were taking care of refugees, feeding them, nursing the sick and wounded, giving shelter to tortured fugitives who had seen members of their families massacred before their eyes and in flat violation of Turkish promises.

The French sent a relief column which apparently beat off the Turks for the moment, but was not strong enough to hold the town. So the retreat began, and thousands of Armenians followed it. A thousand of them at the very least starved to death on the way or died of exposure in the snowstorms. Armenian estimates put the dead as high as 15,000 or 20,000; French official figures set the number at only 5,000. The massacre at Marash gives us evidence about the Turks if any were needed. They are the same Turks. While their fate is being discussed by the Supreme Council they break out once more into an orgy of bloodshed and arson, murdering by thousands a people far superior to themselves; and then they blandly lie about it and expect America to believe them.

The Supreme Council, we hear, was profoundly stirred by confirmation of news that it refused to believe so long as there was any possible excuse for doubting it, and a little longer. It was so deeply moved that it began to consider punishing the Turks by depriving them of the Enos-Midia frontier and reducing their European holdings to the City of Constantinople and its suburbs. But that was precisely what the Council was talking of doing a week ago; it has been a long time since anything was said—in public—about the Enos-Midia line. In short, this revelation of the unchanged disposition of the Turks has stirred the Supreme Council so deeply that it is now thinking of really doing what last week it was only pretending to do in order to escape criticism.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Talking While Children Starve.

There is some hope now that Congress will rush through the bill permitting a credit of $50,000,000 to finance loans for food to Poland, Armenia and Austria. The sum originally asked was $125,000,000, and Congress cut this down in the interests of economy, but it began to look as if nothing would be done at all until Mr. JULIUS BARNES said that the Grain Corporation might ship the flour anyway and trust to the honor of the foreign Governments for repayment. The flour in question is of a type which it is almost impossible to sell here; American consumers prefer another kind. In the famished countries to which relief is to be extended they have no choice. It is a question of getting some kind of food or of starving.

Much of the opposition to this action has been promoted by those who are steadily hostile to Poland because Poland is a hindrance to Bolshevist Russia and to Germany. The Congressmen who have wasted time while children are dying every day are, of course, not affected by this consideration, but by objections to pauperizing an entire people. But these objections do not meet the point. In the case of Poland there is no question of pauperization; with the present food shortage met, Poland will be able to feed herself hereafter, unless all signs fail. Unless this shortage is supplied from America, Poland will be weakened against the Bolshevist attack which will come in the Spring unless peace is made, and some of the allies of Poland are making it as hard as possible for her to get a safe peace.

With this shipment of food the Poles would be reinforced and able to hold their own through what one may hope will be the last serious crisis in the formative period of the new State. Americans who understand anything about European politics might be justified in supporting the proposal on political grounds alone, for a strong Poland will be directly advantageous to America, and the collapse of Poland will profit only our enemies.

Reluctance Is Not Customary.

Austria and Armenia, to be sure, are in a different class; in the case of each, permanent restoration depends on political factors. The Austrians are making a gallant effort to become self-supporting with the assistance of their neighbors who were lately their subjects, and it is by no means impossible that they will do so. The severance of Austria from Germany was a measure of very doubtful advisability, and may not be permanent. But in the meantime the Austrians are starving.

The settlement of Armenia depends on the attitude of the Allies toward Turkey, but if the Turk is treated as he deserves there can be no doubt of the rapid recovery and eventual prosperity of the Armenian nation. In the meantime the Armenians are starving, and their enemies are using the decrease in their numbers as an argument for leaving them in the hands of the Turks.

This is not a gift, it is a loan; and a loan certain to be repaid in the case of Poland, likely to be repaid in the case of Armenia, and with a good chance of repayment in the case of Austria. And it is a loan out of profits already accumulated by the Grain Corporation. It will now, we are told, probably go through Congress this week; the haste is commendable if somewhat belated. America's traditional response to great disasters was of another sort. If a few years ago we heard that some earthquake or other natural catastrophe had reduced millions of people to starvation, our aid would have been prompt and generous, nor would it have ceased until the distress was relieved. Now in the presence of an earthquake which lasted five years our emotions are dulled and our response is hesitant and belated. Thousands have died while we waited; we can still save other thousands.

The Relation of Jazz to Blizzards.

A weather prophet is not without honor in his own country. DE VOE of Hackensack has followers, although he is seldom right when he startles the world with his meteorological portents. His successes are remembered, and when he has misread the atmospheric signs his failures are forgotten, even by himself. One MICHAEL DELANEY of Moravia, N. Y., has made the discovery that the unpleasant frequency of blizzards this Winter is due to too much jazz. This is doubtless a bold theory, but in its favor may be set down the fact that Mr. DELANEY has "predicted weather for sixty years and last Fall predicted the hardest Winter on record." There was a very hard one two years ago, when the lowest temperature in this city had another tumble, falling eight points. There seemed to be no end of snow. But perhaps Mr. DELANEY predicted the bitterness of that Winter, too.

Every weather prophet has his successes if he keeps at it patiently. In regard to the real cause of blizzards the Moravian oracle, who probably hates jazz, says that "musical vibrations help to keep the air heavy, bringing down the storm clouds." In his vicinity, as elsewhere, there is a great deal, perhaps too much, of jazz. The louder and more discordant and more persistent it is, the greater the vibrations, which, however, cannot be called musical. Jazz can shake down a ceiling. Before dismissing Mr. DELANEY's theory as unscientific, an inquiry might be made into the frequency of weather disturbances where jazz has driven out the old sentimental refrains as well as classical music and there is nothing left but explosions of brass.

Must the Lobster Become Extinct?

Dull must be the once famed "lobster palaces," the glory of Lobsteria and Broadway, since the loss of the accompanying flagon that cheers, and the price of this titbit of the sea has long been too steep for common wallets. Still, the fate of this beloved of midnight suppers can't cease to interest retired epicureans. The United States Bureau of Fisheries tells us it has given up lobster hatching for want of funds; and it never got money enough to make any headway against an insatiate demand, the pernicious activity of the lobster fishers and the all but universal violation of the laws to protect "short" lobsters.

Maine points an accusing finger at Massachusetts, Massachusetts at Maine. The truth is that lobster catching is a mighty profitable industry, and that "Summer folks" love lobsters more than the law. The amateur of the lobster may be said to suffer from a mania. He is not responsible. The alienists would save him at a pinch. Pitiless is the lobsterian inveterate. He must eat, or he will die.

He will have to perish, for the lobster, potted ferociously and gobbled, must become extinct, the Fishery Bureau says, unless the taking of egg-bearing and "short" lobsters ends. Farewell to the chiefest treasure of the deep, the noblest ornament of the table, the bright companion of the Würzburger that flows no more.

ENDOWED PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A Neglected but Direct Way of Serving the Public Good.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the midst of the numerous drives that are now in full swing for endowments and funds for private educational institutions, it may not be amiss to call attention to the fact that our public schools are being entirely overlooked.

It was quite natural that, while one's relations to his fellows were local and concrete, benefactions for the public good should be closely related to the benefactor. This impulse found expression in a library or hospital for the old home town. The simple education of the little red school house didn't need much outside help. Before the State applied itself to higher education there had to be, in the nature of things, an era of endowed academies and colleges. Gradually all that service is being taken over more and more by the State, and a new sort of public spirit has become necessary, with a heavier accent on the public. With a mass of new ideas and untested theories crowding aggressively upon us, we need as never before to get at the truth, and how shall we find the truth unless by earnest, tolerant, open-minded investigation, and through the constructive processes of education? How shall we maintain the old American ideas of individual energy and thrift and of respect for honorable individual success unless by convincing the great body of our citizens from childhood up that the American system is based upon sound views of justice and common interests?

The public schools are in a great measure dependent upon the teachers for whatever success may be accomplished. Their training and attitude toward their high calling is a greater determinant of what the schools shall be than the character of the building or the mere physical equipment. And let me add that most of these teachers are trained in public schools, especially in the State Normal and teacher-training institutions and our city and State colleges.

It is a fact which should challenge attention that the munificent gifts, endowments and bequests of the builders of great fortunes have done little to allay the suspicions of those in our country who are preaching the gospel of class hatred, the gospel which thrives on the belief that our men of wealth are not interested in the welfare of the masses of our people. What better antidote to this than liberal giving to the schools of the people? Gifts to museums, libraries, hospitals and great corporation universities are laudable. But they do not touch the great masses of the American people closely enough.

Whether justified or not, there is even a feeling abroad that they exemplify the rich giving to the rich. "To them that hath shall be given" will never be popular doctrine. It is one of the solemn jokes of New England tradition that no person within the Boston pale can die in an atmosphere of respectability without leaving some gift to Harvard University. Can we hope to see a similar loyalty developed with respect to our public schools?

Suppose memorial high schools or elementary schools were as many in New York as the Carnegie Libraries. Or suppose a chemistry department or a music department were specially endowed at Hunter College or the College of the City of New York, is there any room for doubt what it would mean to the taxpayers of this city? What better way to perpetuate a name or sweeten the memory of a departed one?

Let us square our practice with our theory in dealing with the great American schools. Let us make them truly the bulwarks of democracy and the open door to opportunity. Builders of great fortunes, men and women of wealth, holders of "public trusts," a splendid opportunity is open to you.

For the Rent Bills.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Whither are we bound if the increasing cost of living is not checked? Pending bills at Albany that aim to relieve part of this pressing problem should receive the unqualified support of the entire public, press and pulpit. It is certainly for the best interests of all that this increasing evil should be curbed before it does more harm. Rampant, ruthless rent-raising is one of the chief causes of prevailing unrest. Numerous people who have established decent homes and places of business after years of conscientious effort are suddenly confronted by the demand for double and treble rents. This, in many instances, spells ruin for them.

Landlords and dealers are entitled to a fair return upon their investment, but those who take advantage of economic disturbances that have been fostered to a great extent by themselves unquestionably undermine the welfare of our country and should be dealt with as "enemies within our gate." Public policy demands that the City, State and Federal Governments should control merciless profiteers who exact enormous profits from their helpless fellow-citizens. When the strict enforcement of existing laws is not adequate to meet the exigencies of the present intolerable situation, new measures should be enacted as soon as possible that will halt unconscionable greed.

VESTRY ASSAILS SEDITION.

Episcopal Officials Commend Bishop's Stand in Grant Case.

To the rector of every church in the Episcopal Diocese of New York has been mailed a copy of resolutions recently passed by the vestry of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Eighty-fourth Street, near Central Park West, which deplore seditious speech "within or without the church" and commend Bishop Charles S. Burch for his recent efforts to silence all such utterances by his clergy. The Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Judge is rector of St. Matthew's, and Walter B. Tufts is clerk of the vestry.

Extracts of minutes of the meeting of St. Matthew's vestry as included in the circular letter, which it is understood refer to the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, are:

"Whereas, the Bishop of the diocese has publicly declared: 'In these days of unrest, uncertainty and difficulty, every true American citizen should be most careful about words or acts which in any least particular point to a spirit of disloyalty in the Government,' and

"Whereas, that under the cloak of 'freedom of speech' certain discussions frequently lead to the abuse thereof, and become the foundation for license to utter seditious opinions, which are clearly and unmistakably subversive of reverence for constituted authority or law and order, and

"Whereas, it is our firm belief and conviction that every good churchman should not only exercise great care not to say or do anything that can be misconstrued, but should also come out clearly and strongly in favor of loyalty to the Government and the maintenance of law and order; now be it

"Resolved, that the Rector, church wardens and vestrymen of St. Matthew's Church of the city of New York, recognizing the difficulty and unrest of the times, do hereby declare their loyalty to the Constitution of the United States, and do hereby deplore any discussions within or without the church which tend toward seditious opinions, and be it further

"Resolved, that the patriotic actions of the Bishop of the diocese in all such matters are heartily approved and have the unreserved and unfailing support of the vestry of St. Matthew's Church, and be it further

"Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions, duly attested, be sent to the Bishop of the diocese of New York."

The resolutions are sent to the Episcopal rectors "with the hope that it may be of interest to your vestry and parish."

DR. THOMAS TO AID GITLOW.

Appeals in Chelsea Presbyterian Church for Defense Fund.

The Rev. Dr. Norman M. Thomas, Presbyterian, appealed for funds for the aid of Benjamin Gitlow, at the close of a lecture at the Chelsea Presbyterian Church, before the American Economic and Literary Society's forum, yesterday. Dr. Thomas is the editor of The World To-morrow and a member of many radical societies. He said the collection in question would be used in particular "to obtain the best kind of legal defense for Benjamin Gitlow," and urged his hearers to contribute as a sign of their support of the right of free speech.

"The Disintegration of the European Capitalistic System" was the subject of Dr. Thomas's lecture. He prophesied that a similar process was slowly but surely going on in this country.

Referring to his recent visit to Albany, where he testified that socialism did not mean the overthrow of religion and the home, Dr. Thomas said:

"All the religion the Albany Legislature has is an idea of God as a big policeman who is going to hit some one over the head."

PLAN MUHLENBERG STATUE.

Holy Communion Church Starts Fund to Honor Founder.

Steps toward placing a memorial statue of the late Rev. Dr. William Augustus Muhlenberg, founder and first pastor, in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth Avenue and Twentieth Street, were taken yesterday morning at the first "Founders' Day" service. This was the first free Episcopal church in the United States. A generous collection was received for the monument, which it is proposed to place in the North transept.

The Rev. Dr. John A. W. Haas, President of Muhlenberg College, was to have preached the sermon, but was prevented by illness. The Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet, pastor, reviewed the benefactions of Dr. Muhlenberg, who was a Lutheran before entering the Episcopal priesthood. In the audience were delegations from the Trustees of St. Luke's Hospital, which Dr. Muhlenberg founded; Trustees of St. Johnland, Long Island, a series of homes for orphans and aged, which Dr. Muhlenberg started; also the women's auxiliaries of both these institutions. Many Lutherans were present.

Dr. McNeill Declines Call Here.

The Rev. Dr. John McNeill, pastor of the Highland Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Ala., has declined the call to the pastorate of the Fort Washington Presbyterian Church, Broadway and 174th Street. He received a unanimous call on Feb. 25, to succeed the Rev. Dr. Daniel Hoffman Martin, first pastor of the church, who died Jan. 2.

THE CALL.

The city is calling; I hear the ring
Of its constant call in the dreary Spring,
When mud stands deep in the pasture lane
And thick mists hang where the coulees meet,
Threatening another chilly rain—
A thicker drag for my anchored feet.
The wild goose wings to his northland call,
The quail remains, for he has no dream;
But I dream on throughout it all,
Just drift along like a sluggard stream
That knows not whither its course may lead.
The city is calling, and I must heed.

The city is calling; I hear its voice
While the pastures sing and the woods rejoice.
Beyond the hedges wild roses grow;
My mind sees only the city walls.
A perfume drifts from the orchard's snow;
I know it not when the city calls.
Over against that gray-green hill
Glistens the house where Nellie lives;
Springtime loiters, and yet I will
Not claim the heart she so gladly gives;
Hiding my love that she may not know.
The city is calling, and I must go.

The city is calling. If it would cease,
The soil could shackle my hands in peace;
But darkness comes with the brightest dawn
To him whose will has been lured away,
And work is death when the heart has gone
To another field where it's always day.
The road is open, I've said good-bye,
I've steeled myself to the heavy pack;
Farewell again to the fields and sky,
And mother, who longs to call me back,
As she waves her hand from the outer gate;
But the city is calling, I cannot wait.

L'ENVOI.

The city is calling. Each whispering row
Of corn is begging me not to go;
My boyhood bids me to turn and stay,
But the city is calling, I must away.

HARPER O'TARA.

MONDELL ASSAILS M'ADOO LOAN PLAN

Calls It Impracticable and Says It Would Bring on a Panic.

URGES CUTTING EXPENSES

Representative Asserts Ex-Secretary's Policy in 1919 Caused Three Billion Indebtedness.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Representative Mondell, Republican House leader, issued a statement tonight in which he asserted that the proposal by ex-Secretary McAdoo for another loan as a means of reducing taxation was impracticable and opposed by Treasury officials. The only way to reduce taxes, he insisted, was by keeping down expenditures. The statement follows:

"The universal desire to have tax burdens reduced afforded ex-Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo opportunity for wide publicity of his suggestion, made last Friday, of a reduction of taxes and a new issue of bonds. Those familiar with the financial situation of the Government must, however, have been at a loss to understand how the distinguished ex-Secretary hopes to reduce taxation while the Administration demands for appropriation far outrun the estimated receipts. The ex-Secretary's recommendation of a bond issue is even more extraordinary in view of the fact that the responsible officials of the Treasury and of the Federal Reserve Board are unanimous in their opinion as to the disastrous consequences of any large issue of Government bonds at this time or any time in the near future.

"Before there can be any reduction of the volume of taxes there must be a reduction of expenditure and it is toward such reduction that the Congress is now bending its energies. If the people of the country will give the Congress support in its program for the reduction of expenditures we shall soon reach a time when we can talk about reducing taxes. Unfortunately, many of those who are most insistent upon a reduction of taxes are equally insistent upon the continuation of great expenditure along lines that particularly appeal to them.

"Ex-Secretary McAdoo is, more than any other man, responsible for the present situation, for he it was who planned the financial program of the war; he it was who insisted upon the reduction of Government income while Government expenditures were at their maximum. Out of this grew the enormous war overhang of over three billions of floating indebtedness that constitutes a constant financial menace.

"If Mr. McAdoo, as Secretary of the Treasury, had not insisted on a heavy reduction of Federal revenue for the calendar year 1919, while the Administration was still running things at a war level, or if Liberty and Victory bonds had been sold in sufficient sums to take up the actual war expenses that were not met by current revenues, we could now be discussing the reduction of taxes.

"It is the opinion of the responsible officers of the Treasury that no large issue of bonds could be floated at this time at less than 6 per cent.; that such an issue would send former issues below 80 cents and imperil the specie basis of our currency. It is astonishing that the ex-Secretary should recommend a procedure so perilous.

"We are hoping to reduce the appropriations at least a billion and a quarter dollars below the estimates, and to avoid any considerable expenditure over and beyond the estimates. If the country will support the Congress in this policy and cease demanding extraordinary appropriations we will soon be in a position to reduce taxes, but the reduction in expenditures must come first. Ex-Secretary McAdoo's proposal to issue bonds to take up floating indebtedness, and to afford funds to take the place of the interest that our foreign creditors failed to pay would bring a panic rather than relief."

RARE HONOR FOR WARBURG.

"Hober" Degree to Reward His Services to Jewish War Sufferers.

The Talmudical degree of "Hober," given only in recognition of great humanitarian services, and never before awarded in this country, soon will be conferred upon Felix M. Warburg for his work in relieving the Jews of Europe during the war.

This announcement was made last night by the Rev. Dr. Bernard Drachman, Rabbi of the First Hungarian Congregation, Ohab Zedek, at a celebration in honor of Moritz Neuman, President of the Synagogue, who has been affiliated with it for the past forty years.

The "Hober" degree last was conferred upon Sir Moses Montefiore for saving the Jewish population of Damascus in 1848.

GRANT STARTS NEW FORUM.

Will Meet in Church of Ascension Parish House.

Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, announced last night the formation of a mid-week forum. It is to meet every Thursday night at the parish house.

"If we haven't a chance to unburden our souls here, come Thursday night to the parish house," said Dr. Grant in explaining the new forum.

The remark was taken by some to be a reference to the new régime at the church after Bishop Charles S. Burch ruled that there was to be no more speaking from the floor, in order to prevent radical utterances in the edifice. No restriction was placed on meetings in the parish house.

Dr. Grant explained that at the Thursday night meetings everybody would have a chance to be heard. He indicated that one of the principal functions of the forum would be to encourage this.

The speaker at the church last night was Dr. William R. Shepherd, Professor of History in Columbia University, whose subject was "America at the International Crossroads."

ASKS RULE BY BALLOT.

Rev. Dr. Silverman Says People Can Govern Without Revolution.

We need a stronger loyalty to our Government and greater faith in our Constitution, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman declared yesterday in Temple Emanu-El. He said socialism only could come through the overthrow of government by violence, and called the Bolshevist Government in Russia socialism in operation, with Lenin and Trotzky ruling not by law, but by bullet.

The clergyman said citizens here should take greater advantage of the ballot, many having shown indifference at the primaries and on Election Day. Thus, he said, the people could rule without revolution.

'WET' BILL FOLLOWS A. E. F. REGULATIONS

Colonel Gillett to Present Measure Tonight in State Legislature.

ELIMINATES THE SALOON

Sale of 3½ Per Cent. Beer and 10 Per Cent. Wines Legalized in Hotels, Clubs and Restaurants.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—Colonel Ransom H. Gillett, Republican Assemblyman from Columbia County, who served with the Twenty-seventh Division abroad, will introduce a bill in the Legislature tomorrow night permitting the sale of three and one-half per cent. beer and wines containing up to ten per cent. alcohol, under regulations adopted by the American Expeditionary Forces in France.

The bill would eliminate the saloon. It would permit the sale of beer and wines under licenses and regulations to be formulated by the State Excise Department, which under the provisions would be transformed into a liquor tax department. Colonel Gillett estimates that the licensing provision would bring to the State Treasury about $6,000,000 in taxes a year.

Light wines and beer would be obtainable only in restaurants, hotels and clubs. None of these places would be permitted to have a bar. The local option feature of the old liquor tax law would be continued.

The bill provides that a person may manufacture beer or wine for his own use without a license so long as he does not sell it. It permits the manufacture, storage or sale of intoxicating liquors defined as having over ten per cent. alcohol content under stringent regulations to be enforced by the Excise Department. The use of intoxicating liquors is authorized for medicinal, culinary or manufacturing purposes, and a system of checks on sales and ultimate consumption is written into the bill. This provision, Colonel Gillett believes, will prevent the use of these liquors for beverage purposes.

Severe penalties are prescribed for violations and the State Excise Department is authorized to institute civil and criminal proceedings for violations. The hours for selling beer and wines would be between 6 A. M. and 11 P. M., except on Sunday, when they could be legally sold between noon and 8 P. M.

There are indications that the Legislature will favor the legalization of beer and light wines sales. The fact that the Cuvillier resolution to investigate the Anti-Saloon League was passed over the active opposition of Speaker Sweet and Simon L. Adler, majority leader, leads close observers to believe that the Assembly will not consider prohibition enforcement legislation with much regard to party lines.

There is admittedly a strong undercurrent among the new members especially to vote on the prohibition measures as independents, and many have declared they will not caucus and thus be bound by party action on prohibition legislation. It was caucus action by the Republican party last year that placed New York State in the ratification column on the Eighteenth Amendment.

Among the new members, and especially those who served in the war—there are thirty-five of them in the lower house—there is a strong feeling that if the Prohibitionists are sure of their strength as a political factor they should be willing to go before the people as a separate party this Fall with the "dry" question as an issue and not identify themselves with either of the major parties.

Colonel Gillett tonight, in announcing his intention to introduce his bill, said:

"I believe it is not only within the power of the State to exercise the concurrent power to enact appropriate legislation to carry out the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment, but it is the duty of the State to do so. All are agreed that the Volstead act is unenforceable. The best proof of that is that Mr. Roper, the man who tried to enforce it with all the power of the Government behind him, found it impossible to do so and resigned. The Federal authorities attempted to enforce some provisions of the Volstead law in Michigan, and had to recede from their position.

Mr. Anderson will address a meeting of the Methodist ministers at 150 Fifth Avenue at 12:15 o'clock today.

ARRESTED IN BANK ROBBERY

Battery Park National Loss Reported as Two Are Taken.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 7.—While heading north on a big game hunt two men, describing themselves as Sanford H. Pollet and Charles Bevans, were arrested here tonight in connection with the theft of $3,400 from the Battery Park National Bank of New York City. The men had $1,000.

At Police Headquarters, it was stated last night that nothing was known of the arrest of the two men or of the robbery of the bank.

Say Check Boy Stole Lippitt's Wallet

PROVIDENCE, March 7.—John F. Dailey, formerly a check boy at a local club, was brought back here today from Boston on an accusation of having stolen a coat belonging to former United States Senator Henry F. Lippitt of this city. Dailey, the police and Mr. Lippitt say, took the latter's coat last Wednesday night at the Senator's club, and, instead of checking it and the $550 in cash in one of the pockets, departed hastily in a taxicab for Boston. There he had spent more than $400, the greater part of it for clothes, before the police brought him back.

$336,777,572 BUDGET INTERCHURCH GOAL

Campaign in Every Part of Country to be Made from April 25 to May 2.

30 DENOMINATIONS UNITED

"Home Survey" Now in Progress Will Provide Data for the Great Canvass.

After many conferences, attended by experts in big religious undertakings from all over the United States, $336,777,572 was announced yesterday as the budget decided on by the Interchurch World Movement of North America. It is by far the largest sum that a religious organization ever started out to raise. The payments are to run through a number of years.

A united simultaneous campaign will be conducted from April 25 to May 2. In the first year the sum of $175,448,340 is to be paid in. Of the total budget $229,000,000 is to be expended in America.

Thirty American denominations will co-operate in a program for world-wide extension of religious effort. The interchurch movement already is fully organized, and instead of being under separate roofs, as it was until recently, the offices have all been moved to the Greenhut Building, Sixth Avenue and Nineteenth Street. The overhead expenses of administering the organization have been underwritten by the respective denominations.

The movement has aroused much criticism, but its promoters declare that it will be justified by its accomplishments. It was originated by the Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Vance until recently was Moderator of the Southern Presbyterian Church and Chairman of its War Council. He is President of its Board of Foreign Missions.

Expenses Provided For.

The Interchurch Movement is "merely the servant of all," said Dr. S. Earl Taylor, its General Secretary. "All of the expenses incurred will be paid by the co-operating agencies," he added.

The purposes for which the money is to be expended are: Foreign missions, $107,661,488; home missions, $109,949,037; American education, $78,837,431; American religious education, $5,931,925; American hospitals and homes, $5,116,465; American ministerial pensions and relief, $20,510,299; miscellaneous, $8,770,927, this item covering expenditures for war relief, temperance and enlistment campaign.

In addition to the thirty denominations which take direct part in the co-operative religious effort, the following additional organizations have indorsed the program, but will not this year participate in the financial campaign:

The Foreign Christian Missionary Society (Disciples), the Christian Woman's Board of Missions (Disciples), the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity (Disciples), the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the Freedman's Board, United Presbyterian; the Woman's Missionary Association, United Brethren in Christ; the Society of the United Brethren for Propagating the Gospel among the Heathen, Moravian Church.

Of the $34,485,737 set opposite the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church it is stated that $21,000,000 already has been subscribed in the centenary campaign.

To Reach Every Community.

"The thirty denominational campaigns which will be conducted simultaneously from April 25 to May 2 will each follow their own denominational channels and have full freedom of action," said Lyman L. Pierce, Director General of the United Simultaneous Campaign. "To this end in every community there will be a United Simultaneous Financial Campaign Committee. This committee will organize a great citizen's division to stand side by side with the great denominational divisions in providing the financial objective of each community.

"The raising of the $336,777,572 will be equally and justly distributed among the States. Each State will make quotas on the same basis to each county. The counties will make quotas to the communities, and the communities will raise the funds through an organization made up of a number of divisions. Each local church will maintain its identity and be a unit in its denominational division.

"There is now in progress throughout America a 'Home Survey,' which includes an exhaustive study of the problems of the city," said Mr. Pierce. "In approximately 70 per cent. of the counties throughout America a rural survey is under way. It is shown that while there are not too many churches, as has often been stated, there may possibly be a better distribution of these churches."

SEES NO CHURCH LOAN 'WAR'

Calvary Baptist Pastor Predicts "Love Feast" Meeting.

"My belief is that we are going to have a love feast here next Wednesday evening at the corporate meeting of the church, rather than the 'war' that has been predicted," said the Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, West Fifty-seventh Street, yesterday afternoon. Dr. Straton referred to the meeting which has been called to act on his request that the Trustees be permitted to place a $60,000 mortgage on the structure in West Thirty-third Street, near the Pennsylvania Station, formerly the Collegiate Baptist Church, the congregation of which was absorbed into Calvary Church two years ago. At present it is being used for a mission.

Dr. Straton and his supporters want to pay off $38,000 of Calvary Church notes called in by the lending bank, and to remodel the Thirty-third Street structure into a girls' clubhouse and dormitory to be maintained by Calvary Church.

Murphy Left $25,000 to Charity.

No estimate of the value of the estate of Franklin Murphy, former Governor of New Jersey, is contained in his will, to be filed in Newark today, but it is believed to be between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000. Mr. Murphy left $25,000 to charity. His son, Franklin Murphy, Jr., and his daughter, Mrs. William B. Kinney, each receive $100,000 in cash and the income of the residue.

SIX LAW POINTS AGAINST ANDERSON

result of the investigation of the league's affairs as proposed by the Assembly, as he had done nothing to merit even a fine, yet he would go to prison before he would allow the "Tammany-Barnes coalition" to muzzle him.

"And," he added, "I can conduct the Anti-Saloon League from prison in a manner that will make some fellows think that they threw their clutch into gear with a cross between an earthquake and an active volcano."

The proposed investigation, he said, was nothing but an assault upon prohibition and its enforcement.

"Tammany," he said, "whose bias and affiliations are well known, is determined, for reasons which are readily understandable, to crush, before Tammany's political power disintegrates through the operation of prohibition, the influence in practical political affairs of the moral element that on the prohibition issue was led by the militant, federated churches, ready to do business on the liquor question, which, through their faith in the ultimate triumph of righteousness and the underlying conscience and character of the American people, have won a victory that means the destruction of the greatest obstacle in the way of enlightened, genuine religion."

He declared that wet Republicans who have a working agreement with Tammany were willing to join in this movement because the Anti-Saloon League persistently exposed their plan to defeat honest enforcement legislation, and refused to allow them to "hide the shells after they had sucked the eggs."

"An investigation," he continued, "of the wide-open work of this nonsectarian agency which has the backing of an overwhelming majority of the Protestant churches, without first honestly and effectively investigating the secret activity of the wets, who stand convicted of having made common cause with the enemies of the country, will be dishonest on the face of it. The same is true of a charge of violation of the legislative law against the Anti-Saloon League, when nothing is said of other agencies which follow the same policy acquiesced in for years by all public officials.

Attacks Religious Influence.

"Those religious influences which have secretly and falsely charged that the Anti-Saloon League is a sectarian movement, and which secretly and falsely worked against a prohibition candidate for Governor in the last election on the falsely alleged ground that prohibition would interfere with the obtaining of wine for sacramental purposes, are now endeavoring to break the influence of the Anti-Saloon League as the agency of the churches that have honestly faced and fairly discharged their responsibility on the liquor question. But they cannot silence the league now any more than they could stop prohibition then."

Mr. Anderson asserted that the wets were laying a foundation to let themselves down easy, in case the investigation fizzled out, by charging that the Anti-Saloon League was trying to stop it.

"This is not true," he said. "An investigation will clear the air, explode a lot of vague rumors, and establish the extent to which the league is backed by the churches and public sentiment generally. But we intend to make the Legislature go on record before the State that it solemnly believes there is occasion for wasting time and the people's money in this sort of an investigation so that nothing will soften the recoil. We intend that there shall be an honest and thorough investigation or we will pillory before the public those responsible for suppressing the truth. We intend that the Legislature shall get its fill of fake investigations so that the league in the State will be spared a repetition of that ancient bluff for many years to come.

Says Law Has Not Been Broken.

"The charge of violation of law made in the resolution adopted by the Assembly are outrageously false in general and in particular. There are no such facts as are alleged. The Anti-Saloon League has not violated any law. It has not received or spent any money improperly. Its system of bookkeeping and accounting would be a credit to any commercial concern."

Mr. Anderson asserted that "the Tammany cat's paw started this matter," and remarked that some of the newspapers have talked about a prison sentence. He said that he did not like the prison smell, but that the prison smell was not a circumstance to the smell of liquor and "some other things that will attach to some folks" before he landed there.

"I am asking no odds from this wet bunch," he said in conclusion. "They have been trying for twenty years to get me, and they are welcome to anything they can get. The motto, 'Lay on, Macduff,' and the rest of it, is plenty good enough for me at this juncture."

When Rev. Dr. John M. Moore, pastor of the church, started to introduce Mr. Anderson, a well-dressed elderly man down in front arose and inquired if Mr. Anderson was going to answer questions from the platform at the close of the address. Mr. Moore replied that he would answer questions put to him in writing.

The man did not seem to be satisfied with this reply and there were cries from all parts of the church to put him out. He was not put out, however, and when Mr. Anderson had finished he asked him about the references to the Catholic Church in his letter to Protestant ministers a few days ago. Mr. Anderson denied that he had made an attack upon the Catholic Church, but merely upon some of its leaders. He said that the day he wrote the letter Cardinal Gibbons declared in favor of beer and wine and a liberal enforcement of the law.

As he was leaving the church it was reported that the man who had put the question was heard to mutter: "If you had made an attack against the Catholic Church you would never have left this church."

"In Search of a Sinner" is the main offering of the Strand this week. It is a John Emerson-Anita Loos production with Constance Talmadge in the leading rôle, after the manner of "A Virtuous Vamp," but more sophisticated.

Miss Talmadge has the part of Georgiana Chadbourne, who, when the story begins, is hopelessly married to a man so deadly dull that he makes a bore of learning and virtue. His wife regards him simply as "good," and therefore hates good men forever. He dies, and the released widow hurries to the city in search of a sinner. She wants a really wild man next time and so goes hunting for one in the jungle of Central Park. There she meets Jack Garrison, who wins her love by an apparent readiness to flirt, but she is disillusioned when her hero turns out to be the President of the Purity League. He is led to believe that Georgiana is the wife of his best friend, and after that her most daring wiles are unavailing, except in one blind moment when he kisses her—and then bolts, after announcing that he has sinned and intends therefore to go to the devil. He is just about to run away with a real wild woman, of the "perfectly horrid" type, when Georgiana rescues him and comes to the conclusion that she does not want a bad man after all.

This is all done frivolously, with Miss Talmadge in a part that fits her. As an innocent coquette she uses all of her amusing little tricks and looks her best. Those around her are equal to the lenient demands of their rôles, especially Radcliffe Fellows as Jack Garrison, Arnold Lucy as the first Mr. Chadbourne, Lillian Worth as the really wicked woman and Evelyn C. Carrington as the heroine's sympathetic maid. The subtitles or leaders were written by Anita Loos, it is assumed, and undoubtedly they add to the gayety of the story. Miss Loos's leaders are no argument for the use of many words in a photoplay, but they are an argument for her own words in such a farce-comedy as "In Search of a Sinner." Mr. Emerson, presumably, is chiefly responsible for the continuity and staging of the piece, and so receives credit for contributing materially to its success in entertaining. For "In Search of a Sinner" is amusing. It is entirely too long, not having anything like enough substance for the five or six reels over which it is spread, but it is bright in many places, and will win laughs from those who do not expect too much of it.

"Some Speed to Surago," a Chester scenic of rapid-shooting and scenery in Japan, enlivened by Katherine Hilliker's running comments, is also at the Strand, and no matter where one who enters the theatre picks up the program, he should wait for it. There is also a picturized O. Henry story, "A Philistine in Bohemia."

The featured photoplay at the Rivoli this week is a screen adaptation of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "His House in Order," but it is doubtful whether Sir Arthur would recognize it under another name. The import and emphasis of the original, even the application of its title, have been discarded. A certain production which came to Broadway recently without any admitted derivation from Pinero's play was actually much closer to it in both story and significance than the picture at the Rivoli. The current offering is simply a movie detailing the successful effort of a wife to win the love of a husband who had weighed her in the balance with his first wife and found her wanting. As such it has qualities of its own which will doubtless commend it to many. These qualities are moderately good acting on the part of most of those in the cast, skillful, if sometimes obviously artificial, directing by Hugh Ford, and a story which, with little relation to life, has plot and such "heart interest" as those who consume the output of the fiction mills are said to delight in.

There is also the beauty of Elsie Ferguson in the leading rôle, and the acting of Vernon Steele, which would be convincing in a story more real. Holmes E. Herbert plays the part of the husband.

The Rivoli program is decidedly enriched by a Post nature picture originally shown under the title, "A Voice of Gladness," and now presented tritely as "The Beauty of Nature." It is one of the most charming scenics shown for a long time. Those who have only a vague idea of what pictorial composition is should make a special point of seeing it. They will observe how the cinematic artist uses lights and shadows, trees, rocks, water and clouds in the creation of scenes purely beautiful.

"Black Is White," with Dorothy Dalton in the leading rôle, directed by Charles Giblyn, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is at the Capitol this week. It is a melodramatic sort of piece in which a woman is the innocent victim of an inordinately jealous husband, who drives her from his home and vainly seeks solace in African jungles. The woman causes him to be notified that she is dead and then goes to Paris, where she takes another name and enters a new life. Fifteen years later she meets her husband again and remarries him. Again his melodramatic jealousy asserts itself, this time because his wife shows fondness for his and, though he doesn't know it, her own son, and the consequences are almost disastrous, but not sufficiently so, of course, to prevent a conventional happy ending.

Miss Dalton's physical charms are undeniable, but she is scarcely convincing in her rôle of loving mother and wronged wife. The others in the cast, including Holmes E. Herbert as the husband and Jack Crosby as the son, act satisfactorily when they do not overact. The production as a whole lacks genuineness, and must rely for whatever success it has upon its appeal to those who like just movie stuff.

Adrian Duff of Hamilton Bay, Richmond Hill, L. I., formerly a newspaper photographer employed first on The American and later on The World, died yesterday afternoon in the Brooklyn Hospital of a fractured skull sustained in an automobile accident early yesterday morning. Recently he had left newspaper work to become a camera man with a moving-picture company.

The accident happened at the corner of Nevins and Livingston Streets. He was riding in a hired machine with three friends, and as the chauffeur tried to turn from Nevins into Livingston Street the wheels skidded on ice, the car hit an electric-light pole, and Duff's head struck the pole.

FIREMEN RESCUE WOMEN.

Doctor's Wife Rouses Tenants in Burning Apartment House.

Shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning the wife of Dr. Theodore Halpern found flames sweeping through their apartment on the ground floor of 826 East 163d Street, the Bronx. She roused the other tenants and managed to get to the street.

William Radecker, Fire Patrol No. 6, rescued Mrs. Bessie Charin from a second-story window, crawling along a coping and holding the woman until a ladder was raised from the street. Fireman Emil Saulhaber, Hook and Ladder No. 19, rescued Mrs. Sania Mustovay and her 8-year-old daughter, Bessie, from the second floor. Dr. Halpern's apartment was wrecked and he lost instruments valued at between $4,000 and $5,000. The total loss, according to Deputy Chief Thomas Hayes, was about $12,000.

GERMANY LISTS MANY FOR ENTENTE "CRIMES"

BERLIN, March 5.—Germany does not intend to send the Entente at present the list of Allied citizens accused by Germany of misdeeds against her forces during the war, it was stated by Foreign Minister Mueller today, during the debate in the National Assembly on the third reading of the bill to govern the German trials of persons accused of war crimes by the Entente.

The Foreign Minister declared he doubted whether the Allies would punish any of their citizens on the strength of German evidence, and he was rather inclined to believe that the German move would only serve to unite the Allied coalition more firmly. It was the united front of the German people in opposing the Allied demands for extradition of Germans, however, he declared, that had caused the Allies to recede from their position and not the Pan German clamor.

The German records already compiled, Herr Mueller stated, comprised 312 pages of indictments against French individuals and sixty-nine against British. The data have been officially corroborated, he added, but he considered that the present time was not an auspicious moment to make the list public, and the Government would reserve its decision as to publication for a later day.

The German Government, he added, would never demand the extradition of enemy generals.

"The extradition list of the Entente is but an expression of the cockiness of the victors," he said. As to war misdeeds in general, Herr Mueller laid down the proposition that "swinishness and crime" could be charged up to all the belligerents.

DR. ALEXANDER SEILER DIES.

Swiss Hotel Man Is Stricken After Speech for League of Nations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Switzerland, March 8.—Dr. Alexander Seiler, familiarly referred to as the "uncrowned King of Zermatt," and one of the best known and ablest members of the Swiss Parliament, has just died of heart failure. He had been making a long speech in favor of Switzerland joining the League of Nations.

Dr. Seiler, in consequence of his owning all of the leading hotels in Zermatt, was better known to American travelers in Switzerland, and particularly climbers, than any other Swiss public man, or even than the President of the Swiss Confederation.

Although his brother was a Roman Catholic chaplain with the German Army during the war, Dr. Seiler was pro-Entente, and for a year had devoted his energies to campaigning among fellow Roman Catholics in Switzerland on behalf of the League of Nations.

After nine years in charge of a Baltimore synagogue Rabbi Leucht went to Newark. Kind and Courteous

By DR. BERTHOLD A. BAER.

The success of an institution lies in the service it renders. The combined service of all individuals employed forms the basis of the institution's success.

Writes Mr. W. B. L.: "I want to thank you for the very kind aud courteous treatment afforded to me by the members of your establishment who assisted at the funeral of my deceased mother. I shall always remember you as the one who came to me as a great relief in the hour when I needed your service most, and I want to congratulate you upon the efficiency of the men in your employ."

Mr. Frank E. Campbell, founder of The Funeral Church, Broadway at 66th Street, devotes much time and energy to the selection of his employees and to the proper training of the same. Experience and ability are main factors; kind and courteous treatment are next required. "Service" is the watchword of the Campbell Institution, for service is the true basis of a successful organization.

HAGEN IS WINNER IN 37-HOLE MATCH

FIRST ROUND ALL SQUARE

Title Holder Is Once Four Down In Second Circuit but Evens Matters by Birdie in Seventeenth.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 7.—Walter Hagen successfully defended from taint the reputation that goes with the national open golf championship today by defeating Jim Barnes, the Western and Southern open and P. G. A. title holder, by 1 up in thirty-seven holes over the Country Club course here.

Hagen and Barnes came together, not in a titular match, but in a contest arranged for the purpose of settling the long-standing dispute as to which is the premier swinger of golf sticks on the American continent.

Because of the closeness of the competition the opinion of some of those who followed the match is divided yet as to their comparative ability. But it would seem that Hagen clearly established his superiority over the lean Cornishman.

Barnes Favored by Luck.

Whatever breaks in luck there might have been seemed to be in favor of Barnes. He had greater familiarity with the course, having played over it a number of times in the last few weeks. Hagen had traversed its mysteries only once before teeing off.

Hagen was down to the Westerner almost throughout the afternoon round, but squared the match on the seventeenth hole and with a spectacular putt forced the contest to go extra holes by halving the eighteenth in par four, when Barnes became unnerved and dubbed a ten-foot roll toward the cup, which if run down would have given Barnes the victory.

The closeness of the match was typical of the gameness with which Hagen made his hazardous journey. Barnes started with the honor and held it a greater part of the time, but just at the times when Hagen seemed headed for sure humiliation he rallied and again brought himself within striking distance of his opponent.

At times the play of the pair was below expectations. This was particularly true on the greens, but their work with driver and irons was so nearly faultless that they encountered very few of the hazards that are placed about the course, in well-chosen spots, to beguile the ball of the inexpert. At other times their successful efforts to avoid these obstructions or to overcome the disadvantage of having fallen into them were spectacular.

Hagen's Recoveries Brilliant.

Circumstances called on Hagen to display his powers of recovery on more occasions than they did of Barnes, because Hagen got into more trouble, either through misjudgment or misfortune.

The most notable instance of Hagen's expertness in extricating himself from trouble cropped out on the twelfth hole of the afternoon round. From tee to cup on this hole is 515 yards. The fairway is heavily bunkered, and a ditch eight feet in depth traverses it. Hagen drove well, but his second rolled nearly to the bottom of the ditch and concealed itself in a clump of clover on the precipitous side.

Hagen wielded his mashie, raised the ball nearly out of sight into the clear blue sky, and it fell safely in the fairway, just short of an ugly trap that guards the green. Hagen then pitched to the green nicely, and although he lost the hole when he took an extra putt, the shot stood out as the one best remembered of the many which were made during the day.

Another of Hagen's most daring successes came after he had flubbed his drive from the eighteenth tee in the morning round to the rough at the left. This is a dog-leg hole. Hagen, with a daring slice, brought his ball around the curve and a tree which stands guard there and got in splendid position to half the hole, but poor putting again ruined his chances. On the same hole in the afternoon round he accomplished the same deliberate slice from the tee, and thereby paved the way for the playing of the extra hole which gave him the match.

Barnes Makes an "Eagle."

Barnes also showed coolness in recovery, but his ability in this direction was not so thoroughly tested. Easily the most memorable single shot the Cornishman made was the 305-yard thirteenth, where he made a drive that brought him within thirty yards of a bunker, which rises in front of the carpet. Only the top of the flag was visible to him from his lie. But unerringly he lifted the pellet over the obstruction on a dead line with the pin. It struck just between the green and the bunker, bounded once or twice, and rolled into the cup, two strokes under par, for an "eagle."

Hagen's finish was sensational. He squared the match with a twelve-foot putt for a "birdie" 3 on the seventeenth hole in the afternoon round, halved the eighteenth and won the deciding hole when Barnes hooked his tee shot off the green.

They ended the first round all even. Barnes took a commanding lead by winning four of the next five holes. It was after being 4 down that Hagen rallied. He won the sixth and seventh in fours. The eighth was halved in par 3 and Hagen won the ninth, 5 to 6.

Hagen won the tenth hole with a "birdie" 3, squaring the match. The eleventh was halved and Barnes again went 1 up by winning the twelfth. Long Jim then startled the gallery with an "eagle" 2 on the 305-yard thirteenth and again went 2 up.

Hagen won the fourteenth. The fifteenth and sixteenth were halved in fours. Hagen then squared the match with a twelve-foot putt for a "birdie" 3 on the seventeenth. The eighteenth was halved in fours, when Barnes missed his putt for a 3. The extra hole went to Hagen, 3 to 4. He reached the green on his tee shot and took two putts.

HARVARD SHELLS SHIPPED.

Crimson Crews Will Start Rowing in Lynn Harbor Today.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 7.—Two shells and a small launch were shipped yesterday and are expected to be in readiness when Coach Haines takes the 'Varsity, second and freshman crews to Lynn tomorrow for the opening of the outdoor rowing season. This is Harvard's third year of work at Lynn until the Charles becomes navigable, but the first time as guests of the West Lynn Boat Club management. The Farragut Boat Club's roof has sunk under the heavy snow gathered upon it, and in consequence could not consider putting the Harvard men up, as it had for two years.

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 7.—A golf record that Walter J. Travis and others said here today was without parallel in their knowledge, was made on the Palm Beach links by John W. Gammons, President of the Wannamoisset Golf and Country Club of Providence, R. I. Gammons made a round of eighteen holes using only eighteen putts, an average of one putt to each hole. He used two putts on the fifth green, and on the fourth his approach shot ran in for a two. The feat was made in a best ball foursome, in which Gammons and Colonel J. Emmet Smith of Wilmington defeated James Kenyon and Frank A. Decker of Providence. The former pair had a best ball of 62.

WAROSE FIRST OVER ICY 6-MILE COURSE

John Warose of St. Anselm's A. C., a veteran of the World War, who has been competing in local road races for several years, yesterday recorded one of the most brilliant achievements of his career when he led home a field of ninety-three rivals in the "Old Glory" handicap road race, conducted by the Twenty-second Engineers, N. Y. G., over a course of six miles.

Warose, one of a field of 108 harriers who started in quest of the many prizes offered by the military officials, raced past the judges at the finish with a lead of about 100 yards on Willis Deegan, a club mate. Mike Russo, another St. Anselm's harrier, held down third position, while Eddie Walsh of the Paulist A. C. finished fourth. The victor covered the trying course in the actual time of 34 minutes 29 3-5 seconds.

A handicap allowance of 5 minutes 30 seconds contributed largely to Warose's victory, but despite this allotment the St. Anselm's veteran ran an impressive race. Traveling along at a brisk pace from the moment he was sent on his journey, Warose overhauled the limit starters, the runners with 6-minute handicaps, before the first mile had been completed.

Over a stretch of decidedly treacherous ground, covered with ice and frosted snow, and unmindful of a biting wind, the St. Anselm's harrier held a position with the leading quartet for another two miles. His companions in trail breaking were Tom Birch, a club mate; Walsh and Russo.

In this formation the half-way mark on the course, 126th Street and Broadway, where the runners about faced to retrace their steps over the course, was reached. Here the footing conditions were particularly bad. The street was covered with a mass of solid ice. None of the harriers, however, experienced a fall. Shortly after starting on the last half of the distance Warose increased his speed, and his rivals gave chase. Warose was the stronger, and, after a struggle which lasted over three-quarters of a mile, he began gradually to draw away to a lead.

One and one-half miles from the finish Warose was running strongly, with an advantage of about thirty-five yards. This he steadily increased to the finish, where he led Deegan by about one hundred yards.

GIANTS ENCOUNTER FREEZING WEATHER

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 7.—A cold blast of real New York weather wafted into this city of sunshine today and made the Giants feel that they were home again. The temperature tumbled to the freezing point, and the Sunday game between the Giants and San Antonio was canceled. The old inhabitants say that it has not been as cold as this here at this time of the year in thirty-seven years. "I have been coming to Texas for eleven years," said Manager McGraw today, "but this is the coldest Spring day I ever remember." The Rambler roses are blighted and there are icicles on the palm trees.

The Giants' manager set a good example for his players, and shortly after noon he put on his uniform and went out to the field. The players all reported at 1:30 o'clock, but did not attempt to do any playing. They batted the ball to each other and threw it around. McGraw didn't even take off his new mackinaw. The players were out only half an hour limbering up when McGraw called it off and sent them to the clubhouse.

Fred Toney and Phil Douglas were out in uniform for the first time. Toney came here in better shape than he has ever been at reporting time. When Toney reported to the Giants last season he weighed 235 pounds. It will be remembered that the big Tennesseean was so fat that two or three times he collapsed in the heat. He now weighs many pounds less, and hasn't started any real trainnig work until today. Douglas has evidently received some word of forgiveness from McGraw, because he was out and raced around the park a few times with George Burns to take off weight.

Red Mackinaws for Players.

The players yesterday all received new mackinaw coats of a dull red plaid. They are long, belted affairs, and the players attracted a lot of attention in the hotel and on the streets when they wore them for the first time this afternoon.

Yesterday's game with San Antonio didn't give McGraw much aid in solving his infield problem. McGuire, who showed up fairly well at short, has been playing ball on the Pacific Coast, and naturally should be in better shape than the other recruits. This is also true of George and Ren Kelly and Armstrong. They look better than the others when they are in action, for the simple reason that they have been warming up all Winter in a mild climate.

Arnold Statz did well in the field, and there is no doubt that McGraw will retain him on the squad. As for the other recruits, it is too early for McGraw to tell anything about them.

Manager McGraw, Treasurer McQuade and Christy Mathewson, together with the newspaper reporters who are with the club, were the guests at a dinner given last night at the St. Anthony by T. B. Baker, proprietor of the hotel. Manager McGraw was one of the speakers, but he didn't touch on the topic of baseball.

Faces Difficult Problem.

In all his career as a manager of the Giants, it is doubtful if McGraw ever faced a more difficult problem than he faces today with his infield dilemma. He said tonight that he believed that his pitching staff—that is, the five regulars, as he hopes to use them—constitutes a combination of pitchers which cannot be matched by any other club. These are Toney, Douglas, Barnes, Benton and Nehf.

The outfield is one of the best in the game, and the catching department just oozes with stars. But the infield is at present like a porous plaster. There is nothing tonight on the negotiations which are said to be under way for an experienced infielder, and it is hardly possible that McGraw would start the season with only one seasoned player—Fletcher—in the infield.

DODGERS GET DAY OFF.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 7.—The Dodgers, who are doing their Spring training here, enjoyed a day of rest today, as Manager Robinson will not hold any Sabbath workouts while in camp. The athletes were up early to take advantage of a warm, sunny day. Manager Robbie, accompanied by several members of his team, went out to the Florida Country Club and played golf.

A foursome was played, with Robbie and Sherrod Smith opposing Rube Marquard and Ernie Krueger. Manager Robbie and Pitcher Smith were the victors. After the match Robbie and Kreuger played a round of eighteen holes and Krueger, who is quite a golfer, defeated his manager. The members of the club who did not play the golf course spent the afternoon taking in the sights.

If the weather which prevailed here today may be taken as a criterion, the players will not be held back again by chilly atmosphere. It was an ideal day for baseball. Uncle Robbie is hoping that the warm weather is here to stay, as wants to have his men in fine fettle for the first game against the Yankees, which is to be played in South Jacksonville next Saturday afternoon.

There have been no new developments in the proposed trade between the Dodgers and the Cardinals, but Manager Robbie is willing to part with one of his star hurlers, if he can obtain an experienced outfielder. Burleigh, Grimes, Zack Wheat and Hy Myers have not yet reported to their manager.

ARRANGING YANKEES IS CHIEF PROBLEM

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 7.—A week with his material, old and new, has told Manager Huggins of the Yankees that a stiff problem for him will be to strike the best combination of material, meaning the men and the positions in which to play them. It also has made him feel quietly confident, as it has his advisers—Connery, Kelley and O'Leary—that he will have the best Yankee team New York ever has had.

Ruth drifted to centre field with the beginning of practice and has stayed there, but the only thing that the management feels sure about in his case is that he will be played somewhere. It may be centre, the most probable place, and it may be elsewhere.

"Just as likely as not I shall go to a day or two before the opening of the race before deciding on my lineup," said Huggins tonight. And he was speaking of the outfield and infield.

"There's one thing about our outfield we haven't had half," Hug continued, "and that is fortification. I have been in the position that if one outfielder flopped on me I was gone. Last year, for instance, after letting Miller go I kept Lamar, and then let him go for a worse outfielder. But no such thing as that can happen this year. Not with such men as Lewis, Bodie, Vick, Ruth and Gleich.

Gleich Impresses Huggins.

"I don't mind telling you that Gleich to me looks promising, very promising. I like the way he hits. We aren't as sure where we stand regarding the infield. This is on account of the uncertainty whether Baker will play. If he doesn't, I may have to use Fewster in the infield, but I'd like to use him in the outfield."

Tomorrow Huggins will have more rudimentary practice, and by Tuesday he expects to start in on practice games. The series with the Brooklyns begins next Saturday, and the Dodgers have been playing practice games for several days. They are anxious for a little revenge for the way the Yankees smothered them last Spring.

The weather in the South this Spring, in so far as it has been adapted to baseball practice, has been backward. The Yankees, however, put in five of the six days with some sort of practice. In freedom from kinks of arms and legs and in general health, they have come through the first week splendidly and are in admirable shape to go ahead and acquire baseball condition. This was a fine day and they'd like to have one like it tomorrow.

The Boston Red Sox thought they were going to get Marsans, the Havanese or cubeb, as big leaguers call Cuban players, from the Yankees, but on the former's part it has been a case of counting chickens before hatched. Marsans is under suspension for failure to report and cannot be waived to another club unless he asks for reinstatement and is reinstated.

Thirty Players in Camp.

Warren Collins of Texas arrived this morning. Collins is a right handed pitcher who was with Dallas last year. He is the thirtieth Yankee candidate to report. Duffy Lewis and Bill Piercy are still somewhere else. Clyde Milan of the Washingtons, on his way to Tampa, came up from the station and visited the Pipps, father and son. The elder Pipp—Walter's father—reported yesterday from Miami. The old gentleman's visit to the Yankees is a yearly rite, and with his coming the baseball season can be regarded as really begun.

From Colonel Ruppert today came to the Yankee players twenty-nine checks, each for $457.86. This was the pelf for finishing third last year and thus getting in on the world's series proceeds. The belated money was received from the National Commission by the New York club President last week and includes interest for four months at a 6 per cent. rate.

REDS ARRIVE AT MIAMI.

Special to The New York Times.

MIAMI, Fla., March 7.—Twenty-two members of the Cincinnati Reds, accompanied by a corps of Cincinnati sport writers, arrived in Miami today for their annual Spring training. Manager Pat Moran announced that practice would be started at 10 A. M. tomorrow. The squad was given a warm welcome by the people of Miami and enjoyed an automobile ride about the city. Practice will be held at Tatum Park, one of the largest ball parks in the country, originally built for the Boston Braves. Moran pronounced it the best training camp site he had ever seen.

No contract bearing the signature of Heinie Groh, the Red third sacker who is still a holdout, has yet been received.

Moran stated that light work will mark the training for the first few days, while the players get limbered up after their Winter rest, but within a few days the squad will be divided and practice games will be started. Members of the club who arrived are Manager Moran, Business Manager F. C. Bancroft, Treasurer Louis Wildrig, Trainer George Hoskins, Jimmy Ring, Ed Gerner, Lou Bressler, Harry Sallee, Walter Ruether, Clarence Steele, Winwood Smith, Edmund Waite, Bill Rariden, Ivy Wingo, Nick Allen, Morris Rath, Pat Duncan, Earle Neale, Charlie See, Dick Loftus, Sam Crane, Joe Meyer, Jake Daubert, Larry Kopf and Ed Roush. Ray Fisher, Hod Eller and Adolf Luque are expected to arrive within the next few days.

Ruth Swings a 54-Ounce Bat; All Others Weigh Under 45

Much has been written and much more said about the Babe Ruth shoulders and Babe's terrific swing while batting. To the swing has been attributed his remarkable power as a batsman, but one important factor seems to have been entirely overlooked. That is the weight of the bat which the big slugger swings when he is knocking speed and curves to all corners of a park, or even beyond the outer walls. Ruth uses a bat many ounces heavier than that used by any other batsman in the game today. While the average player is content to do his batting with a stick weighing from 36 to 45 ounces, Ruth likes a club that ranges up as heavy as 54 ounces, a bat which would make the average major leaguer swing like a schoolboy. Some of the greatest hitters of recent years have used sticks ranging from 40 to 45 ounces and found them heavy enough, but the Babe propels a 54-ounce club with even better results—as his home run record will testify.

N. Y. A. C. MARKSMEN MAKE GOOD SCORES

Regardless of the fact that it was bitterly cold at the Travers Island traps of the New York A. C. yesterday, the scores were decidedly better than at the last few preceding shoots. Ties were the order of the day. In the shoot for the high scratch prize, J. O'Neil and A. E. Atherton each had 91 out of a possible 100 targets. The trophy went to the former on the shootoff.

Atherton came in for the honors in the weekly shoot for the Buermeyer Cup. He took the leg with a straight score of 50 targets, the first time that a perfect score had won a leg on the cup.

SQUASH RACQUETS VICTORY TO BOSTON

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 7.—Boston's squash racquet players added another victory to their record today by defeating the representatives of Philadelphia, 4 to 1, in the intercity championship match played at the Harvard Club. The visitors put up a stubborn contest, but were hardly able to cope with the all-around excellence of the men of the Hub. Inasmuch as Charles C. Peabody, the State champion, had defeated Stanley W. Pearson of Quakertown for the individual championship yesterday, the tournament was in every way a success from a local standpoint.

Wallace Johnson, No. 6 man in the ranking list of the United States lawn tennis players, was the only invader to win. He found Dr. Foster S. Kellogg of the Harvard Club, former State title-holder, 'way off form, and this, together with his own ability to make well earned points, gave him a surprisingly easy victory. Dr. Kellogg not only failed to win one game, but he also failed to gain a point in the last game, which was 15—0. In all, Kellogg made only seven points, as the scores of the first two games were 15—4 and 15—3.

The most interesting match of the four played was that in which Constantine Hutchins of the Tennis and Racquet Club and several times State champion, defeated F. S. White of the visiting combination. There were many long rallies and both men showed remarkable stamina, but Hutchins's direct hits off the front wall that bounded low were too much for White. It required four games before Hutchins was able to win, the scores of the match being 15—11, 11—15, 15—12, 15—10. In the last game White had the back bay clubman 5—2, but Hutchins's ability to score carried him to the front and settled the outcome.

Frank W. Buxton of the Harvard Club disposed of F. F. Bradley of Philadelphia in straight games, showing a master hand throughout, as the scores indicate, 15—5, 15—9, 15—7.

The summary:

C. C. Peabody, Boston, beat Stanley W. Pearson, Philadelphia, 4—15, 11—15, 15—12, 15—11, 15—11; O. Hutchins, Boston, beat F. S. White, Philadelphia, 15—11, 11—15, 15—12, 15—11, 15—11; C. Hutchins, Boston, beat F. F. Bradley, Philadelphia, 15—5, 15—9, 15—7; Wallace Johnson, Philadelphia, beat F. S. Kellogg, Boston, 15—4, 15—3, 15—0; R. A. Powers, Boston, beat W. H. Harrity, Philadelphia, 15—6, 15—10, 11—15, 18—13.

CADDOCK TO MEET LEWIS.

Wrestlers Are Matched for Bout at Garden Next Week.

Earl Caddock, the former wrestling champion, and Strangler Lewis have been signed to meet in a finish match. This duel will be staged at Madison Square Garden on March 15. The result of the match will decide who is to challenge Joe Stecher to a struggle for the latter's world title.

Caddock and Lewis, who won their matches against Chevalier and Londos, respectively, at the Garden last week, were tentatively matched to wrestle for the coveted privilege, but difficulties arose. Caddock was insistent that the match be held in Des Moines, Iowa, which would bring him right on his home territory. Lewis absolutely refused to make the journey. When Caddock discovered that Lewis would not go West, he finally agreed to wrestle at the Garden.

WOULD HAVE BOXING IN STATE ARMORIES

Military Athletic League Will Urge Passage of Gillett Measure at Albany.

Prompted by the remarkable popularity of boxing among military men, officials of the newly organized New York State Military Athletic League will soon inaugurate a campaign for favorable action on Assemblyman R. H. Gillett's Boxing bill, which would allow boxing exhibitions and contests to be held in the State Armories.

This was disclosed yesterday at the meeting of the Military Athletic League officials in the First Field Artillery Armory. Colonel Walter Jeffreys Carlin, 47th Infantry, who is President of the M. A. L., was instructed, in a recommendation which was unanimously adopted, to urge the passage of a bill which would permit the holding of limited round bouts in the armories under the auspices of the Military Athletic League. No specific reference was made to the Gillett measure, which is now resting with the Assembly Committee on Codes, after a single reading, but inasmuch as this measure alone of the four introduced at the current legislative session provides for boxing in the armories, it is reasonably certain that the M. A. L. officials will bend their efforts to adoption of the proposed penal law amendment.

In discussing the proposed campaign for favorable boxing legislation, Colonel Carlin stressed the success derived from boxing among the forces of the A. E. F., and pointed out the advantages which would accrue if the sport was legalized and permitted in the armories under M. A. L. supervision. The delegates at the meeting were in hearty accord with Colonel Carlin's sentiments and readily adopted a resolution instructing the M. A. L. President to urge the passage of a bill. Colonel Carlin in private life is a local lawyer.

The league does not intend to give its undivided attention to boxing, however. On the contrary, quite a comprehensive program was outlined at yesterday's session, the first since the league was revived last week after a period of inactivity which started when the doughboys went to the Mexican border. A majority of the guard units throughout the State have already joined the organization, and invitations to recalcitrant outfits have been renewed.

In order to stimulate sectional interest it was decided to divide the State into districts. The metropolitan district will comprise one of the sectional bodies, Albany, Troy and vicinity another, and either one or two districts will be portioned out in the western part of the State. Each district will hold handicap and championship meets, which will be followed with indoor and outdoor State championship events. A handicap meet will be held in each district within three months. New York's initial meet is scheduled for May 1.

DUNDEE TO MEET JACKSON.

Willie Jackson, Bronx lightweight, will attempt to duplicate his knockout victory of three years ago over Johnny Dundee, the Italian contender for the lightweight title, when the two clash this evening in the stellar eight-round bout at The Arena, in the Fourth Regiment Armory, Jersey City. Jackson, after a stiff course of training, has declared himself ready for the mill and is confident he will score a decisive victory. Dundee, however, has given particular attention to his training for the bout and will present a serious proposition for Jackson.

Leader, Madonna. Record, 50 Miles and 9 Laps, Made by Lawson and Root in 1915.

A short red flash, issuing from the nozzle of a pistol in the right hand of Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, an accompanying sharp report piercing the comparative stillness of the big amphitheatre, at one minute past midnight this morning and the first late winter six-day bicycle race in the history of the sport in this city was on at Madison Square Garden. When the pistol barked its message sending the endurance riders on their week's grind a crowd of about 6,000 filled the Garden and, with frantic shouts of welcome for this cycling innovation, drowned out the echo of the gun's report.

The two upper tiers, where reigns that species of fan who makes the Garden his habitat for the duration of the race, were jammed in accustomed fashion. The arena seats, however, held yawning rows of empty chairs, a striking contrast to the openings of the past. The sawdust covered centre of the Garden, however, held its traditional throngs, which crushed dangerously against the frail railing separating them from the riders.

The riders who started the grind for the different teams were Goullet, Egg, Kopsky, Bello, Buysse, Weber, Lester, Bowker, Chapman, Spencer, Kaiser, DeRuyter, Godivier, Byron and Dupuy.

Kaiser carried the field around the saucer for the first two laps of the 144-hour grind. He was followed by Goullet, Egg and Chapman in that order, while the rest of the field was strung out, shake-like behind. On the third lap the pace was hit up a few notches, when Goullet forged to the front, followed by Egg and Chapman. These three were at the head of the field in order at the first mile.

Take Turns Setting Pace.

Soon after passing the mile mark Godivier awakened a burst of applause when he shot high up on the embankment and spurted for the lead. He gained his objective and was watched carefully by the rest of the riders during his term in front. Thereafter the lead was shifted among the riders, every one of the fourteen on the track having an opportunity to set the pace during the first half hour.

Governor Edwards's popularity was volubly attested upon his arrival in the Garden. The New Jersey Executive was accorded a welcome which started when his figure first emerged from the portieres ornamenting the entrance to the interior, until he took his seat, after posing for a flashlight photograph. Every individual in the Garden joined in the welcome to the man who has defied the prohibition element.

Governor Edwards entered the Garden at 11:27. Escorted by policemen and firemen, the New Jersey Executive made his way amid tumultuous acclaim to the box reserved for him at the north side of the amphitheatre, head bared in acknowledgment of the greeting. Governor Edwards was about to take his seat when the band in the arena struck up the prospective national anthem of future generations, "How Dry I Am."

With the first strains of the disheartening melody spectators jumped to their feet, and with bared heads stood at "prohibition attention" until the last strains died away.

Prohibition attention is almost as regular as the reason for it. The attentive citizen stands with the right foot raised about six inches from the floor, his leg supported on an imaginary foundation of brass, his arm is crooked and his hand, grasping a mythical globular something, is held at a point slightly removed from the lips. Unlike military poses, no practice is required. The pose is quite popular on occasions such as this.

Ready for the Start.

The first rider made his appearance on the track at 11:29. Willie Coburn went over the saucer for a trial, being joined after a lap by the Bowker brothers, Lester and George, and Eddie Madden. Then the crowd watched expectantly for twenty-five minutes when the traditional introductions were made, the various riders making one circle of the inclined track. At the conclusion of this ceremony, the riders who started the grind for the fourteen contending teams were summoned to the starting line and sent over the track in preparation for the customary flying start.

The first sprint of the race came at 12:30. At this hour the crowd had increased to 8,000. Governor Edwards offered a purse of $100 for a one-mile sprint, the prize to be divided, $50 to the winner, $30 to second, and $20 to third.

The riders went about the track at a lazy pace, Harry Kaiser setting the pace for seven laps. On the eighth lap, Kaiser, anticipating a rival challenge, hit up his pace, and continued at the head of the field on the bell lap, winning the biggest portion of the century by half a wheel's length from Willie Coburn. George Chapman was third.

HAVANA, Cuba, March 7.—General Agramonte carried the colors of A. H. Diaz to a very impressive victory in the two-year-old handicap, one of the features of a splendid card, at Oriental Park today. The son of Hessian was the favorite, and carried top weight of 118 pounds. He was a trifle slow to get in his stride, but when the field rounded into the stretch he closed with a rush, and, taking the lead in the last sixteenth, won going away, but he was doing his best at the end.

Roseate was a head in front of the tiring Spugs. The race had a net value of $1,420 to the winner. The second horse received $300, and the third pulled down $100.

Baladin, in the Carnival Handicap, rewarded his backers by leading home the field. Cromwell was second and Buford was third.

Hagen and Barnes.

The Hagen-Barnes match yesterday over the fairways and greens of the New Orleans Country Club will be inscribed in the historical annals of golf. It should fit in just behind the Vardon-Ray-Ouimet event of 1913 at Brookline, and the Hilton-Herreshoff championship final in 1911 at Apawamis. Had a title been at stake, instead of merely the settlement of a dispute which has kept golfers on the qui vive for many months while arguing it, Hagen's victory would come close to crowning all past events on American links.

The national champion and his troublesome rival played exactly the golf expected of headliners. What could be more appropriate to a meeting of such leaders than an extra-hole match? A couple of linksmen dangerously near the "dub" class lost by 10 down and 8 to play one day last week at Pinehurst. But golfers at the top do not perform this way. Theirs are matches extraordinary, nip and tuck, where the advantage seesaws to the delight of the crowds of devotees who travel miles to see such a spectacle. Examine Barnes's card, for example. At the 305-yard thirteenth in the afternoon round Long Jim from St. Louis won the hole in 2 for an eagle, two strokes under par. Birdies came frequently. After trailing, one time as much as 4 down, Walter Hagen squared the match on the tenth hole in the afternoon by a birdie 3. Typical championship golf! Then Hagen went down again, but once more exhibited the golf that only leaders among leaders play. He again squared the contest on the seventeenth with a birdie. The home hole was halved and Hagen's victory came on the extra hole, reaching the green on his tee shot and taking the regulation two putts. A weaker golfer, one of the multitude, nervous under the strain of thirty-seven holes of such a match, would have faltered there. Not Hagen. Two putts are allowed by golf custom and habit, and he took just that many.

There will be no alibis, no long-winded explanations from Barnes's supporters this time. The match was fortunately at thirty-six holes, instead of just one round which might have served as a doubtful measure of their true ability, and it was played under ideal conditions. The purse was secondary to both professionals. Hagen, particularly, was out for a scalp, for he had confided to friends that this match meant nearly as much to him as his national title.

New York's Baseball Puzzles

The first week of Spring training for Greater New York's three major league baseball clubs ended with each of three managers facing a problem. For John McGraw the uppermost question concerns his infield, with first and third bases in charge of comparative newcomers to the majors, and second base a doubtful quantity. For the Yankees Miller Huggins says that his material is all that could be desired, but he hesitates in arranging it. Manager Robinson of the Brooklyn Club has a problem in his outfield owing to the retirement of Tommy Griffith.

Each of the three metropolitan organizations appears to be well fortified in pitching strength, and since pitching is the chief element of every pennant campaign all three managers, and many thousands of fans as well, see much reason for real optimism. John McGraw points out with pride that his pitching headliners—Nehf, Barnes, Toney, Benton and Douglas—compare with any other staff in the major leagues. Huggins sees no occasion for worry with a pitching staff composed of Shawkey, Mays, Quinn, Thormahlen and Mogridge, not to mention Ruth for emergency duty and the possible come-back of Ernie Shore. Robinson, a developer of star boxmen and a manager who fully appreciates the strength of a flinging force, offers Grimes, Pfeffer, Cadore, Smith, Marquard and Mamaux as his entry when pitching staffs are being compared.

No club has ever won a pennant without good pitchers, so it may be argued that all three metropolitan clubs have the foundation for pennant winners, and the task of strengthening other departments of the team is usually more simple than that of adding pitching strength. Each of the New York clubs holds the added advantage of being able to sacrifice mound material for strength in other positions and this may prove ultimately the means of solving the difficulties now confronting McGraw, Huggins and Robinson.

The training period has not advanced far enough at this time to furnish any real line on the young talent now trying for recognition. But it is interesting to note that McGraw has declared his squad of rookies the best that ever came under his observation at a training camp. The manager of the Giants is not inclined to be unduly optimistic on the question of embryonic stars and for that reason his remarks are particularly impressive. Meanwhile the views of Huggins and Robinson on their young prospects are awaited with interest.

America's Tennis Prospects.

There will be general regret that the Olympic Committee has found it impossible to schedle the tennis events at Antwerp on such dates as would allow a first class American team to take part. This sport has never in the past produced real champions, worthy of the award of world titles, on Olympic occasions, and with the American entries omitted or limited to comparatively low ranking players, the same process is likely to be repeated. The August dates conflict directly with the American championship, and no tennis player with a chance for his own country's title can fairly be asked to give up this prospect for honors that in the long run will prove far less tangible.

But even if American tennis players take no part in the Olympic games next Summer, they will be sufficiently represented internationally, and should have ample opportunities to settle the questions of actual superiority of individual and team play. The Davis Cup preliminaries will give the most important line on America's lawn tennis standing, and if any of these are played in England, it is quite possible that the challengers from the United States will try their skill at Wimbledon also, a tournament whose winner last year was hailed as world's champion.

The Davis Cup draw has brought England and Holland together in the first round, with America meeting South Africa. As England is fairly sure to win one bracket, it would seem advisable to play all the matches up to the challenge round on English soil, just before or just after the Wimbledon classic. This would assure every competing nation enough first class tennis within a month's time to make the trip well worth while.

As for the American team, the names most prominently mentioned at present are those of Champion W. M. Johnston, W. T. Tilden, 2d; R. N. Williams, 2d; Wallace F. Johnson and C. S. Garland.

Third Crown for Quaker Five.

A long and extraordinarily successful run of college basket ball comes to an end this month. The University of Pennsylvania, although having two games still to play, clinched this season's intercollegiate championship by trouncing Cornell at Ithaca last Friday night. This is Penn's third title, and carries permanent possession of the Heppe trophy, the prize all six member colleges have had as their goal for years.

For the last five seasons the Quaker quintets of Lon Jourdet have dominated the league, just as Harry Fisher's invincible Columbia teams held sway from 1909 to 1914. Penn won legs on the trophy in 1916 and 1918. A victory last year, the third, was disallowed because Dartmouth did not have a wartime team and because Princeton, Yale and Cornell did not play a full schedule of games. No championship was awarded, and Pennsylvania was forced to wait still another year for the crowning honor which seemed inevitably hers. With the championship and trophy assured, Penn now seeks to establish a record, namely, a league season without defeats. In 1910, with only four teams in the league, Columbia performed the extraordinary feat of winning all games. This year Penn has won every league contest played so far, and has only two more to wage. Moreover, the Quakers have announced they would challenge the University of Chicago, champions of the Western Conference, for the national collegiate title. It is to be regretted, however, that Penn has refused to meet New York University, by long odds the strongest team in the East outside the league.

For the last few years the league has provided sport of the highest type. Questions of amateurism and eligibility are never raised. The teams have steadfastly refrained from playing freshmen and graduates. The league had its inception in 1901. Harvard was a member until 1907 and Dartmouth joined in 1911. In 1908 and 1909 there was no organized league, but the group reformed in 1910, and a little later the Heppe trophy was offered for competition. Columbia leads with seven championships, including a tie with Cornell in 1914. Yale has won five titles and Penn six, including a tie with Princeton, which was the Tigers' only finish at the top. Cornell has won twice, including the 1914 tie, but neither Dartmouth nor Harvard ever finished in the lead. Harry Fisher, one-time Columbia star and later coach, holds the individual record of an average of seven baskets a game, made in 1904.

It is to be hoped that another trophy will be forthcoming immediately, without the lapse of a season.

Amateur Wizards of the Cue.

The seventeenth national championship Class A 18.2 balkline billiard tournament, concluded at the Boston Athletic Association last week, was the most successful in every respect ever conducted by the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. In general interest and all-around playing ability of the contestants it surpassed all of the sixteen titular events which had preceded it into the annals of the sport. Not only were all of the forty-two matches well attended, but the form the players had shown in other events held earlier in the season had attracted nation-wide attention to their efforts in quest of the title.

This was particularly true of David McAndless, Jr., of Chicago, who won the title a year ago. While playing in the Eastern Class A tournament at the Amateur Billiard Club of New York, just prior to the Boston event, McAndless created a sensation by making high runs of 148 and 122, both unfinished, and establishing a high average of 27 3-11. It showed that he is a player who could hold his own with any amateur in the world, with the possible exception of Alfred Mortier of France, holder of the world's amateur championship. It showed that McAndless, if he elected to turn professional, would have to be rated in the first flight among those agile cue jugglers. Naturally, his participation in the national championship tournament caused the eyes of the billiard world in general to be focused on Boston.

As a result of his brilliant work it was quite within the course of natural events that he be established the favorite to repeat his success of the year before and to retain the title. Because of his earlier work his defeat by Percy Collins, a fellow townsman from Chicago, came as a surprise. And yet, under a cold and unbiased analysis of past performances, there was no good reason why Collins's accession to the title should have occasioned any deep or prolonged surprise.

For some time Collins has been recognized as one of the leading amateur players of this country. He has been regarded as a player of great possibilities—one who might upset the dope upon the slightest provocation. Evidently he considered the national championship as sufficient provocation.

Speed Not Only Requisite.

Weather and water conditions off the Isle of Wight, England, are seldom of the mill pond variety and it will be well for those who have to do with the selection of a team of three power craft to represent this country in the contests for international motor boat supremacy, to be held in those waters this Summer, to bear that fact in mind.

Speed alone is not what is needed if conditions hold true to form, for a mere speed craft without a sufficient factor of seaworthiness would have but a gambling chance in the waters over which the contests are to be held and which usually are turbulent.

The speed boat contests held off Miami, Fla., last week afford a line on a type of craft that might well be selected as at least one of the three to be selected. The Miss Nassau, one of the open displacement boats, is reported to have made better than forty-two miles an hour in rough water, although her motor was unable to come within a large margin of its capacity, 1,700 revolutions a minute being the best attained, while 2,200 is possible, and it is claimed that at the latter number of revolutions the Miss Nassau will attain a speed of fifty miles an hour.

In heavy going fifty miles an hour might well be speed enough to win, and it would appear wise to include along with the seventy-mile-an-hour racing machines at least one of the sturdier seagoing plodders, only capable of making fifty miles an hour.

However, neither fifty nor seventy mile hydroplanes or displacement craft are of any account unless their motors stand up when the real test of contest arrives, and it is usually motor trouble that keeps racing craft from winning rather than fine lines of design or mere trial speeds. It is to be hoped that those who select the team of three craft to represent America abroad will take motor reliability into consideration as well as speed and seaworthiness.

We didn't realize what we had started the other day when we told of a customer who showed us an overcoat bought here eighteen years ago and still going strong.

It struck us as a news item interesting enough to pass along, though naturally we and our customers would be very happy, and lucky, if the life of their Winter overcoats averaged even a fair fraction of eighteen years.

But it stirred up an old friend to write how one of our overcoats has warmed him through nineteen Adirondack Winters and is still in service.

Then, through Saturday's baby blizzard entered a good looking ulster whose occupant said he just dropped in to make that eighteen year old coat look like thirty cents and put it in the infant class.

Whereupon he told how he bought his ulster here in the year of the Great Blizzard—that was 1888, thirty-two years ago this month—and ever since it has kept him warm and comfy whenever a reminder of the Great Blizzard blew.

We admit this is a record, and only regret that we must ring down the curtain on this Longevity Competition, lest we convey to customers of less extended experience too optimistic an idea of what can fairly be expected from our clothing.

VAN SLYCK REGAINS BASKET BALL LEAD

Once again Captain Van Slyck, of the Yale basket ball team, assumes the lead in the keen rivalry this season for the honor of being leading scorer in the intercollegiate league. After trailing Sweeney, the veteran Pennsylvania forward, last week by one point, Van Slyck returns to the top place with a total point score of 117, four more than Sweeney. Pennsylvania has still two games to play, however, and Yale only one more, which would indicate that Sweeney has an excellent chance of again overhauling Van Slyck and taking the first place for the season.

As a result of the high scoring of this Winter, interest now centers on the possibility of either Sweeney or Van Slyck establishing a new individual scoring record. Kinney, the former Yale star, holds the high mark, according to the records which have been kept accurately only since 1906. Kinney caged forty-three field goals and 44 from fouls for a total of 130 points during the season of 1916-17.

The records of the ten leading individual scorers and the standing of the teams follow:

HORSE KICKS A GOAL.

Counts for Other Polo Team—Bluebirds Beat Foxhunters 13-3.

Flashing a brand of play which completely overwhelmed their rivals, the Bluebirds indoor polo trio vanquished the Foxhunters yesterday in the first match of the special cup series at Durland's Riding Academy. The score was 13 to 3. Herbert Winn showed the way in the Bluebirds' attack, scoring 7 goals. Four of this cluster came in the opening period, which ended with the Bluebirds in front by 8 to 1. The lone tally for the Foxhunters was scored when the pony ridden by H. Levinski of the Bluebirds kicked the ball over his team's goal.

RYAN AND M'GANN WIN AT HANDBALL

Capture Metropolitan Title in Doubles by Defeat of O'Brien and Demerest.

After one of the most keenly conntested matches of the tournament, P. Ryan and James McGann of the Pastime A. C. emerged victorious yesterday in the final of the Metropolitan A. A. U. doubles championship handball tournament on the court of the Annunciation A. C. The Bronx club representatives triumphed over Edward Demerest and Andy O'Brien, Annunciation A. C., in a spirited three-game test. The scores were 16—21, 21—16, 21—20.

Ryan's individual work played an important part in the outcome. The Pastime men played brilliantly together, but in the frequent rallies which marked the match it was Ryan's skill and hard driving which invariably were successful.

The summary:

SARATOGA STAKES HIGHER.

Amounts Raised and Mile Race for Maiden Three-Year-Olds Added.

Richard T. Wilson, President of the Saratoga Association, announced yesterday that there would be a material increase in the value of most of the important stakes to be run during the meeting at Saratoga in August. It is also planned to increase the value of overnight events, if the attendance warrants it.

Six of the best of the stake races have been increased in value and five of these by changing from guaranteed to added money. This insures horsemen of a definite amount above what is subscribed by those entering and starting horses. A new stake, to be known as the Expectation, has been added to the list. This will be for maiden three-year-olds at a mile and will have a guaranteed value of $3,000.

The stakes affected by the increases follow:

The Saratoga Handicap, changed from $7,000 guaranteed to $3,000 added; the Champlain Handicap, changed from $3,500 guaranteed to $2,000 added; the Merchants and Citizens Handicap, changed from $3,500 guaranteed to $3,000 added; the Delaware Handicap, changed from $3,500 guaranteed to $2,000 added; the Miller (formerly the Kenner), changed from $1,500 added to $2,500 added; the Saranac Handicap, changed from $3,000 guaranteed to $2,500 added.

We Kept Our Trains Moving—

IT was January of the critical year 1918. Russia had gone Bolshevik and was negotiating a disastrous peace with the Teutons. Italy was struggling to recover from a defeat which left hundreds of square miles of territory in the hands of the enemy. French and British forces had to be diverted to her help. German newspapers were bragging that the U-boats were sinking more than 800,000 tons of shipping each month. The German High Command was preparing for the greatest thrust of the war. France was able to give her people only five slices of bread a day. Great Britain was undergoing a food crisis. Officials of the Allies were imploring America for munitions, food and men. Lord Rhondda, Food Controller of Great Britain, cabled to Washington:

"Unless America can increase in January the quantity of supplies sent in December, I am unwilling to guarantee that the allied nations can hold out."

OVER here there was a coal famine, with heatless days, lightless nights, gasless Sundays and workless Mondays. The worst blizzard in fifty years, accompanied by weather below zero, had overwhelmed the country. More than 200 ships lay idle in New York Harbor, waiting to carry supplies to our Allies. The railroads were so badly congested that a freight embargo had to be declared on all but materials essential to the prosecution of the war. The ruin of civilization impended if foodstuffs could not be moved.

We kept our trains moving in spite of the weather. Our cars carried a good proportion of the food and munitions and coal needed to win the war. It was a victory over the worst conditions of a generation.

What our lines did in that emergency, we can do again and for the same reason. We have the morale, the men and the tracks necessary for serving the public even under extreme difficulties.

5TH AV. BUS PATRONS OFFER 1,500 IDEAS

COMPANY CHANGES RULES

Jury to Award Fifty $5 Prizes for Practical Reforms in Service.

There are folks in New York who'd like to see the Fifth Avenue buses fitted up with powder puffs, hat racks and smoking nooks, and there's one man who wants a barber installed so he can get a once-over on his way to the office in the morning. These facts came out yesterday when John A. Ritchie, President of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, announced that about 1,500 patrons had submitted ideas and suggestions in the corporation's "courtesy contest" just ended.

Names of the fifty winners of the $5 prizes were not announced, but a jury composed of officers of the bus lines, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, and Dr. David J. Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, are busy picking them out.

Many angles of the public mind were revealed by the contest. Take, for instance, the lady who wrote to Mr. Ritchie commending a conductor who took a heckling from what the letter-writer described as "two irate society women." Mr. Ritchie wrote in reply:

"Your narration of the manner in which one of our conductors was 'heckled' by two representative society women would be humorous were it not for the fact that it is a serious matter with us because of its frequency. You would be surprised to learn the extent to which some women go in their efforts to harass, outrage and irritate our conductors. How they can do it or what pleasure they can possible derive from it is a conundrum, the solution of which makes 'How old is Ann?' fade into significance. Were it possible to eliminate the snob, the nagger and the constitutional grouch whom nothing pleases, our courtesy record would automatically go to 100 per cent."

Several persons wrote asking that dogs be permitted to use the coaches and Ritchie, answering them, said he was fond of dogs himself and it had pained him much to have to rule them off because "we had Russian greyhounds, Scotch collies and bulldogs c. all classes occupying seats to the discomfort and inconvenience of passengers."

After declaring that the contest had proved its employes 98 per cent. courteous, the company announced it would attempt the following changes as a result of the competition:

The standardization of conductors' answers and directions.

Skip stops.

Locked box for complaints, suggestions, &c.

Definite signal from drivers to prospective passengers.

Electric bulbs without tips.

Mr. Ritchie did not set any date for the inauguration of the changes, but added that the company was making other tests to improve its service. Among them, he said, was the perfection of a top for the buses for inclement weather and a sign denoting when the coaches were filled to capacity.

AIRCRAFT NEEDED IN LATIN AMERICA

Commercial aeronautics is attracting the attention of the countries of Latin America, and there is a widespread demand for aircraft made in the United States, according to diplomatic representatives from the Southern republics who were the guests of honor at a luncheon given yesterday in the Vanderbilt Hotel by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association. Yesterday was All-America Day at the National Aircraft Show in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, and the diplomats attended in a body.

Señor Don Federico Alfonso Pezet, Peruvian Ambassador, told of the steps which his country was taking to put commercial aeronautics on a firm footing. French, British and American aviators had been engaged by the Government to train native young men, he said. Last year an additional aviation school was authorized and scores of aero clubs organized to foster this new means of travel.

"Commercial and sport flying is commanding considerable attention throughout Peru," Señor Pezet said. "The Postal Department of Peru has asked American and European firms to submit bids for the establishment of more aerial routes for the transportation of mail, passengers and freight. Several air line services are contemplated, for, in a country like Peru, where cross-country travel is slow, tedious and dangerous, because of the topography, air transportation becomes the ideal."

The Cuban Government was alive to the commercial possibilities of the airplane and was devoting its attention to the establishment of aerial transportation lines to the United States, Señor C. de Quesada, Vice Consul in New York, told the diners.

Señor Francisco Yanes, Assistant Director General of the Pan American Union, urged American aircraft manufacturers to take advantage of the opportunities offered them for marketing their product. He warned them that European countries were bending all their efforts to get the Latin American market and had sent special missions to study conditions.

"We need airplanes in Latin America," he said, "to discover our vast unknown interior country, to reach many a new 'El Dorado' lying hidden in some inaccessible region, to find the headwaters of some of our rivers and perhaps to reveal the site of some of our forgotten cities lying asleep in the fastness of some impenetrable forest."

Among the other guests at the luncheon were Lieut. Col. Alessandro Guidoni, Italian Air Attaché to the United States; Lieutenant Horacio Mira, Chilean naval attaché; Commander Ambry, naval attaché from Peru; Señor A. Lopez Ulloa, diplomatic attaché from Honduras; Dr. Gusman, Colombian Minister of Finance, and General Gomez Mayoral, also of Colombia; Señor Don J. E. Lefevre, Minister from Panama; Commander Albert C. Reed of transatlantic flight fame, and representatives of the Manufacturers Aircraft Association.

More than 5,000 members of the American Legion visited the show during the afternoon and evening. Today will be International Day and members of the European diplomatic corps have been invited to attend.

IMPORTS CALCULATED ON CURRENT EXCHANGE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Reports that there have been various systems used in computing the value of imports as recorded in statistics issued by the Department of Commerce for January were denied at the Customs Division of the Treasury and the Department of Commerce. It was stated that imports for January had been computed on the current rate of exchange, and the same method was followed for the December statistics.

The new system for computing imports on the basis of current exchange was determined upon about Nov. 15, and it is possible that errors were made in some of the figures because of the fact that the new system was being tried out. The January figures, it is believed, more nearly represent the actual status according to current exchange.

That the system had been changed several times during the last few months was flatly denied. It was said no permission had been granted for a change since the new order of computing figures on the basis of current rates of exchange was issued. If errors had been made they were due, it was said, to the fact that the new system had been in operation for so short a time.

Because of frequent changes in the basis of figuring the value of imports since Nov. 15 last, the comparative value of statistics on the inflow of merchandise from England, Germany, France and other countries whose exchanges are depreciated in terms of American dollars has been much reduced. At the Custom House here, and presumably at other Custom Houses, the calculations were made at the par of foreign exchanges in one month and at current values in other months, these curious alterations being made no less than three times. Prior to Nov. 15 there was also a switch in one of the Autumn months from the par of exchanges to current values, the return to the method long in vogue being made at the behest of the Treasury Department.

It is said that the amount of duties collected on imports was not altered by the different methods of calculating merchandise values, as the prices paid by American importers were dealt with in terms of American gold prices in laying imposts. But, so far as statistics are concerned, it appears as if the varying methods are likely to change substantially the ideas of economists in respect to Europe's expansion of imports in recent months.

Taking January as an example, the report of the Department of Commerce displayed a new high record of imports into the United States, the gain over December being $93,000,000 and all other months being exceeded by a good margin. It happened, however, that in January the pound sterling value of British goods brought in was figured with the pound at the pre-war par of $4.86⅝, while in December the current rate was the basis of calculation. In December sterling exchange ranged from $3.99⅞ down to $3.79¼.

BACK HIGH SCHOOL HEAD.

Parents Fight Move to Supersede Acting Principal.

Protest against the nomination of Arthur A. Boylan by the Board of Superintendents to be Principal of the new George Washington High School over the head of Dr. Frank M. Wheat, Acting Principal, will be made to the Board of Education this afternoon by a delegation of Washington Heights residents. The school, which finally will be located in a building, authorized but not constructed, at Convent Avenue and 135th Street, has been organized, and now has a thousand pupils in Public School 52, Broadway and Academy Street.

Daniel W. Lenihan, President of the Parents' Association, said the Board of Superintendents had tried to keep Mr. Boylan's nomination secret, in the hope that it might be confirmed without protest. Mrs. J. H. Kahns of 533 West 141st Street said Dr. Wheat's retention was favored by the Superintendent in charge of high schools, the teachers of the school, the parents and the pupils. Mrs. Kahns asserted that an attempt had been made to make a "political plum" of the place, and threatened to take the matter to the Legislature.

MORE WILL STUDY ABROAD.

American-Scandinavian Foundation Doubles Its Fellowships.

The number of traveling fellowships established by the American-Scandinavian Foundation of New York City has been doubled, it was announced yesterday. Twenty fellowships, with a value of either $1,000 or $1,200, will be awarded in May to American students, men and women, for technological research and general study in the universities of Sweden, Norway and Denmark. An equal number of students from the Scandinavian countries will receive fellowships in American universities.

Ten fellowships for American students in Swedish universities were established a year ago. This year five students will be sent to Denmark and five to Norway, in addition to the ten to Sweden. The list will include fellowships in physics and chemistry, hydro-electrical engineering, metallurgy, forestry, agriculture, oceanography, weather forecasting and literature.

Among the American guarantors of the exchange with Sweden are Brown Brothers & Co., the Standard Oil Company, the National City Bank, Furness, Withy & Co., Archibald McNeil & Sons Company, S. K. F. Ball Bearing Company, John Aspegren, Charles S. Haight, H. G. Leach, E. J. McCormack and A. V. Moore of New York; J. Stogdell Stokes of Philadelphia and Ira Nelson Morris of Chicago, Minister to Sweden. The names of the guarantors of the Danish and Norwegian exchanges will be announced later.

Applications for fellowships, with letters of recommendation, must be filed at the office of the American-Scandinavian Foundation, 25 West Forty-fifth Street, before April 1. Successful candidates will be notified about May 1 and are expected to depart from New York in the early Summer.

Foch Thanks Knights of Columbus.

Marshal Foch has cabled a congratulatory reply to the Knights of Columbus in response to their announcement that he was to be the subject of one of the four bas-reliefs the organization is to erect in Metz next September. The other bas-reliefs will represent General Pershing at Lafayette's tomb, Columbus discovering America and President Wilson reading America's declaration of war.

BOY DROWNS AS ICE BREAKS; CHUM SAVED

CHAIN OF SLEDS FORMED

Rescued Lad Was Saved by an Odd Device—Victim's Body Found After Five Hours.

Edwin Downes, eight-year-old son of Detective Thomas C. Downes of Inspector Conboy's staff, was drowned yesterday afternoon when his sled went through the ice on Indian Point, at Avenue P and West Twelfth Street, Brooklyn. Louis Caponi, a nine-year-old playmate who slid down the bank on the same sled with Edwin, was rescued by older boys, who tied the ropes of several sleds together and pulled him out. The Downes boy did not come to the surface, and his body was not recovered until five hours later.

Half a dozen youngsters had made several trips down the high embankments that leads down to the pond. There had been no warning cracks to make them afraid of the ice, and the Downes and Caponi boys set out with the usual yells of joy. Thirty feet out from the shore the ice gave way and sled and boys disappeared. Almost at once Louis came up and shouted for help.

Older boys and girls, who had been watching the fun, hurried to the rescue. In a few minutes Louis was safe on shore and bundled up in overcoats.

Word was sent to little Edwin's father and mother, at 2,182 Seventy-third Street. Both parents came running to the scene, but could do nothing. A call was turned in for a fire truck and Engine Company 253 responded. A ladder was run out over the hole in the ice, and George Fricke, a fireman, made such frantic efforts to find the body that he, too, fell into the water, and was injured. Other firemen got him safely out, and he was sent to the Coney Island Hospital.

Inspector Conboy then arrived and telephoned to Lieutenant Mulhill of the Marine Division of the Police Department, who led the rescue party of New York policemen at the wreck of the Princess Anne. Lieutenant Mulhill, after several hours' use of grappling irons, finally recovered the body. He worked from a rowboat brought in a patrol wagon from the Tamaqua Yacht Club at Sheepshead Bay.

ARNSTEIN LOOT SOUGHT IN MONTREAL

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Que., March 7.—Money lenders of Montreal are being sought in connection with the Arnstein securities theft. Special investigators from the United States Secret Service have been quartered for several days in a hotel looking after what is known as the "Arnstein case" but which really means the case of wholesale bond thefts from firms in New York by means of an organization which placed errand boys in these places for the distinct purpose of stealing bonds.

The investigators are not so much interested in Arnstein himself as they are in at least one or two firms of bill discounting agents, nominally brokers, who it is said have been engaged for some time in buying securities, no matter by whom they were offered, at a tremendous discount.

These agents, the investigators seem to think, are connected with the moving spirits of the managers of the wholesale bond robberies, of which Arnstein seems to be only one factor. If their information is correct it is intimated that some people known to have been connected with legal and illegal usury for years may be involved.

"Nicky" Arnstein, wanted in connection with the alleged conspiracy to steal securities valued at $5,000,000 from brokerage houses, will surrender himself today to the District Attorney, according to information received last night by Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith.

Mr. Smith said a person from whom he had on other occasions received trustworthy information had called upon him at the National Democratic Club and informed him that Arnstein arrived in the city late Saturday night and was in hiding on the upper west side. Mr. Smith said his informant stated that Arnstein had returned to give himself up upon representation that his failure to do so would prejudice the case against him.

William J. Fallon, counsel for Arnstein, said on Saturday that he believed Arnstein would surrender himself on Monday.

500 Guests Flee Basement Blaze, Leaving Many Checks Unpaid.

Five hundred guests of Churchill's restaurant, Broadway and Forty-ninth Street, were sent hurrying to the street at 10 o'clock last evening by a fire which started in the kitchen in the basement and filled the dining rooms with a dense, greasy smoke. This enforced departure had its compensation for a considerable number of the diners, estimated at about half of them, who left without the formality of paying their checks.

The blaze was caused by grease catching fire in one of the battery of twelve broilers in the kitchen and a slight explosion which scattered the burning fat about the kitchen. The fire spread to the walls and went up the partitions until it had burned a hole ten feet long in the main floor and smouldered between partitions as far up as the mezzanine floor.

Captain Thomas Churchill, the proprietor, told the guests that there was a slight fire in the basement and that they had better get their wraps and leave at once. Similar word was sent to those dining on the upper floor. Smoke began to fill the dining room almost immediately, but Captain Churchill and his waiters were able to prevent any semblance of panic. Many left the dining room without their wraps, which were later brought to the street by the check boys.

One stream of water was used to put out the fire, but the firemen found it necessary to wreck the kitchen. Captain Churchill estimated the damage at $5,000.

"Daddy, that Sunday afternoon, I pictured a Duo-Art in our living room and you and I sitting on the sofa, my head on your shoulder, listening to the music that is dearest to both of us"

A WEEK-END PARTY

Introducing THE DUO-ART PIANOLA

Miss Castleman's School

DADDY DEAR:

You say I seldom write you a long letter unless I want something. Well, this is going to be the exception. It's going to be a long letter, because I have lots to tell you, but its main object is to tell you of something you want—something you need very badly.

Singing to the accompaniment of the Duo-Art.

Father, I had the most wonderful time at the Lawrenson's over the week-end—it seems like a fairy dream to me.

I arrived Friday, late in the afternoon, but before any of the family came home. After taking off my things I went down to watch for Eleanor, who I knew was at a matinee. The drawing room was in semi-darkness. I went to the window and looked out.

A downy snow-blanket lay over everything. The sun had left a faint rose flush in the West and just above hung the slender, silver crescent moon. One by one the lights began to twinkle in the park; the sky purpled slowly. I stood spellbound and listened—for softly to my ears, as if to paint indelibly upon my mind the lovely winter scene before me, came Music—

Chopin Played Tenderly, Bewitchingly

I listened almost breathlessly to the end. Then leaving the window, walked across to where stood a grand piano. Then I paused; there was no one there!

But as I hesitated, half startled, a low laugh greeted my ears and Eleanor rose from a dim corner and came toward me. Greetings over, I turned again to the piano.

"That might have been Paderewski," I said, still wondering.

"It was," she rejoined. "This was Father's Christmas present to us. It is a Duo-Art Piano. Let me show you the secret."

Paderewski's Playing Made to Live Forever

"Paderewski played it, and as he played these cuttings were made in the roll and each touch of his fingers, each tone-shade, each phrase of his interpretation was made to live forever. Just as Paderewski played his beloved Chopin at Aeolian Hall one day before he sailed for Poland, you hear it when we put this roll in the piano and press this little lever."

A Theatre Party

I listened to two or three lovely numbers and would have sat for hours drinking in the wonder of it, but Eleanor bore me away to dress for dinner, and the theatre. Six of us went to see "Buddies" that night; Eleanor's brother Jim, with two college friends of his and her cousin Nan, who is visiting her too. Such a corking show—we enjoyed it immensely. The next morning we three girls went down to Aeolian Hall and bought a Duo-Art Roll of two of the quaint, dainty songs from "Buddies" made into the snappiest Fox-Trot.

Dancing to the Music of the Duo-Art

SATURDAY night they had a dance—fourteen couples. The drawing room was cleared for dancing and such music as the Duo-Art gave us! Daddy, it is the weirdest, most fascinating instrument! Imagine at one time its playing Chopin with all of Paderewski's genius; at another, perfect dance music; one-steps, fox-trots, the dreamiest of waltzes—as though possessed of the very spirit of Terpsichore—dashing it off with a richness, a sparkle, a clear pulsing rhythm that would make a wooden Indian dance!

Singing to Perfect Duo-Art Accompaniments

Then in the interims between dances, Eleanor would put in the piano a music-roll of a popular song. Many of them have the words printed right on the roll, and what fun it was to gather 'round the piano and sing.

The vocal event of the evening, however, was Jim's clear, well-trained tenor singing Frank La Forge's "Like a Rose Bud" played by La Forge himself. The world's greatest accompanists and song-writers are making record-rolls for the Duo-Art; can you imagine what this would mean to a singer or vocal student?

The Magic of Josef Hofmann

When it was announced the next day that we were going to hear Josef Hofmann at Carnegie Hall, my cup of joy was full. For two hours we sat in that great dim hall and listened to the piano magic of Hofmann. Then home, and seated in the fire-lit dusk, we conjured the same magic music—reveled at close range in the ravishing piano playing of the master.

His technical perfection, his incomparable beauty of tone, that mystic quality which only Hofmann evokes from the piano, were as clearly distinguishable as they had been earlier in the day at Carnegie Hall.

What inspiration—what education for anyone studying music to be able to hear at leisure over and over the inspired art of the great pianists such as Gabrilowitsch, Novaes, Grainger, Ganz—forty of them there are—who play records only for the Duo-Art!

Daddy, dear, that Sunday afternoon, I pictured a Duo-Art in our living room and you and I sitting on the sofa, my head on your shoulder, listening to the music that is dearest to both of us—the things Mumsie played so often when she was with us—the "Melody in F," "The Evening Star," "Kamennoi-Ostrow," "To the Spring."

Great masters have played them for the Duo-Art and they sound to me as though they played them with special tenderness and sympathy knowing they were to place the benediction of beautiful music in countless homes—to bring sweet memories to instill the love of good music in the breasts of little children, to light the dimming path of those grown old!

L'ENVOI

I AM sending you a beautiful Duo-Art Catalogue by registered mail. Of course, the Duo-Art costs more than a plain piano, but not so very much, and it is so wonderful—it is worth anything that anyone who loves music can afford to pay. If I thought I would find a Duo-Art when I come home for Easter vacation, I should like, oh! so much to have a week-end party like Eleanor Lawrenson's, with the crowning touch of joy added by the presence of the nicest Daddy in the whole world.

Your, Betty

STORM CUTS MILK SUPPLY ONE-HALF

Snowdrifts Delay Trains, and Many Farmers Cannot Reach Railroads.

BUT SERVICE IS IMPROVING

JERSEY TRAVELERS RETURN

Abandoned Trips to Seashore Points on Saturday, Owing to Blizzard's Effects.

New York's milk supply will probably be reduced by 50 per cent. or more today by the delay of milk trains in New York State and Pennsylvania on account of snowdrifts, according to Loton Horton, President of the Sheffield Farms, Slawson-Decker Company.

L. V. Van Bomel, traffic manager of that company, said yesterday afternoon that from information which he then had not more than 5 per cent. of the city's normal milk supply would be delivered this morning. It was reported at the New York Central offices last night, however, that all of the snowdrifts stalling milk trains had been cut away, and that the trains were being hurried through to the city. Many of the trains, however, carry a light supply of milk, because many of the roads north of Albany have been snowed in so deeply that farmers cannot drive their milk-laden sleighs through to the stations. About 75 per cent. of the normal supply was delivered in the city yesterday, it was reported.

Last night's forecast was for fair and continued cold today and warmer weather tomorrow, with moderate west and northwest winds. The lowest temperature yestedday was 12, at 7 A. M., and the highest 26, at 3 P. M., after which it fell slowly, reaching 19 at 10 o'clock in the evening.

Crowds of belated passengers, whose trains were cut off in Long Island City and New Jersey by washouts and snowdrifts, arrived in New York yesterday. During the morning train service on the Long Island Railroad was delayed because of the difficulties encountered by the train dispatchers where long stretches of telegraph wires were down. The Jamaica offices of the road were out of touch for hours with some of the trains on the northern part of the island. In the afternoon it was reported that service had been resumed in full on all parts of the system except north of Riverhead, and it was expected that washouts in that section would be repaired during the evening.

One thousand persons bound for Lakewood and Atlantic City on Saturday got only as far as Red Bank, when their trains were stopped by snowdrifts, and the majority of them abandoned their trips and returned to New York last night. When it was found that Shrewsbury cut was filled with snow and impassable, the passengers were taken from the trains and accommodated at hotels, boarding houses, and private homes at Red Bank. The snow was cleared on Saturday morning from the cut and two trains enabled to proceed, but the high wind began blowing the snow back faster than it could be handled, and later trains had to be backed to Red Bank. The cut was swept clear again yesterday morning.

The Westchester County Penitentiary at Elmsford, which had been snowbound for two days by drifts five and six feet high, was put in contact with the outside world yesterday, when a gang of twenty-five prisoners plowed a channel through the roadways to the Putnam Railroad, one mile away.

At the Bedford Reformatory several of the women inmates yesterday afternoon volunteered to wield snow shovels to clear away the walks leading to the mess hall and chapel. This decision was reached after many of them had learned there would be no morning services because the snow made the walks impassable. Before supper in the evening the women had cleared most of the walks about the institution.

SCORES ARE ISOLATED ON SNOWBOUND TRAINS

RICHMOND, Maine, March 7.—Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army, on her way from Canada to New York, was one of 200 passengers detained here tonight because of the suspension of railroad traffic due to yesterday's storm. Among the others on the Maine Central Railroad train held up here were five who had booked passage on a steamer due to leave New York tomorrow morning.

The sudden addition to the population of the town has created a food problem. All the food which could be located quickly was provided for the passengers and the Chamber of Commerce and the local Red Cross chapter took steps to see that they did not go hungry after these were exhausted.

CREW RESCUED AT SEA.

Sailors Taken from Sinking Schooner Eva B. Douglas.

The Naval Communication Bureau, 44 Whitehall Street, received a radio message yesterday from Captain Oscar Penrice of the Lamport & Holt liner Vasari, due today from Buenos Aires, stating that he had rescued the Captain and crew of the four-masted American schooner Eva B. Douglas, about 300 miles east of the Delaware capes. When the schooner was sighted by the Vasari, she was waterlogged and sinking. She sailed from Buenos Aires on Dec. 11, with a general cargo for New York. She was owned by the Olympia Shipping Company of New York.

Berlin Families Obliged to Inter the Dead Themselves.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 7.—For three weeks now the grave-diggers in some Berlin cemeteries have been striking, causing incredible inconvenience. The relatives of the deceased very often are compelled to dig the grave themselves, after the funeral has been deferred, in some cases two weeks.

It is not uncommon to see men with frock coats and silk hats and even women shoveling.

GERARD CLAIMS DELEGATES.

Says He Will Have Most of Those from Western States.

"I expect to have most of the delegates from the Western States," Mr. Gerard said.

Ulster Delegation Declares Mission to America Success

BELFAST, March 7.—The Ulster delegation which has been visiting the United States and Canada returned here today. The Rev. Louis Crooks said the mission had been a triumphant success and the American people were absolutely with Ulster. Those against Ulster were "vociferous hyphenates, in nowise representing true Americans."

"Our point that home rule was purely a domestic affair," Mr. Crooks added, "and that America had nothing to do with the internal relations of a friendly power, was received with enthusiasm throughout the United States."

MISS MARBURY SAYS HER HOME IS HERE

PLEADS FOR PARTY UNITY

Miss Margaret Vale's Offer to Leave Committee of One Thousand Is Not Accepted.

Charges of her opponents that her residence in France made her ineligible for election as delegate at large to the Democratic National Convention were met by Miss Elisabeth Marbury yesterday in a speech at a meeting of the Democratic Women's National Campaign Committee of One Thousand at the home of its Chairman, Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, 27 West Eighty-second Street. About 100 women were present and all pledged themselves to work for the election of Miss Marbury and Miss Harriet May Mills of Syracuse, the selections of the recent unofficial Democratic State Convention.

Miss Marbury read a letter from Colby & Brown, her attorneys, which stated that Miss Marbury's residence in France had been only temporary and that her domicile had always been in New York City, where she was born. This opinion was supported by a memorandum from John Godfrey Saxe, who was called in consultation.

Miss Marbury ended all talk that she might retire as a candidate and declared her loyalty to the Democratic party. She made a plea for party unity and support of the Democratic organization and pledged allegiance to Mrs. Crosby, who is the associate woman Chairman of the State organization.

A clash, because certain members of the Committee of One Thousand had failed to support Miss Marbury after her selection by the convention, occurred at a meeting of the Executive Committee on Saturday, as a result of which Mrs. Henry P. Keith, Chairman of the Women Democrats of America, and Miss Margaret Vale, its organizer, left the meeting. Complaint was made by Mrs. Anna Moscowitz Kross and Mrs. Julia S. Danders that Miss Vale had used her place as a member of the Publicity Committee of the Committee of One Thousand to help Mrs. Clarice Baright, who prepared petitions as a candidate against Miss Marbury in the primaries but who has since announced that she would not file them.

Miss Vale explained that she had been acting as campaign manager for Mrs. Baright and not as a member of the Publicity Committee, and offered to resign. Mrs. Keith supported her. Mrs. Crosby stated that she hoped neither would leave the Committee of One Thousand and did not accept Miss Vale's resignation.

SAY HOOVER WILL TAKE STAND AS REPUBLICAN

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 7.—Minneapolis men who have been in conference in New York City with Herbert Hoover for several days expect Mr. Hoover to break his silence regarding party affairs early this week, and declare himself a Republican. This step is considered necessary by his friends if he is to be considered seriously by Republican conventions.

James F. Bell, a Minneapolis miller associated with Mr. Hoover in the Food Administration, went to New York on Monday, and on Wednesday H. P. Wickham, Secretary of the Herbert Hoover Club of Minneapolis, also left for New York. No fewer than fifty friends of Mr. Hoover have been in conference with him during the week, it is said, and he is reported to have reached the conclusion that the time has come for him to take a definite stand. His statement, it is expected, will align him definitely with the Republican Party and will declare his platform. Messages received here today by Mr. Hoover's supporters, supposedly from some member of the Minneapolis delegation in New York, carried such a prediction.

The advice came as a climax to a week of sensations in the Minnesota Presidential situation. With the preferential vote to be taken a week from tomorrow, the Presidential race again holds the centre of interest.

Leonard Wood had been the favorite in Minnesota, with Frank O. Lowden and Hiram W. Johnson as runners-up, and now Hoover looms up as a dark horse. Johnson will invade the State tomorrow for four days, coming from South Dakota, where he campaigned a week.

WOOD FOR WAR FRIENDSHIPS

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 7.—Major Frank Knox made public tonight a letter written to him by Major Gen. Leonard Wood, to be read at a meeting here tomorrow night when French war memorial certificates will be presented to relatives of New Hampshire soldiers who lost their lives in the war. The letter says:

"We must see to it that the sentiments of friendship and comradeship which were built up during the war are maintained. We must remember that the dead of France and our dead lie wrapped in a common winding sheet. Let no man drive a wedge between us and the Allies. Those who do it and those who strive to break up the relationship built up during the war are those who betray the dead and make their sacrifices in a measure unavailing."

General Wood was snowbound at Boston Saturday and was prevented from going on to Manchester, N. H., to deliver an address at the Republican Club. He telegraphed to the Manchester Reception Committee, notifying it of his predicament and authorizing publication of an advance copy of his speech in the New Hampshire newspapers this morning as an address to the people of the State. The Chamber of Commerce and several commercial organizations at Manchester had arranged for further receptions to General Wood today. General Wood left Boston yesterday afternoon for Chicago.

DEMOCRATS WATCH THREE CANDIDATES

BRYAN "OUT OF THE RACE"

But All Present Plans Are Contingent on What Wilson Thinks of Third Term.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Political leaders in the nation's capital are viewing the Presidential campaign with varying emotions. While the deadlock in the Senate over the Peace Treaty situation still serves to add to the muddle, some definite convictions have been reached.

Prominent among these is the conviction that statements which may be made by Herbert Hoover or William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, that they are not seeking the nomination for President on the Democratic ticket, are to be taken with at least a tion of salt rather than with the proverbial single grain.

That Mr. Hoover has his eyes on the nomination and, in fact, has been laying his plans to head the ticket for many months, is accepted here without serious question. And party leaders have no more doubt in their minds about the hopes and ambitions of Mr. McAdoo, despite his messages in regard to withholding his name from the Georgia and California primaries.

Three Centres of Interest.

For the moment interest, so far as the Democratic nomination is concerned, is centered largely upon Mr. Palmer, who is said to have the sympathetic support of the White House; Mr. Hoover, able publicist, and Mr. McAdoo, whose recent appeals for popular support, first during the coal strike controversy and then in behalf of a method to reduce taxation, have in the minds of some observers made it appear that he is not without resourcefulness in seeking preferment.

This situation creating Palmer, Hoover and McAdoo as the leading figures in the race at the moment for the Democratic nomination is contingent, of course, upon a decision by President Wilson not to go before the people in quest of a third term, and also upon the theory that William Jennings Bryan will not rally about him sufficient strength to become a factor for the nomination.

When the situation is thoroughly canvassed by the leaders, President Wilson is pretty generally referred to as "out of the race." At least, on this basis the preliminary calculations of the situation to be confronted at San Francisco are being made.

Not Counting Bryan In.

As to Bryan, he is not being counted in at present, as a leading candidate for the nomination by any except a few of his most fervent, personal admirers. His return to the limelight is being considered rather, from the viewpoint of the influence which he may possess at the National convention in San Francisco in swinging delegates to or from an aspirant.

Governor Cox of Ohio is counted out except as a possible favorite son candidate, and so is Senator Owen of Oklahoma. Senator Pomerene of Ohio, who was once in the race, has withdrawn, and, while the leaders are uncertain of his status, they don't give consideration at all to the possibility of his nomination.

Attorney General Palmer is in the race with his teeth gritted and, whatever else may be said of his chances, he has a commanding personal appearance and will certainly make a dent in the situation which is not to be overlooked. He is a convincing talker, a good political strategist and is credited with having the support of several astute leaders of Democracy, among them Roger Sullivan of Illinois and Thomas Taggart of Indiana. His friends say there will be "nothing to it" as between Palmer and McAdoo. They hold also that he is going to capture the support of a lot of women delegates.

McAdoo Believed a Candidate.

Mr. McAdoo steps forward with his appeal for the support of labor as contained in the statement made while the Government was trying to bring about the settlement of the coal strike, when he denounced the coal operators and recommended that the miners get a very substantial increase. This McAdoo statement came out of a clear sky and immediately started reports in political circles here that any one who doubted that Mr. McAdoo was in the race was not to be believed. The more recent statement by Mr. McAdoo offering a scheme to reduce taxation by issuing $1,500,000,000 in bonds and other financial manipulation convinced even the doubters as to the status of Mr. McAdoo in the contest.

The gossip here is that if President Wilson keeps out of the race Mr. McAdoo hopes to romp away with the nomination after the first or second ballot as a liberal, sympathetic to labor, and a friend of business and the general taxpaying public, on the basis, at least, of relief from the tax burden during the next two years.

Mr. Hoover, while less spectacular in his methods, has been building up a substantial popularity through his news statements and magazine articles on current problems. He has said he was not a candidate, but has taken no effective step to check the movement looking to his nomination. Refusal to permit his name to appear in the primary election in Georgia and California, as in the case of Mr. McAdoo, is regarded as no indication that he is not in the race.

Palmer, McAdoom and Hoover are apparently running neck and neck at the present time, with President Wilson and Mr. Bryan as more or less uncertain elements in the situation.

WOOD IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

Special to The New York Times.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., March 7.—As the result of the past week's political activities in South Dakota, with two Democratic candidates for the Presidency—James W. Gerard and James O. Monroe—and one Republican candidate for nomination, arousing the voters for the primary election to be held March 23, those in close touch with the situation, assert there has been a pronounced gain in the strength of General Leonard Wood and Senator Hiram Johnson, and a corresponding decrease in the sentiment for Governor Lowden of Illinois, among South Dakota Republicans.

The supporters of Governor Lowden, however, will not admit that he has lost ground, expressing themselves as confident that he will sweep the State.

Supporters of General Wood are equally confident that their candidate is gaining such strength day by day among Republican voters that he will win the primary.

Supporters of Senator Johnson assert that he has gained during the week as a result of his tour of the State. A sensation was caused by the public announcement by Allen R. Fellows of Sioux Falls, one of the delegates to the Republican Convention chosen in the State convention that indorsed Leonard Wood, that he was for Senator Johnson.

Prince Joachim, Ex-Kaiser's Cousin Attacks French Party in Berlin Hotel

BERLIN, March 7 (Associated Press).—The fashionable Adlon Hotel dining room was the scene of a rough-and-tumble fight last night between Prince Joachim Albrecht, of Prussia, a cousin of the former German Emperor, together with his guests, and Captains Klein and Roughevin and Mme. Klein, members of the French Mission.

The hostilities were due to the French people refusing to stand while the orchestra was playing "Deutschland Ueber Alles."

Prince Joachim and his friends hurled candles, crockery and other things at the French party, and Captain Roughevin was beaten and had his clothes torn. Captain Klein was escorted out of the dining room by waiters, who defended him.

The episode apparently was planned by Joachim, who has the reputation of being a Pan-German extremist. It is said he has been virtually barred from other hotels of Berlin, where he has attempted similar outbreaks against foreigners.

Many members of the foreign commissions in Berlin live at the Adlon, and Joachim recently has been appearing there nightly, wearing his Iron Cross and ordering the orchestra to play "Deutschland Ueber Alles." Two former military officers, Baron von Platen and Herr Griebel, accompanied Joachim last night.

A majority of the guests in the dining room rose when the orchestra started the air, and Joachim's party began to hurl bottles and other missiles at the table where the French party was seated when they failed to rise. The waiters got Mme. Klein out of the room during the mêlée, but the Germans knocked one of the waiters senseless with a chair.

'ELECT, NOT SELECT' HIS DUTY, SAYS HAYS

COMMITTEE MEETS TODAY

Wood and Hitchcock Expected—Victory Seen in the Latter's Appointment.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Will H. Hays, Chairman of the National Republican Committee, on his arrival here tonight issued a formal statement regarding his position toward Presidential candidates, regarding which there has been manifested recently by those in charge of the campaigns for some candidates already in the field considerable anxiety and some allegations of antagonism on the part of the National Chairman.

Mr. Hays's statement, which is a duplicate of what he will say at the meeting tomorrow of the National Committee at Republican headquarters, read:

"I have repeatedly stated my belief that the duty of the Chairman of the National Committee is to elect the candidate, and not select him. I shall square my performance with my promise. There shall be no word nor act of mine which will directly, or indirectly, influence in any way the result of any contest in any State for delegates to the Republican National Convention, nor the choice by the delegates in the convention.

"It makes no difference what may be said by any person, for any reason at any time, in any place in the country, indicating any other wish of mine. It simply is not true.

"I am sure that any one who would suggest another course will, on reflection, approve my irrevocable position in this regard."

Presidential politics will be the consuming topic tomorrow. General Wood will arrive from the East in the morning, in company with Frank H. Hitchcock, his newly announced campaign manager.

Governor Lowden will be here until his train departs for New York, where he speaks Tuesday night. Senator Harding's headquarters are to be wide open, with a strong deputation of Ohio Republicans in charge. Senator Johnson's managers are on the ground.

The Arrangements Committee for the convention will meet tomorrow to pass on all the preliminaries for the physical arrangements at the Coliseum. There may be some talk about the temporary Chairmanship. Elihu Root's name was suggested, as was Senator Lodge's, in talk tonight.

That Mr. Hitchcock will either make or break General Wood was the openly expressed sentiment of nearly every Republican here today. Wood backers called it a "ten strike" and assurance that General Wood could not lose. Those not aligned with the General contended that Mr. Hitchcock's appointment eliminated him. One national leader asserted that Mr. Hitchcock, because of Republican dissensions dating back to the campaign of 1908, could not land more than fifteen of the present National Committeemen for General Wood.

BOOM FOR EDWARDS IN NEW YORK RUMORED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 7.—Friends of Governor Edwards, it was reported here today by some Republicans who attended the Legislative dinner last night, are planning to arouse sentiment in favor of the Governor as New York's candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, who came here last night to attend the dinner, refused this afternoon to admit that at a conference of Democrats today plans for launching the Edwards boom in New York had been talked over. Republicans, however, who remained over said they had heard there was such a movement, but were in the dark as to just what the plan was.

AT ODDS OVER GEN. WOOD.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 7.—A primary row over delegates to the Republican National Convention is threatened in Maryland. Supporters of Leonard Wood are seriously disposed to put his name on the official ballot. The Republican State organization asks for an uninstructed delegation, which it can't have if General Wood's name goes on the ballot. The General would be sure to get some votes, and that would tie up the delegation. If Wood is put on the ballot, the Republican organization, it is said, will invite opposition, and the chances are it would risk its fortunes behind Lowden of Illinois.

While General Wood seems to have more positive strength here than any man mentioned for the Republican Presidential nomination, it looks as if he were also the man to whom opposition is most pronounced.

HOT FIGHT FOR DELEGATES.

Both Parties Expect Close Votes in New Hampshire Primaries.

CONCORD, N. H., March 7.—The New Hampshire Presidential primaries on Tuesday next promise to be closely contested in both the Republican and Democratic Parties. On the Republican side, however, all except one of the candidates for delegates to the Chicago Convention have announced themselves as favoring the nomination of Leonard Wood for President. John W. Flaherty of Nashua, a candidate for delegate at large, has pledged himself to vote for Hiram Johnson.

All the Democratic candidates for delegate at large are unpledged. Of the five candidates for the four places as district delegates three are pledged to work for the nomination of Herbert Hoover for President. The other two are unpledged.

WOOD TO KEEP OUT OF PRIMARIES HERE

JOHNSON MEN WILL FIGHT

Managers Ignore Notice of Leaders to Make No Contests in State.

Frank H. Hitchcock, co-director in the campaign for the nomination of Major Gen. Leonard Wood, announced yesterday that he would devote his entire time to the campaign, because the General was the logical nominee to insure Republican success. Mr. Hitchcock left for Chicago for a conference with other party leaders, and to discuss matters with General Wood. Just before leaving Mr. Hitchcock said:

"General Wood has shown evidence of far greater popularity than any other candidate. He is the one outstanding national figure in the running. People everywhere throughout the country know him and believe in him. He has commended himself to them by valiant Americanism, by proved administrative ability and by statesmanship courageously expressed in his public utterances. He is fit in every way for the Presidency. I believe he will be nominated and elected."

Following a conference of several of the managers of the Leonard Wood League here it was announced at headquarters that there would be no nominations presented by the league for the election of delegates at the April primaries. It was intimated that this decision had been reached after Mr. Hitchcock had joined the Wood forces, and it was accepted to mean that the interests of the candidate would be intrusted entirely to the New York Republican leaders and organization men in so far as the primaries were concerned. It was believed that Mr. Hitchcock, who successfully piloted William Howard Taft's campaign in 1908, and had since been in the councils of the party through 1912 and again in 1916, had brought with him much organization support.

Managers for Senator Hiram W. Johnson declared that the last-minute decision of the Wood managers to refrain from a primary contest for delegates indicated an expectation of strong support here for the candidacy of General Wood. Angus McSween, one of the Johnson managers, said:

"Notice has been served upon us by the party leaders that we should not oppose organization selections for nominations for delegates by making any nomoniations of our own. In effect, the notice served on us declares that if we persist in running candidates for delegates it will result in producing antagonism to Senator Johnson among the delegates chosen by the party leaders here.

"Nevertheless, we shall go ahead with nominations. We do not believe that the organization should limit Republican voters to the choice of one man in the Republican primaries. We intend to see to it that the name of Senator Johnson is placed before the New York voters."

Nominations for delegates by the Johnson managers for Manhattan and Brooklyn, as completed last night, will mean a contest in the Fourteenth Congressional District, which includes the Assembly districts of Samuel S. Koenig, Republican County Chairman, and F. H. LaGuardia, President of the Aldermen. Other delegates and alternates have been nominated by petition in the Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-first Districts.

A meeting of the committee of the Seventeenth Congressional District getting signatures to a petition for the nomination of Herbert C. Hoover for President was held at the Biltmore. The petition will require 400 names of Republican voters. Watson Washburn, Chairman, said 350 names were still required. Many women are assisting the committee. To speed up the work, two headquarters have been opened—at the Hotel Manhattan and the Hotel Bellclaire.

As a result of the first ten days of its campaign, the Columbia Alumni Committee has received 9,672 pledges of suppor for Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler for President in twenty-one States. The National Columbia Alumni Committee, of which G. Hinmann Barrett is Chairman, is planning an active campaign.

REPUBLICANS SLATE ONLY TWO WOMEN

With the Republican slate for Congressional district delegates in New York County practically completed, it was made certain yesterday that only two women delegates from New York State will sit in the Republican National Convention. They are Miss Helen Varick Boswell of New York and Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp of Syracuse.

The completion of the Republican slate made it certain that the Democrats will have all the advantage in recognition of women as delegates, as they have already given two of the places on the Democratic "Big Four" to women. Mrs. Julia A. McLaughlin of Queens has been selected as a delegate from the Second District. The Tammany and Brooklyn Democratic slates have not been completed, but it was said to be likely that some women would be selected.

The New York County Republican selections for district delegates, so far as completed, include Joseph A. Levinson from the Twelfth Congressional District; Samuel S. Koenig, County Chairman, and F. H. LaGuardia, President of the Board of Aldermen, from the Fourteenth; Henry W. Taft from the Fifteenth, Henry L. Stimson and James R. Sheffield from the Sixteenth, Herbert Parsons, national committeeman, and Albert J. Berwin from the Seventeenth; Ogden L. Mills and Charles S. Whitman from the Eighteenth, Nicholas Murray Butler and Charles D. Hilles, formerly Chairman of the Republican National Committee, from the Nineteenth; Jules S. Bache and Representative Isaac Siegel from the Twentieth, and Edward M. Morgan and John J. Lyons from the Twenty-first. Miss Boswell, a resident of the Nineteenth District, will go as a delegate from the Thirteenth.

REPUBLICAN FIGHT GROWING SHARPER

MAY OBTAIN A MAJORITY

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Increased bitterness in the Republican race for the nomination for President appears in reports coming here, with General Wood and Senator Johnson apparently fighting earnestly for delegates who will remain steadfast and cannot be controlled by the party chiefs in the convention. These candidates, their managers say, are not fighting the Old Guard leaders, who by means of the "favorite son" move hope to prevent either obtaining a majority of the delegates. Such a situation would leave the leaders free to sit down and agree upon a candidate.

According to reports coming from Florida, Senator Penrose is favorable to Senator Harding, believing that he comes from a pivotal State and represents the type of man needed for the problems in the next four years. The plans of Mr. Penrose and that coterie of Old Guard leaders which dominated the 1912 convention may be upset by revolts in their own States. Governor Coolidge refused some weeks ago to become a stalking horse for a convention agreement and withdrew because he found that General Wood was the candidate in popular favor.

The absence of Senator Penrose, now recovering from a long illness in Florida, has permitted the Republican campaign to drift, and this has been to the advantage of the independent candidates and against the interests of Lowden and Harding. He is expected to return about April 1 and will then devote his time entirely to national politics.

The Republican contest seems to have resolved itself for the time being into a contest among General Wood, Senator Harding of Ohio, Senator Johnson of California and Governor Lowden of Illinois. The leaders of the Penrose-Watson-Lodge faction would like to nominate Senator Harding and, if they must give up Harding, might hold Governor Lowden next in favor. The Wood and Johnson boomers are asserting that the Old Guard, as represented by Senators Penrose, Lodge and Watson, dare not nominate Senator Harding, and some go so far as to say that the same holds good in the case of Governor Lowden.

Old Guard for Harding.

It would appear that the Old Guard would like a ticket which was composed of Harding for President and Johnson—or perhaps Senator Poindexter of Washington—for Vice President; or, if such a lineup was impossible of accomplishment, they would look with satisfaction on the nomination of Governor Lowden, with either Senator Johnson or Senator Poindexter as a running mate.

There is a tendency here to believe also that a nominee who could not prove his entire independence of the Penrose-Watson-Lodge dictatorship would have a hard row to hoe in many sections of the country, especially West of the Mississippi River. It is argued that the followers of the late Theodore Roosevelt might express wonder if the upheaval of 1912, when Roosevelt split the party, had been in vain.

General Wood has considerable strength in the fact that he is not a member of the United States Senate, for there is a well-defined feeling here that many hundreds of thousands of voters are "sick and tired" of the wrangle that has been going on in the Senate over the Peace Treaty, and would rather have a housecleaning—or, at least, would consider that they were voting for such a housecleaning—if they supported someone outside of the Senate halls. A Senator who also was closely associated with the Penrose-Lodge régime might not fit into the idea of things which a very substantial part of the voting public considered satisfactory.

Talk of a Compromise

Senator Johnson, in the West at least, has in his favor independence of the Old Guard. Senator Harding would have on the debit side of his candidacy class association with the Old Guard forces. There seems to be reason, therefore, for the opinion expressed in some quarters that Senator Harding's nomination will not be forced, even if the Old Guard finds that it has the strength to carry out such a program at the convention in Chicago. They may seek to compromise on Governor Lowden or some other candidate instead of General Wood, who has little or no support among these leaders.

One of the most spirited contests is that in Michigan, where the primary will be held April 5. Seven candidates have entered the Republican preferential primary—Poindexter, Hoover, Wood, Pershing, Lowden, Johnson and William G. Simpson of Detroit. Five Democrats appear on the Democratic ticket—Palmer, Hoover, McAdoo, Bryan and Governor Edwards of New Jersey. The contest in the Democatic fight is between Palmer and Hoover, with the former slightly in favor, due to support from the Democratic organization. Wood and Johnson are strongest, with Lowden third, in the Republican primary. Herbert Hoover's name appears on both ballots, which is taken to indicate that his managers desire to show how strong he is in both parties.

Lowden and Johnson are the leading candidates in Wisconsin, with Wood reported as third, while Palmer and McAdoo are apparently the favorites among the Democrats. The Wisconsin primary will be held on April 6.

The most interesting primary fight, because it will represent the first attempt by General Wood to break down "favorite son" support, will be in Illinois on April 13. Governor Lowden is very strong in his home State, but despite this handicap the Wood leaders say they will get a large number of the fifty-eight delegates.

Pershing May Win Nebraska.

General Pershing may win the delegates of Nebraska, his adopted State. An organization of ex-service men has been active, and late reports show that its members have made great inroads into the lead enjoyed by Wood and Johnson. The Nebraska primary is on April 20, followed by Montana three days later.

On April 27 Ohio, Massachusetts and New Jersey hold their primary elections. Indications point to Wood carrying the elections in the last two States, with a possibility of winning four or six delegates from Harding in his native State, Ohio.

Maryland holds a primary on May 3, with indications that the Republicans will name Harding delegates and the Democrats elect uninstructed delegates favorable to Palmer. California, on May 6, will elect Republican delegates instructed for Johnson, and the Democrats will choose unpledged delegates favorable to Hoover. Pennsylvania and Vermont follow with primaries on May 18. The former will elect unpledged delegates favorable to Governor Sproul, with a possibility that Wood will get two from the Western section of the State.

Texas has its primary on May 25, while Florida holds its election on June 8, the day the Republican National Convention assembles.

WOOD TO FIGHT FOR IDAHO.

Will Contest for State's Delegates by Organizing Clubs.

BOISE, Idaho, March 7.—General Wood's forces in Idaho will contest for the State's delegates in the Republican National Convention, it was announced here today. The plan of campaign is being outlined and contemplates the development of a drive handled through Leonard Wood Clubs, of which several already have been organized.

Up to now observers have been virtually unanimous in placing Idaho in the uninstructed column or of sending delegates pledged to Senator Borah as the favorite son.

Chicago Tenants Organize To Fight Exorbitant Rents

CHICAGO, March 7.—Plans for the formation of a city-wide organization of tenants to fight exorbitant rent increases were made today. A secretary and business agent will be at the head of the various district bodies, and there will be a central council composed of representatives of the neighborhood organizations.

Tenants in two apartment buildings who have carried their fight to the City Council received placards to be placed in windows. They read:

"Unfair. This apartment will not be vacant May 1. Agent of landlord demands 86 to 100 per cent. advance in rent. Do you want to buy a lawsuit?"

NEW FACTORS MARK FIGHT FOR CONGRESS

MAY AFFECT NEXT SENATE

Indications Said to be That Neither Party Will Gain Much in Upper House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Committees of both parties charged with the campaign of candidates for Congress are finding that conditions will exist in these elections that will not appear as decisive factors in the election for President. The threatened move by organized labor to defeat members of the House who voted for the railroad bill, and the activity of the liquor forces, determined to elect liberals who will favor an increase in the alcoholic content definition may bring about a condition where the next President may have an inimical Congress, or his party may control by only a slight majority.

The liquor and labor factions, it is announced, intend to use the bloc system and, disregarding political lines, will support candidates who agree with their plans to modify the prohibition act and aid the contentions of labor. As the Republicans only have a nominal majority of two in the Senate, the employment of such a plan of attack might easily upset the Republican majority in the next Senate. Thirty-three Senators are to be elected, one being at a special election in Alabama to succeed the late Senator Bankhead.

On the surface it would appear that few gains will be made by either party in the Senate elections. The Democrats hold eighteen of the thirty-three seats to be filled next Fall. They say that there is a good chance that they will hold their present number and gain in Ohio and Missouri. Among States in which Republicans are hopeful of gaining Senate seats are Oregon, South Dakota, California and Colorado.

Senators Whose Terms Expire.

In many of the States there will be no real contests in the regular election, although the primary elections will be spirited in most of the States. Senator Underwood is having a hard battle in Alabama, where he is opposed by L. B. Musgrave of Jasper and ex-Judge S. D. Wheakley. The triangular contest favors the former. The election of a successor to Mr. Bankhead will be held before the November election, with three candidates already in the field—ex-Governor Comer, appointed by the Governor for the unexpired term; Representative Thomas Heflin and ex-Representative John A. Abercrombie.

Other Probable Candidates.

Homer S. Cummings probably will be the Democratic nominee in Connecticut against Senator Brandegee. In Indiana indications are that Thomas Taggart will be pitted against Senator Watson. Norman E. Mack or Franklin Roosevelt may be the Democratic nominee against Senator Wadsworth in New York.

Representative William B. McKinley probably will be the Republican nominee in Illinois, and Frank Peabody, formerly of the United States Fuel Administration, is being urged by Roger Sullivan for the Democratic nomination in that State.

Breckinridge Long, Third Assistant Secretary of State, is seeking the Democratic nomination for the Senate in Missouri, with indications that he will win. Senator Spencer may be nominated by the Republicans, although there is a strong movement for Dwight F. Davis.

There is a bitter primary fight in Oklahoma between Senator Gore and Representative Scott Ferris for the Democratic nomination for the Senate, with friends of the latter claiming success by a good majority.

Senator Smoot of Utah says reports indicate that he will be nominated, but will have a hard contest in the election.

McADOO REPEATS HIS "NO."

William Gibbs McAdoo last night reiterated his determination not to permit use of his name as a candidate at the Presidential primary to be held in Georgia, regardless of the fact that various candidates have entered the race there since his withdrawal was announced.

ACCUSE POLICEMEN OF BEATING DINERS

DETECTIVE IS ARRESTED

UPROAR REACHES SUBWAY

Detective Thomas Dolan of the First Branch Detective Bureau was arraigned before Magistrate Schwab in the Washington Heights Court yesterday on a charge of felonious assault preferred by Jack Dolgoff, a chauffeur, of 76 West 113th Street.

Dolgoff's head was bandaged and he asserted that the detective had struck him with a blackjack. Other witnesses told stories of Dolan and another officer entering a restaurant at 111th Street and Lenox Avenue early yesterday morning, upsetting sugar bowls, pounding patrons and creating great disorder. Dolan was paroled in the custody of Acting Captain Richard McKenna, his commanding officer, for examination tomorrow.

Kevie Frank, attorney for Dolgoff, asked that high bail be fixed in Dolan's case, but the Magistrate said, the man was a member of the Police Department and he did not consider such action necessary. The lawyer said he had in the courtroom forty witnesses to the assault.

Attracted by the cries of a crowd of men in the subway station at 110th Street and Lenox Avenue and the blasts of police whistles, Patrolman Herman Stoffers had escorted Dolan and another man to the police station. Lieutenant Thompson, who was on the desk, summoned an ambulance from Harlem Hospital and Dr. Craig, who responded, took six stitches in Dolgoff's scalp. He also treated John C. McNally, 45, of 262 West 115th Street.

Identified Detective.

Dolgoff said he positively identified Dolan, and insisted on pressing a charge against him as the man who assaulted him.

Although a detective had been placed under arrest, an ambulance call sent in from a police station, and two persons had been injured in addition to others who asserted that they had been beaten with police blackjacks, no report of this series of incidents had been made public by the police.

Two men and two women engaged a taxicab, driven by Alexander Gordon of 301 East 108th Street, at Lenox Avenue and 135th Street early yesterday morning. The chauffeur drove to Madison Avenue and 113th Street. The women left the taxicab and the men, according to Gordon, asked him where he was going. When he said he would return to the stand one of the men, according to Gordon, pulled a revolver and, after announcing they were policemen, ordered him to take them to Lenox Avenue and 116th Street.

When he pulled up at the designated place and asked for $1.30 the men refused to pay, Gordon alleged, whereupon he drove to the restaurant at 111th Street and Lenox Avenue in order to inform his employer, who was eating there. While speaking to his employer, Gordon added, he saw his two "fares" enter with blackjacks. The chauffeur fled to the kitchen.

There were twenty-five patrons in the restaurant, according to Michael Ornstein and other witnesses, when the policemen entered and started a "rough house," beating diners on the head, sweeping sugar bowls to the floor and banging on tables. One of the men, it was said, drew a revolver.

Says He Saw Old Man Beaten.

McNally was emerging from the subway station when the two men entered after the scrimmage. Dolgoff said he was in a cigar store near by when he saw two men in civilian clothes beating an old man. He hurried outside, and asserted that he was beaten when the two men caught sight of him.

According to the witnesses, the exit of the two policemen was accompanied by a great commotion and police whistles were blown. There were cries of "Murder!" and "Stop thief!" and windows were thrown up throughout the neighborhood.

Patrolman Stoffers saw two men about to board a train. One of them, according to Lieutenant Thompson, was Patrolman William Sullivan of Traffic B, against whom no charge was made. Sidney Krauss, a clerk, who said the men beat him on the wrist, pointed them out to Stoffers. According to witnesses, one of the policemen drew a revolver and said, "Let's give them the works."

"You'll do that over my dead body," Stoffers is alleged to have replied. The men were escorted to the police station, where Police Surgeon Donovan pronounced them sober and fit for duty. Dolan was locked up.

According to Dolan's version of the affair, as set forth by Lieutenant Thompson, he and Sullivan were in the taxicab. Whatever disagreement there was followed the chauffeur's attempt to charge a fare of $8. Dolan said he and Sullivan followed the chauffeur into the restaurant and that the diners assaulted them. This made it necessary for them to act in self defense.

Accused the Officers.

The patrons of the restaurant said the officers were the aggressors. Benjamin Rosenwasser of 611 West 180th Street said he was hit on the head with a blackjack during the row. William Haber, a waiter, declared one of the policemen struck him in the back with a chair.

In court McNally declared he was assaulted without provocation. Dolan, he asserted, set on him and beat him. One of the officers, he said, pulled a revolver.

Acting Captain McKenna offered to produce Sullivan any time he was wanted by the court.

Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, it was said yesterday, believed that he has located all the witnesses in the case of Detective John J. Gunson, indicted on a charge of bribery and extortion, and they would relate on the stand the stories which they have already told elsewhere, of the alleged relations between Gunson and Rebecca Melyado, who charged that he exacted payment from her in order not to arrest her.

Mr. Smith declined to say what his response will be, to the demand of Police Commissioner Enright, and Mayor Hylan, for a list of the 300 disorderly flats in the city, and for the names of the women, who left town because of the charges of graft against a police officer.

FINANCIAL SITUATION

It was manifest last week that new and potent influences were at work in the international money market. The depreciation of sterling exchange below the par level was 29 per cent. at the week's minimum quotation for sight drafts on London and at the maximum level this percentage had been reduced to 24 per cent. The advance of the London rate from the lowest to the highest levels was more than 28 cents to the pound. On Friday sterling was almost 50 cents to the pound above the minimum point of 3.19 established on Feb. 4. French, Belgian and Italian rates gained in strength as sterling gained, and it was significant that Scandinavian and Swiss exchanges rose with vigor after the improvement of sterling had made considerable progress. It is hardly to be expected that the exchanges will be able to maintain the advantage gained in the last fortnight—in fact, there was a considerable reaction of sterling on Saturday. Doubtless, a large volume of speculative buying occurred after rates began to rise and a part of these purchases would be likely to come upon the market quickly for the purpose of realizing a tidy profit. Also, it is reasonable to assume that exporters who held their bills back when they saw the trend of the market last Tuesday and Wednesday were willing to offer them at the higher prices of Saturday, and this process may continue for a time. But the factors bringing an ebb and flow of quotations are not of the sort to submerge the larger aspects of the foreign exchange market in recent days. That the financial community has grown more cheerful since the middle of February than before over the financial and industrial outlook for Europe is evident in the comment of bankers. Because this is so it is difficult to refer to tangible developments affecting the exchanges as the dominant ones in the market, for sentiment has a way of exerting a wider influence at times than concrete economic items. Germany has not yet been aided by an international loan, arranged by the allied leaders, but the very fact that such a step is under discussion by the Supreme Council at London has created the impression that this former enemy country will be enabled to restore her industries and trade with assistance from abroad. The report that Great Britain and France would undertake the shipment to the United States of $250,000,000 gold has been toned down by banking comment from London, yet there was no doubt last week but that the thought of gold imports, whether in large or small amounts, was stimulating to the sterling market. What appears to have caused the exchanges to advance was a mixture of favorable sentiment with several tangible events. Among the latter was the program being shaped by the British Treasury for meeting the $500,000,000 Anglo-French loan maturity next October. Presumably some gold will be sent for this purpose, which was the basis for the story of a vast movement in contemplation. Whether the metal will begin to come in moderate amounts in the near future or not until toward Autumn is problematical. The strength of the Anglo-French bonds in the last few weeks, the advance being from around 94 to 98, suggests that the Treasury is utilizing balances here for the accumulation of the securities below par. In this connection, it seems probable that the British and French and quite likely the Belgian and Italian Governments have built up larger balances than are generally known through the current offerings of their new loans in this country through banking channels. The issues have been widely advertised, the high return and speculative possibilities through exchange movements have been impressed upon the investing public. Also, it is known that many millions of dollars' worth of German municipal issues have been placed in the United States this year. These various transactions have opportunity for influence upon the exchanges in proportion to the decline of exports from this side to the countries affected and to the increase of imports from them by the United States.

The business situation has been made hard of analysis because of the persistence of unfavorable weather conditions. Since Feb. 1 transportation conditions have been handicapped in the East and Middle West by one snowstorm after another, which retard the movement of raw materials and of goods to market. When there have been intervals of open weather concentrated shipments have tended to oversupply particular localities, with consequent declines of prices, and then have come forced restrictions of the flow with price recoveries. This experience has been reflected chiefly in food materials. But, broadly speaking, the last week brought no new signs of a slackening demand for manufactures, lumber and fuel. On the contrary, the shortage of oil was shown to be greater than before, witnessed in almost daily advances in quotations for crude petroleum, and steel trade reviews mentioned an increase of substantial proportions in the daily output of pig iron as disclosed by the February statistics, with the demand larger than the furnaces could handle. Buyers of many kinds of products and materials are reported to be acting cautiously, with the fear lest they be caught later in the year with high-priced goods in a falling market, but the volume of purchases has continued on a vast scale and a business reaction, if it comes in the next few months, is expected to be slow in development.

Stocks last week profited somewhat by the stimulus which came from the rise of the foreign exchanges. Speculative conditions, however, were still under the dampening influence of inadequate credit facilities for market purposes. While call money moved down from 10 to 6 per cent. before the end of the week, there was no discernible easement of time money rates and none was looked for previous to the due date for initial income tax payments. The position of many industrial stocks seems strong as far as earnings' prospects are concerned, and railroad issues stand to profit by a constructive application of the railroad law, yet it is axiomatic that a broad bull market cannot be sustained without plenty of credit, preferably at low cost. Suggestions of concerted action by the European countries and the United States to aid the industries of stricken countries are stimulating to sentiment over the longer future of business and trade, but not particularly encouraging to the immediate market for securities. United action means new demands upon credit and threatens to put further limits upon the amount available for speculation.

NATHANS FIGHTS MILK BILL.

Says State Control of Supply Would Lead Toward Socialism.

I. Elkin Nathans, Secretary of the New York Milk Conference Board, which represent the milk distributers of this city, issued a statement yesterday in which he declared that "virtually every business man and farmer of standing was opposed to the Thompson milk bills, which would give the State complete control over the milk supply."

Referring to Governor Smith's address before the Community Councils at the Hotel Biltmore Friday night, Mr. Nathans said the Governor's contention that milk should not be classed with other foods, as it is an absolute essential and should be therefore regulated by the State, was no justification for the proposed bills. "All foods," Mr. Nathans said, "are essential—so is raiment—yet it is only a step from the control of milk to the control of all foods, clothing, shoes, medicine, ice, fuel and even housing. Is the State prepared to go that far in a socialistic program? Surely with the first step taken it logically follows the principle will ultimately extend to other so-called necessities."

1919 Wyoming Production

Production increased in every county except Natrona, where it has done little more than hold its own because of the trouble over titles at Salt Creek. Creditable figures are also to be added for the counties of Carbon, Sweetwater, Niobrara, Lincoln, Albany and Weston.

The figures for oil production are rather vague in this State, as the companies are not making public the pipe line runs as is being done in other regions and only those totals collected by the State Geological Department are available to the statistician.

RUSSIA'S COMMERCE WAS $1,506,000,000

National City Bank Gives Pre-War Data as Guide, Anticipating Resumption of Trade.

The question of what Russia will have to sell and what she will want to buy if she re-enters the trade world is one of great interest, but it is also one that cannot be answered immediately in view of the lack of information regarding her present producing and purchasing power. The National City Bank, in discussing this phase of the Russian situation, says:

"We can at least determine what Russia produced for exportation in normal times and what she took in exchange, also the countries to which she sold and from which she bought, and especially the trade of the United States with her in the years immediately preceding the war.

"The year 1913 was a fairly representative trade year with Russia. Her exports, which amounted to $389,000,000 in 1890 and $369,000,000 in 1900, had crossed the $500,000,000 line in 1907 and averaged a little over that sum down to 1909, when they jumped to $710,000,000, and averaged nearly $800,000,000 a year in the three years, 1911, 1912 and 1913, her official figures of exports for 1913 being 1,520,000,000 rubles, equal to $783,000,000 (United States currency at the pre-war value of the ruble). Her imports in that year were 1,374,000,000 rubles, equal to $706,000,000, the largest in her history. She had always 'lived within her income,' her imports being almost invariably slightly less than her exports.

"What did she export in this latest normal year 1913? Chiefly wheat, barley, wood in various forms, flax, eggs, butter, and petroleum, stated in the relative order of their value. These seven articles formed considerably more than one-half of her total exports in the year preceding the war. Wheat exported amounted to about 120,000,000 bushels, though in 1910 it exceeded 200,000,000 bushels.

"What were her chief imports in 1913, the year of her highest purchases abroad? Raw cotton, coal, manufactures of iron and steel, wool, rubber, agricultural machinery, and miscellaneous manufactures. Cotton amounted to over $50,000,000; coal about $40,000,000; iron and steel manufactures about $35,000,000, and agricultural machinery $25,000,000.

"Forty-seven per cent. of her imports were from Germany; thirteen per cent. from the United Kingdom, and six per cent. from the United States. Where did she sell her products; Thirty per cent. to Germany; seventeen per cent to the United Kingdom; eleven per cent. to the Netherlands; seven per cent. to France, and 1 per cent. to the United States.

"What were the articles forming the trade of the United States with Russia prior to the war? Our own figures show for the fiscal year 1913 the chief imports from Russia: Hides and skins, $19,000,000; wool, $3,519,000; flax and hemp, $1,225,000; manganese oxide and ore, $694,000, and India rubber scrap or refuse, $620,000. Our chief exports to Russia in the fiscal year 1913 were agricultural implements, $9,200,000; raw cotton, $4,524,000; binder twine, $1,450,000; metal working machinery, $1,089,000; copper, $954,000; typewriters, $871,000; upper leather, $822,000; rosin, $784,000; sewing machines, $766,000; automobiles, $519,000; builders' hardware and tools, $483,000, and cash registers, $246,000."

PLAN JEWISH WAR RELIEF.

Committee Members Hear Cabled Appeal for Poland.

A meeting to formulate plans for Jewish war relief funds was held yesterday in the home of Louis Marshall, 47 East Seventy-second Street. Mr. Marshall read a cable message from Dr. Boris D. Bogen, Director of the Joint Distribution Committee Relief, Unit No. 1. It was filed Feb. 23 in Warsaw and was as follows:

"The Jewish population of Poland, according to our statistics, is 4,040,000. Sixty per cent. of them require relief. We require a minimum of 10,000 tons of flour monthly and other foodstuffs in proportion. Premature deaths are partly due to exposure resulting from lack of clothing. Over 1,000,000 require garments and shoes.

"We are feeding 300,000 Jewish children, and this reaches only one-half of the hungry. The expected closing of this agency in July on account of the exhaustion of funds looms as a catastrophe. Undermined health is indicated by a 70 per cent. increase in mortality. Undernourishment makes it impossible to combat typhus and other diseases. Localities in the east show that the typhus epidemic is affecting, past and present, 95 per cent. of the population."

In addition to Mr. Marshall, those present were Felix M. Warburg, Judge Otto H. Rosalsky, Justice Abram I. Elkus, Henry Morgenthau, Samuel Maport, Jacob Milch, Dr. J. L. Magnes, Julius J. Dukas, Meyer J. Gillies, Harry Fischel, Reuben Sadowsky, Samuel Rottenberg and Jacob Wertheim.

10,000 Quarts of Milk for Italy.

A shipment of 10,000 quarts of dry milk for the relief of destitute children was made yesterday by the American Free Milk and Relief for Italy. It was announced at the Vanderbilt Hotel headquarters that the organization would increase its shipments from 60,000 to 100,000 quarts of dry milk a month and that medicines and clothing also would go forward in great quantity.

TRADE STRIFE CLIPS BUILDING PROGRAM

Metropolitan District Shows 285% Gain Over Last Year's Construction Record.

MATERIALS 40% OF NORMAL

With the 1920 building construction program for the metropolitan district of New York showing a gain of 385 per cent. over the total reported last year at this time, reports of extensive trade disturbances are being variously received.

The prospective builder is of a mind to believe that if there is to be a six months fight on the principle of permitting open shop conditions to rule in steel construction jobs in this vicinity, the immediate effect will be to pile up building material supplies at manufacturing plants and in distributers' hands here and thereby force building material prices lower.

Offsetting this idea, however, is the attitude of the general building material producer that if there is to be a finish fight on the closed shop conditions here, thereby in the interim causing a general tie-up of building construction, they will immediately halt their plans for augumented building material production because of unstable demand. In such an event building material prices now considered as being high will soar to absolutely prohibitive levels, as the probable output of building materials in this vicinity, even under the best possible conditions that can now be imagined, will be hardly more than 40 per cent. of the rate of production reported in 1912.

Various sides of the controversy relating to the merits of the contention of the Iron League Erectors' Association and of the Building Trades Council is soon to be made public, a statement giving the side of the steele erectors having been prepared by Walter Drew, counsel, and A. S Roberts, associate counsel.

Meanwhile the building trades of New York are experiencing increasing activity portending potential construction work far beyond anything reported in recent years, says the Dow Service Daily Building Reports today. Architects are releasing work that has been held in abeyance for many months upon the theory that public pressure is growing daily more insistent for relief from the increasing scarcity of space accommodation in buildings. As May 1 approaches scores of business firms are facing ejection with no place to move to. In one notable case downtown a big insurance skyscraper that is rented from cellar to garret has its steel frame up, but inclosed with brick only to the third floor.

The prospective tenants expected to move into the building on May 1. They will probably not be able to move in before October, and not even then unless some agreement is reached in the differences now existing between the bricklayers and their employers. There are many such cases.

The crux of the whole situation as viewed generally by the architects, engineers, prospective owners and investors in building enterprises, general and sub contractors and building material manufacturers and distributers is that the issues existing during the late steel strike have been brought to life in this city, where the struggle on the question of whether New York is to be changed from a closed to open shop conditions is to be fought to a definite conclusion.

The vicinity of New York bounded by a circle fifty miles from the Battery was 33 per cent. underconstructed last October. Today the same territory is 42 per cent. undersupplied with housing, commercial, industrial and institutional space, and by the 1st of May the percentage will be considerably over 50.

The general attitude of the building industry is that of impatience, to say the least, with reference to the latest phase of the New York building situation. There is a wholesome fear that any further curtailment of plans to speedily relieve the acute shortage of housing, commercial and industrial space, will result in a stampede for building material supply far in excess of anything yet experienced.

The seriousness of this outlook is further emphasized by the fact that even the present demand is almost in excess of the volume of building materials that can be produced in this vicinity this year. If construction work is further delayed the building material price market levels of today will be heavily shaded by the prices that will rule in the Autumn and in the following Spring and Summer.

This view is so generally held in building construction circles that prospective builders are being urged not to further delay their proposed operations because it now seems likely that the market has not yet experienced its heaviest pressure upon building material supply or price.

HEDLEY EXPLAINS I. R. T. TESTIMONY

WOULD COST $225,000,000

Surplus of $10,000,000 Not in Cash —Only Half Truth Brought Out, He Says.

For the purpose of making more intelligible bits of the testimony taken by the Board of Estimate during its inquiry into the financial condition of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, Frank Hedley, President of the company, gave out a statement yesterday explaining some of the details in the contract between the city and the company. He tells how the public could easily have misunderstood the precise meaning of information contained in the answers of witnesses to questions asked by Corporation Counsel Burr and members of the board.

Mr. Hedley says it is apparent that the public has not come to understand from the hearings before the board the conditions under which the city would be permitted to acquire the subways, nor what would be required from the city in a financial way. He says that this is only natural, because the proceeding before the board is "not one in which the Interborough may put in, as it wishes, testimony to make its own case clear, nor can it rebut testimony of other witnesses, no matter how ill-founded it may be."

The testimony to the effect that the Interborough company has a book-keeping surplus of about $10,000,000, Mr. Hedley describes as only half the truth and then his statement reads:

"The other half is that this surplus is not in cash, but consists of reserve materials and supplies to assure safe operation, and is in other forms which make it as useless for meeting current obligations as though it did not exist."

Turning Back the Subways.

In relation to the question of turning back the subways for municipal operation, Mr. Hedley refers to a letter of Aug. 2, 1919, which Mayor Hylan sent to the Interborough company and in which the question was asked:

"Why not turn back the lines and let the City Administration worry about the credit and finances available?"

Mr. Hedley says that this is a fair question and then his statement reads:

"If by the words, 'turn back,' is meant a sale by the company and purchase by the city, it is highly proper to point out the magnitude of the financial propositions involved.

"On Jan. 1, 1929, but not before—that is, after ten years' operation under the contract—the city can end the Contract 3 lease, and purchase the Interborough investment in the new subway lines and equipment at a fixed percentage above cost. The lease for the original subways runs to 1968 with no right of prior termination, but with an obligation on the city to buy the equipment.

"The city's right of recapture covers only the new subways, not the old. The city has, however, the right to an exchange of legs; that is, it could pick its lines so as to operate a complete east side line or a complete west side line, but the Interborough would have the one the city did not want, and the city could not take it away until the end of the forty-nine-year term. This would mean that each line (one operated by the city and the other by the company) would charge its own fare, but riders could not change from one to the other through Forty-second Street without paying another fare. A similar privilege at South Ferry would also be lost.

Security for Bonds.

"The company's interest and investment in both the old and new subways and the operating contracts are the principal security for the Interborough bonds, which thousands of private investors all over the country have purchased and now hold. If full municipal ownership were a present possibility, their representatives might well consent to an advancement of the date on which the company investment in the new lines could be disposed of at the price per contract formula of $119,000,000, but at the same time they would naturally expect that the city would pay adequate compensation, not only for the tangible property in the old subway, which it is obligated to purchase at the end of the term, but also for the valuable forty-nine-year leaseholds which would be thus extinguished.

"By contract the parties have fixed the measure of the value of those leaseholds at the yearly sum of $3,178,000. Furthermore, the agreed value of the company's investment in the original subway equipment is $48,000,000. Thus, there would be required:

"To purchase the Interborough investment under Contract 3, $119,000,000.

"To purchase the forty-nine-year leaseholds under Contracts 1 and 2, at $3,178,000 per annum, $57,740,000.

"To purchase the Interborough investment in equipment under Contracts 1 and 2, $48,000,000; making a total of $224,740,000.

"It is apparent that if the Interborough subway lines were 'turned back' on this basis, the city would have to float its obligations in amounts to produce nearly $225,000,000 in cash. Under existing financial conditions, to say nothing of constitutional limitations as to debt limit, that certainly would be sufficient worry for the administration of any city."

Purchase of Elevated Lines.

Mr. Hedley's statement says that if the city were to consider also the possible acquisition of the elevated lines it would be confronted with the purchase of the additional investment amounting to more than $40,000,000 which the Interborough Company has spent for extensions and third tracking, and also with the problem of paying for the properties of the Manhattan Railway Company, including its perpetual franchises. The statement further says:

"Incidentally it should be made clear that a receivership for the Interborough would not of itself result in the city getting the subway for municipal operation.

"So long as the operator, whether it be the Interborough or a receiver, performs the contract the city's investment remains subordinate to the Interborough's investment."

The statement says further that to alleviate congestion additional lines must be provided, and adds:

"The problem can be met only by assuring such conditions that further investment of private capital can be attracted. Such private capital cannot be obtained unless the rate of fare assures a proper return. Under present conditions a five-cent fare is not adequate for that purpose."

$100,000 GIFT TO HOLYOKE.

Announcement of a gift of $100,000 by Edward S. Harkness of 1 East Seventy-fifth Street to the Mount Holyoke College $3,000,000 endowment fund was made yesterday by Miss Harriet B. Prescott of 36 Gramercy Park, Chairman of the New York Endowment Fund Committee. The gift is to endow a chair at the college, the department to be selected by the institution's Faculty.

According to Miss Prescott the subscriptions for the first week of the intensive campaign were $291,858. In discussing the objective of the campaign Miss Prescott said that $2,000,000 was to be used in increasing the salaries of the Faculty and that the remainder was needed for buildings. She said it was intended to give the teaching staff an increase of at least 50 per cent.

ASK OUR LABOR TO AID THE INTERNATIONALE

An appeal from Karl Kautsky and Edouard Bernstein, leaders of the Independent Socialists of Germany for the co-operation of American Socialists in re-establishing the Socialist Internationale was made public yesterday through Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

After asserting that the Internationale had not fulfilled the Socialist expectations, Kautsky says in a letter to Mr. Schlesinger that one of the most pressing problems was to rebuild the organization of the proletarian masses in each country and effect another international rapprochement, despite all obstacles. Both Kautsky and Bernstein say they expect the American Socialists to play a large part in overcoming the difference in the movement.

Mr. Schlesinger, who has recently returned a personal visit to Socialists in Germany, Poland, France, Great Britain and Holland, said yesterday that the appeal would be made known as quickly as possible to Socialists all over the country. His own union is strongly Socialist.

In his letter to "Dear Comrade Schlesinger" Kautsky hails him as "the first representative of an American union to visit me since the beginning of the war," and adds, "Old Father Noah could not have greeted the dove with the olive twig more joyfully after the flood."

"Obstacles to international relations and international organization form the worst hindrance to the several wounds which the war has inflicted," the letter says. "To overcome them and to restore international solidarity to its rightful position is one of the most pressing problems of the present. The League of Nations, which was created in Versailles, testifies to the strength which the desire for international organization has gained, even among the upper classes. The League of Nations, which those at Versailles formed, is only an international instrument for falsehood, not a league of all peoples for common, peaceful work."

He pleads for "the re-erection of the proletariat." Bernstein, in his letter, says that the Internationale has been split by the war. "I do not want to give up hope of a restoration of the Internationale," he adds. "So long as I am able to fight, I will fight for it."

"The labor movement in America," he says, "can give us great support," and he hopes that it will prove a help to internationalism.

CORNELL INSTRUCTORS GET 25% PAY RISE

President Schurman Announces Increase Through Gifts of One-Third of $10,000,000 Endowment.

Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University, announced last night a 25 per cent. increase in the salaries of instructors at Cornell for the second semester, effective immediately. The increase is the first of any size in twenty years, and was made possible through the raising of about one-third of the university's $10,000,000 endowment fund. The increase raises the present average salary of instructors from $1,167 to $1,458, but as it covers only the second half of the university year, the instructors actually will receive only $1,312 for the whole year.

"The average salary of Cornell instructors," said President Schurman, "even with a 25 per cent. increase, shows the pitiful inadequacy of salaries at the university. Even now our instructors will receive less than the compensation paid a good stenographer, less than the salary paid the most recent graduates whom they have helped to train. Even when we have the full $10,000,000 we are seeking from the friends of Cornell and higher education, the average salary of instructors will be but $1,800."

CONSUMERS SUBMIT PLANKS

Food and Wage Demands Sent to Party Leaders.

The National Consumers' League, 44 East Twenty-third Street, is urging the platform makers of leading political parties to include in their 1920 platforms the following planks:

"Federal regulation of the food industries.

"Application to the textile industries of the same principle of compulsory correct branding and labeling already established in relation to food and drugs.

"A recommendation that national party platforms urge on Sate parties which have not vet adopted such platform pledges that such Legislatures will (a) establish by statute minimum wage commissions; (b) establish by statute for wage-earning women the eight-hour day, a period of rest at night, and one day's rest in seven."

Mrs. Florence Kelley, General Secretary of the league, yesterday sent a letter embodying these recommendations to Will H. Hays of the Republican National Committee, to Homer S. Cummings of the Democratic National Committee, to Otto Branstetter, Secretary of the American Socialist Party, and to Frank Esper, of the American Labor Party.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., ON LOVE.

Says It Is Greater Possession Than Riches.

Love and love alone can bring real satisfaction and real happiness in this life and hereafter, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., told the Young Men's Bible Class of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church yesterday morning.

"Love for fellow-men is the greatest possession that man can have," Mr. Rockefeller said. "Men may have boundless riches, but they cannot take these riches beyond the grave."

The salvation of the nations of the world, he continued, depends on the observance by men of a Christian spirit in their dealings, and only by the love of one's fellow-men can the problems of the day be solved.

Mr. Rockefeller said in the recent appeal of the public men of England for the exercise of a Christian spirit in dealing with the present-day difficulties he saw an appreciation of the importance of this problem.

WILL HAVE BIGGER ARMORY.

Squadron A Gets Coast Artillery Quarters Next Door.

The Armory Board has decided to turn over to Squadron A the armory that was built for the Eighth Coast Artillery Corps at Park Avenue and Ninety-fourth Street, which adjoins the Squadron armory at Ninety-fourth Street and Madison Avenue. Work will be started at once to throw the two armories into one, giving the squadron the largest armory in the United States. It will take in the entire block bounded by Ninety-fourth and Ninety-fifth Streets and Madison and Park Avenues.

The squadron will have the largest riding ring of any mounted organization—larger even than the Madison Square Garden arenas. The ring will be 180 feet by 300 feet.

STARTS NEW DRIVE TO CUT MEAT COST

Department of Justice Appeals for Voluntary Aid of Consuming Public.

URGES BUYING CHEAPER CUTS

Believes That This Practice Would Bring Down the Prices of All Commodities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—An appeal to the people for voluntary co-operation in an effort to bring down living costs was made tonight by the Department of Justice. The appeal aims at lowering the cost to the consumer of meats, as well as the elimination of waste, the theory being, it is understood, that a decrease in meat prices would have the effect, gradually, of bringing down prices of other food staples and essentials, such as clothing, without severe disturbance of market conditions.

The appeal, while aimed directly at the alleged practice of the consumer in demanding the high-priced cuts of meat, leaving the cheaper cuts a glut on the market, is in fact intended as an attack upon all forms of extravagance, with the hope that, having by voluntary effort taught themselves an object lesson in economy in meat buying, the great masses of consumers will realize the sanity of retrenchment in other directions and adopt the policy of "work and save."

Consumers are asked to return to the practice of buying and eating other than the so-called best cuts of meat, and it promises, in turn, to keep an eye on market conditions and bring prosecutions where it is found that dealers raise prices for cheaper cuts above what is considered a fair level. It is proposed to employ the fair price commissioners and the Federal agents of the Department of Justice in prosecutions of abuses. The announcement states that packers, wholesalers and retailers have promised to co-operate.

Doubt Efficiency of Committees.

Some persons who have taken exception to the policy adopted by Attorney General Palmer in reviving the Fair Price committees have asserted that these committees, in some instances, operated for the maintenance of high levels by keeping prices up to a point, at the expense of the consumer, where even inefficient retailers were able to make substantial profits. Had these fair price committees, on which were representatives of the retailers and other branches of trade, not been re-established, it has been asserted there might have been a drop in prices to the consumer.

The Department of Justice has maintained that its program has been the main factor in preventing greater price increases, which would have come in an open market without the restraining hand of the Fair Price committees.

"The housewife holds in her own hand the remedy for very high meat prices," says the department's appeal. "By turning away from the expensive to the inexpensive cuts she not only will lower her own meat bills, but will drive down the price of the choice cuts; furthermore, she will make it possible for meat to be merchandised more economically. With the present unequal demand for the various cuts at retail some meat is diverted to other than its natural uses and other meat is wasted. This loss is ultimately borne by the consumer.

Campaign of Education.

"The Department of Justice purposes, with the aid of the consumer, to correct this situation. Fair Price Commissioners in every State will be asked to direct and take part in the campaign of education. The matter will be brought to the attention of civic clubs and women's organizations. Retailers, wholesalers and packing companies throughout the country will be asked to appoint conference committees to co-operate with the Fair Price Commissioners. Recipes, charts and posters will be prepared and distributed widely. Specific weeks will be designated in various parts of the country for featuring the inexpensive cuts.

"The Department of Justice will keep a close eye on market conditions to make sure that the consumer receives good meat at low prices, and that, if the consumer turns to the cheaper cuts, no illicit profit shall be taken thereon. Equalization of demand should make for better merchandising and a lower level of prices. At the present time hindquarters of beef are selling for 10 cents a pound more than forequarters of beef. Many persons seem to want the meat which can be prepared with least trouble, regardless of price."

WORLDWIDE APPEAL FOR MIDDLE EUROPE

ASKS GOVERNMENTS TO AID

Food, Clothing and Transportation Expected from Them—Call for Doctors, Nurses and Supplies.

GENEVA, March 6.—Acting upon an appeal by Arthur J. Balfour as President of the Council of the League of Nations, the Board of Governors of the League of Red Cross Societies in session here today passed resolutions declaring for the extension of voluntary relief work among the starving and diseased populations of Central and Eastern Europe, provided that the essentials of food, clothing and transportation be previously assured these peoples through a Governmental action.

The resolution, which was introduced by Henry P. Davison, on behalf of the Board of Governors of the league, read as follows:

"We, the delegates forming the General Council of the league, assembled in conference, fully conscious of the unparalleled distress of the stricken districts of the world and the imperative need of immediate and comprehensive action, declare ourselves in full sympathy and accord with the suggestion made by Mr. Balfour.

"From our own survey and study within part of the affected districts, we must declare, however, our conviction that any voluntary aid, to become effective, can only follow the provision of such essentials as food, clothing and transportation, which must be given if the peoples are to live and be restored to a condition of self-support, the need of which is so vast that it cannot be given by voluntary organizations, but must be supplied by Governments.

"Therefore, be it resolved, That upon assurance from the League of Nations that food, clothing and transportation will be supplied by the governments, the League of Red Cross Societies shall at once formulate plans for the immediate extension of voluntary relief within the affected districts and shall appeal to the peoples of the world through the Red Cross organizations for doctors, nurses, other necessary personnel, medical supplies and such money as may in their judgment be required for operation, calling upon the various countries through the Red Cross organizations."

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

"If we are to have peace in the world," Mr. Davison said in supporting the resolution, "we must restore the well-being of the people sufficiently. This world-wide appeal will thrill the world. It is the first time such an appeal has been made, but if the Red Cross is to furnish the doctors and nurses and sufficient money to carry on the operations, the governments must supply the food, cloth and transportation."

Sir Arthur Stanley said that Mr. Davison had informed the Board of Directors of a contribution from the American Red Cross of $500,000 for investigation purposes, and that this money could be used in carrying out the preliminary studies in accordance with Mr. Balfour's request.

In his letter to Mr. Davison, urging action by the Red Cross organization Mr. Balfour pointed out that the ravages of disease had reached appalling proportions in Central Europe and that medical appliances and medical skill were lacking to cope with the horrors that had to be faced.

"The catastrophe is of such unexampled magnitude," continued Mr. Balfour's letter, "that no organization less powerful that the League of Red Cross Societies seems adequate to cope with it. To this body I, therefore, make appeal. The members of the League of Nations have agreed to encourage the Red Cross organizations, whose purposes are 'the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world.' There can surely never be an occasion calling more instantly for action.

"Though confident of the moral support of my colleagues, I have been unable formally to consult them or to speak with their authority. I shall, however, bring this matter before the council at the earliest possible moment. Meantime I venture to urge the League of Red Cross Societies to organize an effort worthy of its unique position for dealing with a calamity which, following hard on the war, seems almost worse than the war itself."

The enlargement of the Board of Governors from five members to fifteen, as authorized by the articles of organization, was voted by the Congress of the League of Red Cross Societies at today's session. Canada, Australia, Argentina, Brazil, Belgium, Sweden, Denmark, Serbia, Spain and Switzerland will each supply one of the ten new Governors.

SCHOOL LECTURES ON RUSSIA

Department of Education Speakers to Relate Personal Observations.

To meet the demand for first-hand knowledge of conditions in Russia, Ernest L. Crandall, Director of the Bureau of Public Lectures of the Department of Education, announced yesterday the selection of a number of men and women to speak of their experiences in Russia during its unsettled conditions. The list of speakers includes:

Robert Rosenbluth, ex-Captain of Engineers in the American Expeditionary Force, "Russian Fundamentals," at the Evander Childs High School, the Bronx, March 11.

Gregory Zilborg, Secretary to the Minister of Labor in the Kerensky Government, "The Background of Present Day Russia," Harlem Y. M. C. A., March 27.

Cleveland Rodgers, editor, "What Is Happening in Russia," Public School 132, West 182d Street and Wadsworth Avenue, March 16.

Mr. Crandall also stated that Alfred E. Klieforth, representative of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, had agreed to speak on "Russia's Struggle for Democracy," and that the dates of his lectures would soon be announced. Other lectures on Russia will be given by Mrs. Emilie W. Blackman, Professor J. Carter Troop, Edward Bromberg and Mme. M. L. Vojackova.

Six Battleships for Targets or Scrap

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—Six third-line battleships stationed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard are to be dismantled. They are the Maine, Alabama, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky and Kearsarge. None were ever actually in battle and were completed after the Spanish-American War. They will be sold as scrap or used as targets in gunnery practice. All were units of the fleet which sailed around the world in 1908.

FIGHT EXCESS PROFITS TAX.

Credit Men's Secretary on National Tour for Repealing Legislation.

A campaign to eliminate the excess profits tax has been started by the National Association of Credit Men, on the ground that its repeal would be the quickest way to reduce the cost of living. J. H. Tregoe, Secretary of the association, left yesterday on a tour of the country, during which he will address gatherings of business men on the necessity of immediate action by Congress to remove the burdens of the tax.

"The people of this country are now commencing to realize that the excess profits tax, which was heralded as bearing heavily upon the great corporations, is, in the last analysis, being paid for by the consumers on increased prices for everything they purchase," said Roy G Elliott, Chairman of the association's Committee on Federal Taxation. "If Congress will enact the necessary laws to change the present system of taxation, no one will escape taxation, but many who are now being taxed indirectly and unjustly through high prices of merchandise will be relieved of the burden of the high cost of living."

CEDRIC DAMAGE $100,000.

Passengers and Mail Transferred to Other Ships.

P. A. S. Franklin, President, and Frederic Toppin, a Vice President of the International Mercantile Marine Company, owner of the White Star Line, visited the Cedric yesterday at Pier 60, North River, to which the vessel was towed back Saturday afternoon after a loaded car float of the New York Central Railroad had swung under her stern and broken the rudder head. They heard the report of divers that everything was all right below the water line.

A new steel casting, to be sent from Liverpool, will be attached to the lower section of the rudder post by building a cofferdam around the stern, but it will mean a delay of one month at least. Mr. Toppin said he did not believe the liner would have to go into drydock. The cost of the repairs will be at least $100,000, and the withdrawal of the Cedric from service will mean a loss of at least $250,000 to the company.

Twenty-six first, one second and 150 third-class passengers and 4,000 sacks of mail were transferred to the Cunarder Carmania, which left at 11 o'clock Saturday night for Liverpool. The remaining fifty passengers in the third class will be taken on the Cunarder Imperator today, and the rest of the first and second class passengers will be sent on the Cunarder Royal George tomorrow for Southampton and the White Star liner Baltic, which sails Saturday for Liverpool.

The passengers of the American liner St. Paul, which had to put back to Halifax, N. S., because of boiler trouble, who were to have been taken by the Cedric, will go on the Scandinavian of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services Company.

To Owners of

Railroad Securities

The provisions of the law returning the railroads are so revolutionary in their application to the securities you own that their present market price is no more indicative of their now intrinsic worth, nor their future market price, than the 1914 price of clothing was of the price of clothing today.

Our weekly Service of March 9th contains, as one of its parts, an analysis of the effect of the law on future values of Railroad Securities, by the acknowledged leading authority of the United States.

This analysis is approximately one two-hundredth of the analyses, studies, money-saving and profit-enabling documents furnished to our subscribers at a yearly price of $240.

"Prices and Business in the Near Future," by Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell, the nation's authority on this subject, sent free on request.

FEARS PLAGUE HERE FROM LEVANT PORTS

Dr. H. S. Cumming, New Public Health Chief, Found Disease Rife in Overcrowded Cities.

TO KEEP SHARPER WATCH

British Shipping Men on Baltic See Poor Freight Outlook with Production Down.

Surgeon General H. S. Cumming returned on the White Star liner Baltic yesterday, to assume his duties as head of the United States Public Health Service. Dr. Cumming had been inspecting sanitary conditions at debarkation ports for our troops since the Summer of 1918. His wife returned with him.

The Surgeon General said he had been in every country except Bolshevist Russia and found all the cities crowded with people who had flocked in from the country. There was a menace of typhus and bubonic plague spreading to the United States from the Levant, if proper precautions were not taken at the ports of embarkation in the Mediterranean, he said. It would be necessary to increase the force of United States health officers abroad for that purpose, he thought.

"Sleeping sickness also has become epidemic in Vienna," Dr. Cumming said, "and a careful watch should be kept against admission of this disease, about which little is known as yet. There was a good deal of sickness in Smyrna, where the deaths averaged about 2 per cent. I wished very much to have made a trip into the interior to the ruins of Ephesus and other interesting places, but it was impossible, as the Greeks and Turks were fighting daily outside the city walls.

"Constantinople also has become infected with typhus, smallpox and bubonic plague. It is very crowded. Sanitary and health conditions in the Turkish capital are bad. In fact, all over Eastern Europe, including Poland, the countries have not yet got back to normal and their officials are not yet able to combat diseases that threaten the public health."

British shipping men on board were pessimistic over the freight outlook. They said there was more tonnage afloat than before August, 1914, and less cargoes to carry. Russia and Germany were out, and there were 9,000,000 men less in Europe to produce goods.

Newcomb Carlton, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, returned from a two months' vacation trip. He said he had been interested on the voyage in listening to wireless telephones, London talking at least 1,500 miles. Interference from a Swedish wireless station obscured the words. Mr. Carlton said radio service was improving, but never would replace cables for commercial and news business.

Captain William Finch of the Baltic, Commodore of the White Star fleet, said the northwest hurricane on Saturday was one of the toughest storms he ever had experienced.

THINK ZURICH BOMBING WAS BOLSHEVIST MOVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, March 7.—The attempt to blow up the American Consul's residence in Zurich appears to have been an act of vengeance by Germans or Russian Bolsheviki, either because the Consul was obliged recently to refuse passport vises for several persons who wanted to go to America, or because the American Government has expelled a shipload of Bolsheviki.

The Swiss police are endeavoring to ascertain whether the bomb used was similar to those brought to Zurich during the war by a German diplomatic courier to be sent to Italy for blowing up buildings there. The bomb certainly was not an amateur production, but was similar to those used during the war by belligerents. It was so powerful that it is a wonder the Consul's residence was not completely destroyed. As it was, the windows of neighboring houses were broken.

For some time past certain diplomats, consular representatives, and eleven leading foreign newspaper correspondents, including your own correspondent, have been receiving threatening letters.

Prince of Wales's Trip Delayed.

LONDON, March 7.—The departure of the Prince of Wales on his trip to Australia, which was set for Tuesday, has been postponed for a week because of an outbreak of influenza on board the battleship Renown, on which the Prince is to make the voyage. The Renown has been placed under quarantine at Portsmouth.

Balboa Statue for Panama.

MADRID, March 6.—The contract has been signed for a statue of Vasco Nunez Balboa, discoverer of the Pacific Ocean, work on which will be begun immediately by the sculptors Bennlliure and Blay. The statue will be erected in Panama two years hence, according to the present plans.

MAINE ADRIFT IN GALE WITH HER RUDDER GONE

LONDON, March 7.—The Atlantic Transport liner Maine sent a wireless message today from latitude 54.20, longitude 14.20, reporting that she was experiencing a hard gale and a heavy sea, with her rudder gone, and asking for assistance, Lloyd's Shipping Agency announced this afternoon.

The message declared, however, that the steamer was in no danger.

A message from Queenstown announced that a powerful tug had been sent to the assistance of the Maine.

BOSTON, March 7.—The Shipping Board steamer Guilford, Norfolk to Boston, which was reported disabled fifteen miles off Nantucket Shoals early today, was abandoned later and had become a menace to navigation tonight, according to wireless messages received here from the steamer Pocahontas, which stood by during the day.

The Captain and crew, who were taken aboard the Pocahontas this forenoon, were later transferred to the destroyer Dale and taken to Newport, R. I.

JAMAICANS OPPOSE SALE.

British Solidarity More Important Than Ever, Kingston Paper Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, March 7.—The statement that Premier Lloyd George will discuss the suggested sale of the British West Indies to America in the House of Commons on Monday has caused the liveliest interest here.

Jamaica thoroughly approves Bermuda's repudiation of the idea of transferring her to any other country. Commenting on this suggestion by Senator Kenyon, The Gleaner says that the solidarity of the empire is more important now than ever before and that British prestige is a matter of moment to every part of the empire.

NEW YORK FREE SCHOOL

THE FIRST PUBLIC SCHOOL BUILDING—1806

With their never-failing instinct for stability and progress, as early as 1818, the stockholders of the Merchants' Bank had presented 1,000 shares of Bank stock to the State of New York as a fund toward the support of the Public Schools. The Public School system of New York City started in 1805, with the founding of the Free School Society, and by 1806 the Society had built and opened "Free School No. 1," in Madison Street near Pearl. In 1808, the old State Arsenal was converted into "Free School No. 2." By 1825 there were six of these Public School buildings. The logical outcome of the progress and sound growth of the Merchants' Bank and its next-door neighbor, the Bank of the Manhattan Company, is their consolidation, on March 29th next, into one great Bank—with capital and surplus of about $20,000,000 and total resources of more than $200,000,000; with an office uptown on Union Square, and offices in Long Island City, Jamaica, and eleven other industrial centers of Queens County; and with greatly increased facilities in every department. Marking a new era of progressive service to customers, under the personal direction of the same Officers as before the consolidation.

Pending this formal consolidation with the Bank of the Manhattan Company on March 29th
The MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK
commencing March 1st, again uses the Corporate Title under which it was organized in 1803—

Advertising is an Investment

SALESMANSHIP IN ADVERTISING

Why does one salesman succeed where another fails?

Why does one advertisement produce more results than another?

The answer is the difference in Character, Truth, Convincement, Action.

These fundamentals may be elaborated upon, as they often are, but shorn of adjuncts they represent the backbone of sound merchandising and profitable advertising. When advertising of a right product is based on the essentials of good salesmanship, and salesmanship is based on the foundation of right advertising, the combination is irresistible.

Federal knowledge, experience, skill and versatility in putting salesmanship in advertising, and advertising in salesmanship, is one reason we say to advertisers—

"Put it up to men who know your market."

TO ALL WHO ORDER ART

Thirteenth of a series of Messages on the preparedness of Albert Frank & Co. to meet the new advertising demands of Finance and Business.

ALTHOUGH an ancient Japanese proverb has it that a picture is worth a thousand words, practically all art work haphazardly executed is futile. To us, real art means far more than pictures beautifully constructed. It is but a means to a visualized, finished result, in entire keeping with the aims of the advertiser.

Anyone can order art and engraving; but it takes long experience and close constant touch not only with art requirements, but with printing and engraving processes, with paper, electrotyping and stereotyping, to so plan art work that the most harmonious and compelling results are obtained. Even your simplest line drawing, at the hands of an artist who knows his technicalities, can be rendered exceptionally distinctive.

The relation of the Art Department of this Agency to its clients is one of the closest co-operation. We want you to feel that this Department is an adjunct in the preparation of good advertising.

PAISH NOW SUGGESTS $1,000,000,000 LOAN

PLANS MONEY TURNOVER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 7.—Sir James Paish's report on his mission to the United States on behalf of the Fight-the-Famine Council, published today, proposes a scheme whereby the American War Finance Corporation would create a credit of $1,000,000,000 to assist the purchase, by Europe, of American products. This credit, he says, could replace the reciprocal credit of $100,000,000 arranged between the bankers of England and America in 1914.

"If the proposed credit from the War Finance Corporation could be converted into a revolving credit for five years," says Paish, "it would enable Europe to obtain all the credit it required, so far as the United States could supply that credit, and until it was once again able to pay for all the produce and goods it needed, without the creation of any new credit.

"In order to convert a single credit into a revolving credit I would suggest that, after the produce is sold in Europe, the proceeds should be paid over on the continent to the Reparation Committee of the League of Nations and that that Committee should use the money for purposes of reconstruction, and should pay for the money by selling League of Nation bonds to the group of British bankers and American bankers in order to repay the credit. The American bankers would then sell them to the American investing public and the original credit from the War Finance Corporation would be discharged.

"As the bonds were sold to the public fresh credits could be granted to Europe and the operation repeated."

SING SING PROFITS GROW.

Prison Industries Yielded $60,000 in Six Months.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, March 7. — Sing Sing Prison's industries, according to prison attendants today, are sharing in the present day prosperity. A report just completed shows that the profits of the prison factories, where prisoners are employed, are increasing.

For the last six months of the fiscal year just closed the industries under Superintendent John Joyce yielded a profit of $60,000. During the previous fiscal year the profits averaged little over $8,000 a month. Most of the increase in profits was realized under former Warden Edward V. Brophy. Indications are that the profits will soar still higher under Major Lewis E. Lawes, the present Warden, the ensuing six months.

THE FACTS

BY A DECREE OF THE SUPREME COURT WE HAVE BEEN DIRECTED TO SELL, WITHOUT RESERVATION OR PROTECTION OF ANY KIND, THE HENRY ASTOR TRUST ESTATE.

IT CONSISTS of some 145 parcels of property in THE HEART OF NEW YORK CITY.

IT IS IN THIS SECTION that real estate is the most staple; most in demand; rents most readily; where property is most salable; where the greatest improvements are being made and are contemplated; the highest rents can be obtained; where the most conservative investor can buy without risk; and it is here where the greatest increase in value will take place.

ON MANY of the properties the leases expire on May 1st next; these properties are therefore a desirable purchase for those whose leases are expiring, and who have been unable to obtain suitable accommodations, at reasonable prices, for business purposes or dwellings.

FOR THE PAST SIX WEEKS we have advertised the sale of this property.

WE HAVE CALLED ATTENTION to the fact that real estate is still selling at the same values as four or five years ago. that it is still selling at the same prices as when sugar sold at 6 cents a pound, and everything else in proportion. In other words, real estate is selling on the old basis of value, while every other commodity has risen 100 to 300 per cent.

REAL ESTATE ALWAYS RISES in proportion to other commodities, and must do so now.

WE HAVE SHOWN that $100 to-day has only $50 in purchasing power in every commodity, but $100 today still buys $100 worth of real estate; that to duplicate present buildings would cost fifty to seventy-five per cent. more than they did four years ago.

WE HAVE CALLED ATTENTION to the fact that since 1907 real estate has been at bottom prices, but history and experience show that New York real estate always comes back and goes higher; we have shown what a wonderful future it has and that the heart of the great City of New York will be where the Henry Astor Trust Estate properties are located.

WE HAVE SHOWN how the Avenues and Streets on which the property is located will develop. How many of the Astor properties can be modernized at a small expense and made into business buildings or two and three room apartments.

WE HAVE SHOWN it is difficult to obtain large plots for improvement in this district; this sale offers the opportunity of obtaining plottage.

WE HAVE SHOWN how at previous auction sales this kind of property increased over what it sold for at auction and large profits were made.

WE HAVE CALLED ATTENTION to the economy, profit, peace of mind and comfort of owning your own home or business place.

WE HAVE SHOWN the benefit and wealth to be obtained by the purchase of land leased under the policy adopted by the Astors.

WE HAVE SHOWN that our financial conditions are sound and that good times for many years are ahead of us.

WE HAVE SHOWN that all indications and developments prove that the streets west of Broadway north of 42d Street will become some of the most valuable property in the City.

WE HAVE SHOWN how a steady income with absolute safety, with increases in the future and a chance for profit, can be had by purchasing these Astor leased lots.

WE HAVE SHOWN how this is the psychological time to buy real estate, particularly such well located lots as will be offered at this sale. How these properties are rented at low prices, under leases made many years ago, and the opportunity the purchaser will have to obtain double and triple the rents now being paid.

WE HAVE ENDEAVORED in every way to call attention to the opportunities for investors. The chance for builders, and the possibilities for speculators and operators buying and making sure and quick profits at this kind of a sale.

THE FACT IS, this is the largest sale of improved properties that has ever taken place in the City of New York. There has never been a sale in the past generations like it, and it is probable that there will be none in the future.

IN SPITE OF ALL THIS, THE LARGE AMOUNT OF PROPERTY TO BE SOLD MAKES IT IMPOSSIBLE THAT IT CAN ALL BE SOLD AT ONE AUCTION SALE WITHOUT A GREAT SACRIFICE IN PRICES.

THE SALE IS ABSOLUTE. IT IS A SUPREME COURT SALE, AND THE PROPERTY MUST BE SOLD, NO MATTER WHAT PRICE IT BRINGS—THE TERMS ARE EASY.

THEREFORE, THOSE WHO EXAMINE THE PROPERTY AND ATTEND THE SALE SHOULD HAVE A WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY OF PICKING UP BARGAINS, MAKING A GOOD INVESTMENT—OR A SURE PROFIT.

A WONDERFUL BARGAIN.
Two days ago I found a home 30 minutes out on the Lackawanna in a beautiful and restricted location. Its construction is wonderful, the architecture dignified and beautiful; a very moderate expenditure would make it a home to be coveted. The price, $10,000, seems like an error; it would require twice that sum to replace it. It is going to sell at once, and you must know your own mind on seeing it. Howard Goldsmith, 63 Park Row. 9396 Beekman.

ENLISTS MAGNETISM TO END FOOD DECAY

Dr. H. B. Cox Displays Specimens Brought from California in "Consavadors."

An invention to keep fresh indefinitely fruits and vegetables, without the use of ice or chemicals, was demonstrated here yesterday by its inventor, Dr. Harry Barringer Cox, whose work in the invention of the dry battery, the ground wireless and many other contrivances is known throughout this country and Europe. Dr. Cox, who brought the apparatus here from California without removing its contents, in order to test its efficacy on a moving train, asserted that the contrivance would prove to be one of the greatest factors in reducing the cost of living.

Magnetism, or as Dr. Cox phrased it, that still undeveloped force in the earth which makes a compass needle point north, is, according to the inventor, the force that is made use of in the apparatus. Its vitalizing, or preserving, powers he discovered by accident after thirty-five years of scientific research. His discovery, he asserted, opens up the field of earth magnetism so that it is likely to overshadow electricity in importance.

Dr. Cox displayed endorsements of the apparatus by many prominent persons. The United States Department of Agriculture, the California Fruit Growers' Association and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, which styled the contrivance as "the greatest discovery of the age," are among the endorsers. He asserted that the invention would prevent waste amounting to $1,000,000,000 a year.

In the room at the Hotel Pennsylvania where Dr. Cox demonstrated his apparatus the thermometer stood close to 80 degrees. In a corner was a box the size of a suitcase which held tin cans, about the size of a silk hat. A copper wire was attached to the radiator and run through the bottom of the box. This wire was attached to a "vitalizer" at the bottom of each tin box or 'consavador." He explained that the wire could be attached to a gas pipe, water pipe or any other metallic substance connected ultimately with earth or water.

The first cover he removed was one marked: "Orange, 1917." The orange was not only firm and as cool as if it had just been picked, but was covered with moisture. He then showed "last year's new potatoes," then old potatoes, carrots, and other vegetables. They were all firm, and varied in temperature. The odor, flavor and temperature of the products apparently were the same as on the day they were taken from the ground or tree.

"This connection," explained Dr. Cox, "harnesses the earth currents. The vital forces of the earth are transmitted through the 'vitalizer' to the products in the receptacle which are kept in as perfect a state as when on the vine or tree or in the earth.

"Vegetation is due to the action of radioactive rays of the sun, which are produced in the earth, and which through this new method may be transmitted, by metal connection, to any vessel and the products contained therein. The process going on in the vessel is exactly the same as that which goes on in the earth. I have invented nothing new. I have simply discovered one of nature's many wonderful and simple laws."

When Dr. Cox was asked to explain the varying temperatures and why the products remained "alive," he said that he, as a scientist, could no more do so than a physician could explain life and why a person's temperature remained at 98, regardless of the temperature of the room. He said he discovered that vegetables in the ground were dependent upon the actinic rays from the sun, those rays being invisible and having no light, and that his method was based on this fact. The sun, he says, makes a mysterious earth power vibrate.

Dr. Cox said the state of the atmosphere in which the vessels, connected with the earth, are kept has no effect upon the products. He said he had experimented with vessels kept in the hot sun and in cold places.

Dr. Cox said that on his trip from California he connected his wire to a metal pipe, which was connected by the steel car to the wheels of the train and thence to the earth. He said that ships could make the earth connection merely through the water.

"Within one year the containers will be available for everybody in every country," said Dr. Cox. "This invention is a discovery, and it is not going to be used as a means of getting a large fortune. It is not a question of getting the money, as I have already been offered all the backing necessary."

The only thing which Dr. Cox said he was not ready to describe was the "vitalizer" at the bottom of each container.

Court Frees Crap Shooters.

The usual Sunday morning batch of crap shooters were in court yesterday and, as usual, most of them were freed for lack of evidence. Magistrate Norman J. Marsh in the Tombs Court discharged forty-five men who had been arrested charged with gambling. The men declared that they had just been indulging in a little friendly pastime.

Heirs' Enigmas:
How thoughtful men safeguard their families' future

A MAN dies. The will is clean-cut. The estate is quickly settled. Financially, at least, the prospects of the family seem rosy.

A few months pass. Then—

The wife discovers that the option of convertibility contained in certain bonds must be exercised at once, if at all. She faces a puzzle. She seeks and secures a friend's advice. But is it sound advice? Perhaps! Perhaps not!

Next—an owner takes up his mortgage. The heir must re-invest the money.

An acquaintance offers a return of 10%. Is it safe? More advice is sought and given. Such advice is often unsound. It is sometimes tinctured by personal motives.

So it goes. The puzzles of the wife pile themselves on her perplexities. Under such conditions estates often dwindle. Heirs often come to want common necessities.

But you can easily remove from your family's future any such unhappy possibility, by establishing

A COLUMBIA TRUST FUND
for safeguarding the money you leave

The plan is this:

1. A Columbia Trust Fund is simply money set aside under the protection of the Columbia Trust Company and invested with the judgment of trained experts to provide periodical income for definite objects.
2. Life insurance or any other money may be used to form the Trust Fund. We are bound by a written agreement to carry out your wishes definitely and absolutely.
3. We will make investments of the Trust Fund for you in such securities as are lawful for Trustees, or, if you prefer, you can give us definite instructions to follow.
4. Income from the Trust Fund will be paid in installments to whom you wish and when you wish and in the amount you wish.

You can take up this matter at any one of our offices. The Vice-President or Manager in charge will be glad to talk to you personally and promptly. Of course, there is no obligation on your part.
